PANSIES.

We have 100,000 Steele's Greenhouse Specials. These plants are short and bunchy, not long drawn, and have heavy roots, and we are going to give every florist a chance to get some of these plants this month. I had 100,000 of these plants in bloom last spring and people came from fifty miles to see our pansies. There were a number of people here from St. Louis and they said they never saw as large and fine pansies in the Shaw's Botanical Garden. The picture of these pansies in bloom was sent to The Review, they showed 100,000 in bloom, 3-inches across, and there were 35 to 40 different colors.

Now I am going to ship 100,000 this month at $4.00 per 1000 and give you a chance to get some for spring that you can sell at 50c to 75c per doz. retail. These plants are prepaid by P. P. insured, and our packing is perfect. $4.00 per 1000 is all they will cost you at your greenhouse. Remember, our methods are new and that is why we can make these prices.

Tempt Customers to Buy

When your flowers are attractively displayed—in a McCRAY Florists' Refrigerator—where customers can see your variety of flowers, with all their freshness and delicate beauty preserved just as perfectly as when they were cut—the temptation to buy more flowers—of different kinds—is almost too strong to resist.

To the florist a McCRAY Florists' Refrigerator is a paying investment. In increasing your sales and saving the tremendous loss of profits due to waste and spoilage of your flowers, a McCRAY Refrigerator will pay for itself in a very short time.

McCRAY

are especially built to suit the florists' needs. The patented system of refrigeration, by which a constant current of cold dry air circulates through the refrigerator, keeps flowers perfectly—your flowers retain every bit of freshness and beauty.

McCRAY Florists' Refrigerators are built in a variety of sizes and styles—having ample compartments to accommodate long stem flowers—special sizes built for particular requirements, and any desired finish can be had.

—about that outside wall of yours!

Look at your eave plate—is there enough projection to shed water—not allowing it to run down over the sash in long, dirty streaks? Does the water on the inside of your house actually fall into the drip gutter? Are the bar brackets double bolted, and do they hold the bars on three sides, leaving the drip grooves free and uncovered at the end? Is every bracket cast with a glass stop, so that every light rests on a heavy zinc strip? Is the wall made of sash instead of bars nailed in? Is the eave ice-clearing? Is the sash absolutely nailless?

If you can answer "Yes" to all these questions, you have a true, straight wall—a perfect outside wall—your house is an AGMCO. How do we know? Easily—the AGMCO is the only greenhouse that measures up to these top-notch specifications. This may not mean much to you when the weather is mild and bright, but—there comes a day when the skies are gray—when the mercury hunts cover and the winds howl. Then, your outside wall compels attention, if it is not right.

Watch your outside wall during the next twelve weeks. If it isn't AGMCO you'll have to watch it and the stock near it. But—

You'll build* next spring and it will help you to study your plans and specifications through the zero weather.

So—drop us a line which tells us what you really want, and in a few days, figures, plans and specifications for your greenhouse will be sent you at

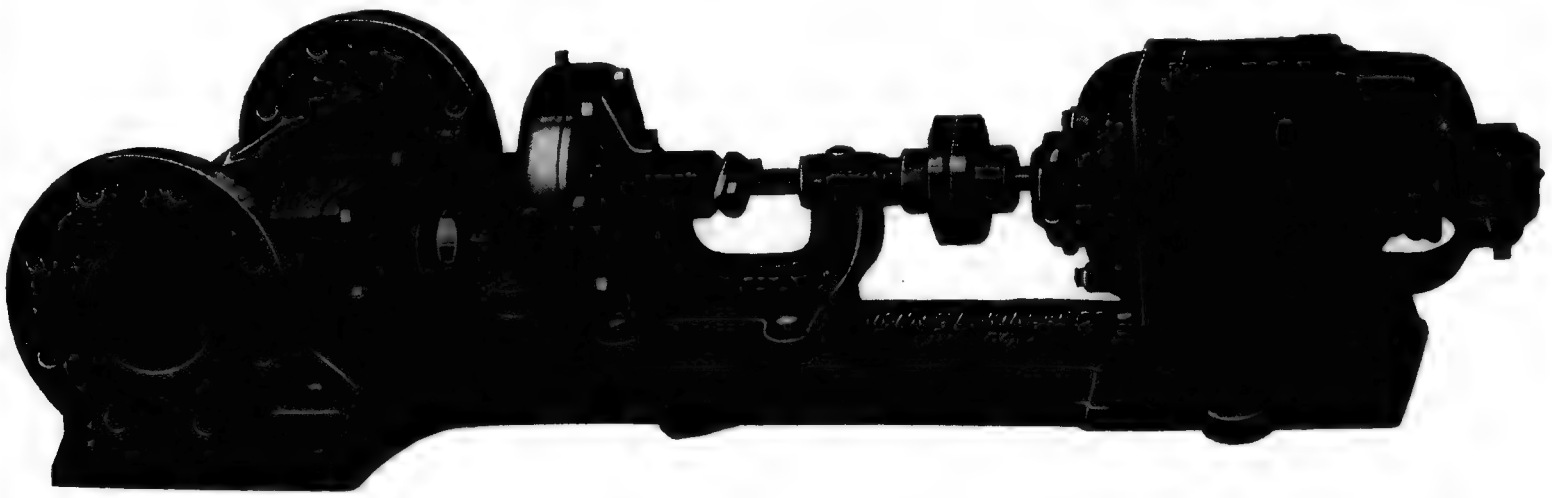
For Cranky Hot Water Systems



It is surprising what a lot of hot water heating systems are not operating properly. This is not always caused by lack of knowledge of heating installation, but sometimes the nature of the circumstances makes it necessary to run the pipes on the level or nearly so. In cases of this kind, as well as when the installation is poor, our hot water circulator solves all the trouble.

It is really wonderful how this circulator will speed up the circulation, heating up the greenhouses in a fraction of the time required by ordinary firing. You get your heat into the greenhouses when you want it, and don't waste a lot of coal getting up a big temperature on your boiler to force the water around the pipes.

It is not expensive to run this circulator, as it is only used for an hour or so in the morning and evening or when a sudden cold spell comes up.

You can run the circulator by steam, gasoline engine or electric motor, but the electric motor is the simplest and most satisfactory.

Just drop us a line if you are having any trouble and we will be pleased to give you our advice.

RUTH BAUR

The best way to judge whether a carnation will prove profitable to grow, is to see it growing on the benches. If the originator is making it pay, you can likely do likewise. We invite, we urge every grower who is thinking of buying Carnation Ruth Baur, to come and inspect this variety closely. You will be pleased with its freedom in growth and bloom, to say nothing of its beautiful color. Come any time.

We will begin dissemination in December, 1919, but if you wait in placing your order until you are ready for the cuttings, you will probably have to wait for late delivery. Get your order in early.

THE FLORISTS' REVIEW

COUNTING COST IS COINING CASH

How much does it cost to produce, or sell a flower? This is a question few florists can answer, but we must know our costs if we are to continue to succeed. Here are some thoughts on the subject by the president of the Illinois Association of Public Accountants.

BY HODGSON JOLLY, C. P. A.

IT was not so long ago that had a laundryman been asked the simple question, "How much does it cost you to wash a collar?" he would have replied, "How should I know?" But he knows now. The National Association of Laundrymen took up the matter of cost accounting for its members; a system was devised by an expert accountant and that system is being used by substantially all the laundrymen of the country. Asked now how much it costs to wash a pair of socks, he will turn to his books and give figures that extend a considerable distance to the right of the decimal point.

Ask any florist today how much it costs to produce a flower, if he be a grower, or how much it costs to sell a dollar's worth of flowers, if he be a retailer or wholesaler, and the reply in 999 cases out of 1,000 will be, "How should I know?" But he is going to find out; he must if he wants to stay in business.

At St. Louis last August President Charles H. Totty called the attention of the S. A. F. convention to this subject. Mr. Totty's paper caused the convention to authorize a committee to study the subject and report at the 1919 meeting at Detroit.

Only a few weeks ago Otto H. Amling read a paper on the cost of producing flowers before the Chicago Florists' Club. It was an exhaustive study of the subject as related to the operation of a greenhouse range. It was printed in The Review for November 14.

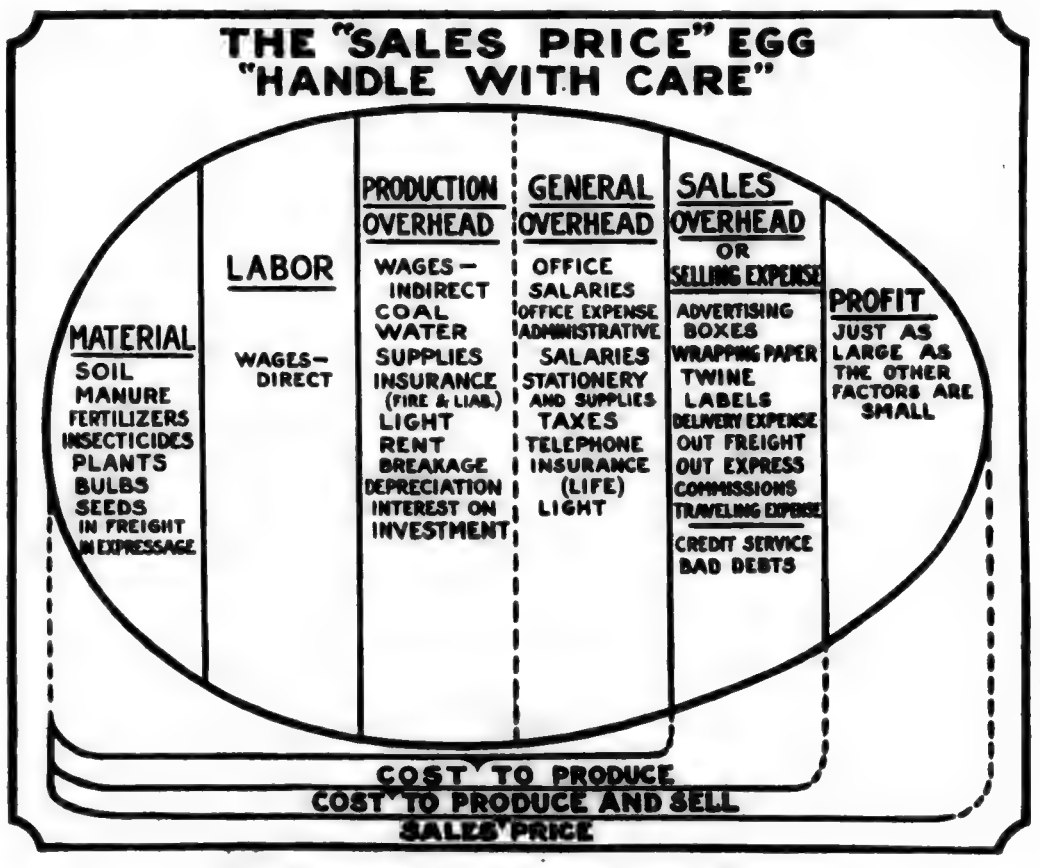
System First.

Let me say here that florists ought not to bother with the important matter of costs in their establishments until they have at least provided themselves with proper, reasonably accurate and scientific general accounting systems, for every cost system that is going to effect proper results should be worked through the general books and not independent of them. Therefore, it follows that you can not build a proper cost system on an improper set of books.

Knowing your costs amounts to knowing what you are doing. If you don't know what you are doing, you cannot make proper profits. Don't make the mistake of overemphasizing the "how" to do—get next to the "why." It is one thing to follow blindfolded a set of instructions that will enable you to arrive at your costs, but it is a whole lot more important to understand the "why" of these instructions and of the various forms and methods employed. If you don't know the "why," you certainly cannot properly appreciate the real purposes of costs and cost accounting.

Factors of Cost.

Final cost of production, like everything else, is made up of component factors, and when you get these factors right and in the right place your total costs won't be so hard to determine.



There are, after all, only two elements in the cost of production—material and labor, and in the last analysis the commonly called "expense" is nothing more or less than material and labor, or perhaps only labor.

Labor, wages or salary is conpensation for effort, either physical or mental, on something physical or on something in principle, and just as this effort is directly or indirectly applied to your product is the determining factor as to whether this kind of expense goes into your prime cost of production or into your overhead.

At this point it might be well to interpolate that many people look to their books for nothing more than general financial data, whereas, that is only one kind of information that should be supplied. On this point such a well known business man as W. D. Simmons, president of the Simmons Hardware Co., St. Louis, says: "Having books give information in regard to receivables and payables is only a minor function of proper accounting."

On the point of the "why" being more important than the "how" the well known efficiency pioneer, Harrington Emerson, says: "Principles are made effective through methods. Records are a principle; accounting is one form of records; costs are a part of accounting. Production costs are only a sub-part of all costs."

Also on this point it would be in order to quote a business man in your own trade, Mr. Amling, who, in his paper before your club said: "I am confident that a thorough knowledge of what it costs to produce each flower today will open the eyes of many men in the flower business and lead them to realize that each flower has a value."

The Elements of Cost in the Florists' Business.

Few Know Costs.

In regard to the matter of the percentage of business men who ordinarily would be called smart, Professor William James, the famous psychologist, says: "The average individual develops less than ten per cent of his brain cells." And this fact seems to coincide with the percentage of manufacturing concerns in the United States that know their costs. The small percentage of manufacturers knowing their costs in definite form and shape is the outcome of the fact that for years back the American manufacturer had it practically his own way as regards the price he charged for his product, and when his costs mounted up so as to make the margin of profit too small, he merely went out and boosted his sales price. Competition, however, stepped in and, as is always the result, the margin of profit on sales began to decrease. The manufacturer, therefore, had to look to his cost of production, instead of to his sales price, and was gradually forced to realize the importance and necessity of proper production costs.

"The Sales Price Egg."

In this connection, and perhaps more particularly to draw attention to the fact that your margin of profit is dependent on your ability to keep down the price of your production and selling costs, I have gotten up a chart, entitled "The Sales Price Egg," which is shown in the accompanying illustration. You will notice in the chart that the demarcation line between the production overhead and the general overhead is a dotted line. This is intended to bring out the point that many manufacturers and producers lump the production and general overhead together, which, though not scientifically correct, is so shown in the chart. Again, in the sales overhead, or, as it is usually called, "selling expense," there are included "bad debts" and "credit service," but these, of course, might be considered by some as belonging more to the "general overhead" than to the "sales overhead." However, there is no contention on my part that what is included is the last say-so in what can or should be included under the different division, but each item is put in as being indicative of what might or should be in the different divisions.

The science of cost-finding or cost-accounting is segregating the different material, labor and expense details directly or indirectly into their proper classifications of production and selling, and combining them thereafter in accordance with the actual production facts into total production and selling costs.

Segregating the Costs.

It can be here noted that I have segregated the selling overhead or expense apart and distinct from the production and general overheads and this is as it should be, because if you are going to get the proper control, both physical and human, that you should get from your costs, you should segregate them, and the steps in proper costs are:

First. Get your prime cost to produce.

Second. Add your additional cost to finished production, and to the total of these—

Third. Add your selling costs or selling expense.

In regard to the experience of other trades in the matter of standardized cost systems, a frequent cause of dissatisfaction has been the attempt on the part of so many of the members of these different trade associations to apply the so-called "standard system" without modification or alteration to their own particular businesses. No cost system, even though gotten up specifically for a certain trade and even though worthy of the term "excellent," is so comprehensive and perfect as to be applicable without change or modification to every condition and requirement of the different businesses in that trade. Every cost system must be properly applied and molded to the conditions and requirements of the individual businesses, in order to effect the proper purposes and results. This has been borne out conclusively in the experience of the printers, clothiers, bakers, foundrymen and others. Horse sense and judgment are necessary in addition to technical knowledge in the application and molding of any standard system, otherwise little or no good and perhaps even harm will result.

When It Is Worth While.

Another point of importance is the determination of how far to go in your cost-finding. Volume of production usually coincides with volume of sales and determines to a great extent whether or not cost-finding on any phase of production or on any item of production is worth while. It is logical that if it costs more in clerk and other hire and expense to ascertain what the article or unit costs to produce, there is no use or sense in determining its cost.

All costs and all in costs are material and labor, and these are either direct or indirect to production.

Direct material goes to prime cost of product.

Direct labor goes to prime cost of product.

Indirect material goes to overhead cost of product.

Indirect labor goes to overhead cost of product.

The purpose of costs or cost-finding is control, not only of the factors in costs and thereby of profits, but also of wastes of time, material and human energy. Here one efficiency expert says: "If we know what standard costs ought to be and what actual costs are, we can determine efficiencies." And this phase of cost-finding should never be lost sight of. Your friend, Mr. Amling, said pertinently in his paper that "it costs money to grow every inch of stem on a rose," and that suggests a little thought on the subject of the units of cost.

How to Determine Selling Price.

Units of cost are usually determined with reference to the basis on which the finished product is sold, as for instance: (a) per flower; (aa) per number of flowers; (b) per plant (non-flowering); (bb) per number of plants; (c) on other base, as per leaves, as with palms, etc.

This matter of unit, of course, opens the field for an interesting and elaborate discussion as to the basis for determining the cost, and many articles could be written on that phase of the subject alone. I understand that the square foot of bench space cost, in the case of growers, has, more or less, been tentatively accepted as the proper one, but a final decision could only be reached in such a matter by a careful and common sense analysis of the factors in the case. Although I have not had the time to devote to this interesting and important phase of the question of costs in the florists' trade, I would suggest that there may possibly be others just as sane and practical as the one mentioned.

Separate Types of Accounting.

In closing, it would be my suggestion, if the florists as a trade association intend going further into this matter of production costs, that thought be given to the building up of separate types of standardized cost systems for the producer, wholesaler and retailer. For it should not be thought that there can be only one cost system and that for the producer. Every business has its costs, and the type of proper cost system for the grower would necessarily have considerable detail in it that would be of no interest and not applicable to the wholesaler and retailer, and vice versa.

Another equally important matter that ought to be considered by the florists would be the terminology to be used, or in other words, the establishment of the proper names for every production and overhead cost item, as much useless discussion results from the misunderstanding between people arising out of the use of or abuse of the proper terms or names.

PROPAGATION OF CUTTINGS.

Please tell me how to propagate weeping lantanas, plumbagos, pot hibiscus and jasmines. I can root a great many other plants, but fail with these.

E. R. B.—Tex.

Lantanas, Plumbago capensis and rosea, hibiscus and jasmines all propagate easily from soft-wood cuttings, especially such as are taken off with a heel, if the cuttings are inserted in a cutting bench where there is a good, steady bottom heat. The jasmines, hibiscus and plumbago may be rooted also from more mature wood, but such cuttings are much slower in rooting. Given a good bottom heat and care in keeping the cuttings moist, you should have no trouble in rooting any of the four plants named. C. W.

TIM'S TIMELY TIP.

T. E. Waters, manager of the supply department of the Poehlmann Bros. Co., Chicago, was listening to the complaint of a customer:

"I have been using a lot of artificial flowers since the real ones became so scarce, and I don't like to," the customer was telling "Tim."

"What's the reason?"

"They last too long."

"Put a time bomb in each one," was Tim's timely tip.

PLANT IMPORTS PROHIBITED

OFFICIAL NOTICE IS OUT.

Trade's Protest Disregarded.

In spite of the protest of the Society of American Florists at the special hearing at Washington October 18, the Federal Horticultural Board has ordered the general quarantine against imports as outlined in the tentative regulations put out some months ago. These regulations were sent to the trade with the invitation to present objections and at the hearing October 18 many inconsistencies were pointed out and unnecessary hardships indicated, but all these have been ignored—the importation of plants of all kinds is ordered to cease June 1.

Fear Plant Pests?

The trade has known that some sort of quarantine was inevitable, but to a florist it seems so far fetched to fear injury to American agriculture and arboriculture through imports of azaleas, palms, rose plants, araucarias, gladiolus bulbs, etc., that some modification of the proposed quarantine was expected. The official notice, called Quarantine No. 37, which became available this week, shows no material change from the drastic quarantine first proposed.

Here is the official order:

Text of Order.

"The fact has been determined by the Secretary of Agriculture, and notice is hereby given, that there exist in Europe, Asia, Africa, Mexico, Central and South America, and other foreign countries and localities, certain injurious insects and fungous diseases new to and not heretofore widely distributed within and throughout the United States, which affect and are carried by nursery stock and other plants and seeds, the words 'nursery stock and other plants and seeds' including, wherever used in this notice and the rules and regulations supplemental hereto, field-grown florists' stock, trees, shrubs, vines, cuttings, grafts, scions, buds, fruit pits and other seeds of fruit and ornamental trees or shrubs, also field, vegetable, and flower seeds, bedding plants, and other herbaceous plants, bulbs, and roots, and other plants and plant products for, or capable of, propagation.

"Now, therefore, I, D. F. Houston, Secretary of Agriculture, under the authority conferred by the act of Congress approved August 20, 1912 (37 Stat., 315), do hereby declare that it is necessary, in order to prevent the further introduction into the United States of injurious insect pests and fungous diseases, to forbid, except as provided in the rules and regulations supplemental hereto, the importation into the United States of nursery stock and other plants and seeds from the foreign countries and localities named and from any other foreign locality or country.

June 1 the Limit.

"On and after June 1, 1919, and until further notice, by virtue of said act of Congress approved August 20, 1912, the importation of nursery stock and other plants and seeds from the above named and all other foreign countries and localities, except as provided in the rules and regulations supplemental hereto, is prohibited.

"This quarantine shall not apply to nursery stock and other plants and seeds covered by special quarantines and other restrictive orders now in force . . . nor to the importation by the United States Department of Agriculture of nursery stock and other plants and seeds for experimental or scientific purposes."

This was signed by the Secretary of Agriculture, giving it the force of law, November 18, 1918, effective June 1, 1919.

Certification Required.

The regulations governing the entry of the classes of plants listed to be admitted are similar to those hitherto in force and take into account the classification of countries into (1) those maintaining inspection and certification of nursery stock in accordance with the requirements of the plant quarantine act, and (2) countries which have not made provision for such compliance with the act.

The new feature of the regulations, which were published in The Review for October 24 and are now available in pamphlet form, is the one providing for disinfection when required by the U. S. inspector. The paragraph is as follows:

Disinfection.

"Nursery stock and other plants and seeds [permitted to be] imported shall be subject as a condition of entry, to such disinfection as shall be required by the inspector of the Department of Agriculture. When disinfection is required, the nursery stock and other plants and seeds involved will be delivered to the permittee for disinfection upon the filing with the collector of customs of a bond in the amount of $5,000, or in an amount equal to the invoice value if such value be less than $5,000 with approved sureties, the condition of which shall be that the nursery stock and other plants and seeds shall be disinfected under the supervision of an inspector of the Department of Agriculture; that no case or other container thereof shall be broken, opened or removed from the port of entry unless and until a written notice is given to such collector by an inspector of the Department of Agriculture that the nursery stock and other plants and seeds have been properly disinfected; and that the importation shall be redelivered to the collector of customs within forty days from arrival at the port of entry."

To Get Permits.

Only fruits and seeds are to be allowed to come in without license; everything else, if admitted at all, must needs have a permit for each shipment. The method of obtaining permits is prescribed as follows:

"Persons contemplating the importation of nursery stock and other plants and seeds the entry of which is permitted * * * shall first make application to the Federal Horticultural Board for a per-

THESE ONLY MAY ENTER

Under Quarantine No. 37, of the Federal Horticultural Board, effective June 1, 1919, these, and these only, of bulbs and plants, including florists' and nursery stock originating in other countries, will be admitted to the United States:

Nursery stock and other plants and seeds for which permit is not required:

The following classes of nursery stock and other plants and seeds, not including, however, the particular nursery stock and other plants and seeds * * * * which are governed by special quarantines and other restrictive orders now in force, nor such as may hereafter be made the subject of special quarantines, may be imported without permit or other compliance with these regulations:

(1) Fruits, vegetables, cereals, and other plant products imported for medicinal, food, or manufacturing purposes.
(2) Field, vegetable, and flower seeds.

Nursery stock and other plants and seeds for which permit is required:

Importations of nursery stock and other plants and seeds specified in this regulation, from countries not maintaining inspection, may be made under permit upon compliance with these regulations in limited quantities for experimental purposes only, but this limitation shall not apply to tree seeds.

mit, stating in the application the exact designation of the nursery stock and other plants and seeds to be imported, the name and address of the exporter, the country and locality where grown, the port of entry, and the name and address of the importer in the United States to whom the permit should be sent.

"Application for permits to import made in advance of the proposed shipments, but if, through no fault of the importer, a shipment should arrive before a permit is received the importation will be held in customs custody at the risk and expense of the importer for a period not exceeding twenty days pending the receipt of the permit.

"Applications may be made by telegraph, in which case the information required above must be given.

"Permits are not required for nursery stock and other plants and seeds, not under quarantine or regulation, entering the United States for immediate transportation in bond to foreign countries.

Applications for permits to import nursery stock and other plants and seeds from countries which do not maintain inspection must contain a definite statement of the quantity to be imported."

THE WAR BOARD'S BAN

MAY IMPORT NOW.

War Board Raises Its Embargo.

Following announcement of its declaration of policy the War Trade Board has issued an order (W. T. B. R. 432) removing the restrictions on the imports of plants, trees, shrubs, vines and bulbs (group 61 of the first restriction list). Licenses still will be required, but the board states these will be issued freely when the applications are "otherwise in order;" that is, when the merchandise still is in the country of origin and the importer has a clean record with the board.

How many lily bulbs there are in Japan in condition to export is a question. If the bulbs were packed but not placed in cold storage they probably are useless, but if they were left in the curing racks they may still be in first-class condition. At any rate, the field is open.

Plants May Come.

The statement that the War Trade Board will issue import licenses without restriction leaves the Holland, English and French nursery stock free to come until June 1, when the new absolute quarantine goes into effect. It probably will be taken advantage of to the greatest possible extent, as there is need for practically all kinds of stock.

THOSE LILY BULBS IN CANADA.

Slim Chance to Bring Here.

It is current talk in the trade that there are in Canada considerable quantities of lily bulbs of the 1918 crop, brought from Japan under conditions which arose out of the confusion connected with administering the vast amount of war detail. The first news of such shipments was by cable from a Yokohama dealer and was specific as to quantities and consignees. Other reports are less precise and all statements meet with denials and contradictions on the part of those concerned.

Some Permits Issued.

It is officially admitted by the Canadian government that certain permits were issued by mistake, but it is stated they were canceled as soon as the errors were discovered. How many bulbs had been shipped prior to the cancellation of the permits no one in this country seems to know; report has it that it may be 500,000, but this is discredited by bulb dealers not interested except as competitors. It may be that the quantity now in storage in Canada is negligible and can be readily absorbed there, although the supposition is that the intention is to send the bulbs, if in quantity, to the United States at the first opportunity.

That the War Trade Board has taken cognizance of the situation, which has been brought to its attention, is shown by the following statement of policy issued last week:

The Editor is pleased when a Reader presents his ideas on any subject treated in

The Florists' Review

As experience is the best teacher, so do we learn fastest by an exchange of experiences. Many valuable points are brought out by discussion.

Good penmanship, spelling and grammar, though desirable, are not necessary. Write as you would talk when doing your best.

WE SHALL BE GLAD TO HEAR FROM YOU

Will Protect Traders.

"The War Trade Board announces in a new ruling that the following policy has been determined upon in the relaxation of restrictions on imports:

"All announcements of relaxations will relate only to shipments made from the country of origin after the date of the announcement and will not validate in any manner shipments made prior to such time in violation of the import restrictions.

"The War Trade Board will take up separately on its merits each case of shipment made in violation of the regulations and will permit entry, if entry is permitted at all, only under such conditions as will, according to the particular circumstances of each case, do justice to importers who have obeyed the regulations, by preventing those who have not from obtaining any discriminatory advantage as a result of such shipments.

Goods in Canada.

"In regard to large shipments of restricted articles which have been made to Canada during the time the restrictions were effective, the War Trade Board announces that the relaxations will not authorize the licensing of such shipments. The policy will be against licensing such shipments until the lapse of a very considerable interval after the lifting of the restriction upon importation from the country of origin. The purpose is to allow ample time to importers, who have obeyed both the letter and spirit of the regulations, to complete shipments from the country of origin before any consideration is given those who attempted to circumvent the restrictions by making shipments to Canada.

"It is the purpose of the War Trade Board throughout to prevent the accrual of any unfair advantage to importers who have disregarded either the letter or the spirit of the regulations, over those importers who have coöperated patriotically with the War Trade Board by yielding scrupulous obedience to the import restrictions and assisting in accomplishing the objects of the restrictions."

HOLLAND STOCK COMING.

Exportation from Holland to the United States of nursery stock will be resumed at once. In fact, the Nieuw Amsterdam, of the Holland-America line, is expected to arrive at New York within a short time, bringing a number of shipments of nursery stock.

This information is contained in a letter from the freight department of the New York office of the Holland-America line received by F. J. Grootendorst & Sons, nurserymen, of Boskoop, Holland, at their New York office. The letter says:

With reference to your favor of the twenty-second, we now beg to inform you that, according to a cable received from our home office, S. S. Nieuw Amsterdam—which steamer is supposed to be sailing from Rotterdam one of these days—will bring various shipments of nursery stock from Holland, which indicates that this commodity can again be brought over and which we hope will make it possible for you to import considerable shipments in the near future.

May 31 is the latest date on which Holland nursery stock will be admitted to America unless the protest proves too strong for the federal agency which has ordered the quarantine.

CHRISTMAS WEATHER.

Dark, rainy weather that prevailed over the country east of the Rocky mountains from the Great Lakes region to the Gulf of Mexico for several days previous to Christmas turned into snow December 24 and developed into a small blizzard. As a result, the day before the holiday—the day on which the Christmas sales usually reach their height—was a bad one for the shoppers. The streets in Chicago were covered with slush, while the wind and wet snow made it decidedly uncomfortable for the buyers to get about. The same conditions, in greater or lesser degree, obtained in the section of the United States where the storm raged, the U. S. Weather Forecaster at Chicago said.

Despite the handicap of the weather, business in Chicago was excellent. The Christmas shoppers braved the storm and the downtown district never before saw such crowds, department store officials reported. Buying was heavy, or at least the returns in cash were, because of the unusually high prices. Everyone appeared to have money to spend and spent it, and the retail stores of Chicago were well cleaned up of everything salable in the cut flower, plant and supply line.

The weather, however, made deliveries more difficult and it taxed the capacities of the delivery forces to get the orders to their destinations on time. The trade in the larger cities through the northern and central sections of the country met about the same conditions as prevailed in Chicago, where more than four inches of snow fell before noon December 24.

The forecast for Christmas day was fair, with light snow flurries and a temperature of about 12 degrees above zero.

WINTERING FOXGLOVES.

Will you kindly give information as to winter treatment of foxgloves? Should the tops be cut off? My plants are extremely heavy for young plants. Last year all of them rotted.

E. N. T.—Ill.

I presume you are planning to winter your foxgloves outdoors, in which case there should be no covering until the ground has frozen hard, when a coating of dry leaves, pine needles or meadow hay can be given, just sufficient to cover the foliage. The mulch must be held in position and there is no better way to do this than to apply a scattering of rotted manure over it. This is better than boards, brush or cornstalks. Plants must be on well drained ground to winter successfully and the foliage should not be cut back at all. If your climate is severe, it would be better to lift the plants and store them in coldframes, covering them with dry leaves, and later place tight sashes over them. The leaves must be kept dry and air given on all mild days to prevent heating and sweating. Plants thus protected should winter perfectly. Foxgloves are more damaged by dampness than by cold. Too much mulch, when it becomes wet and is packed down by snow, will ruin them more quickly than anything else. C. W.

INSECTICIDE BOARD'S WORK.

Greater food production having stimulated the manufacture of many new insecticide and fungicide preparations, the Insecticide and Fungicide Board, U. S. Department of Agriculture, has been increasing its efforts to protect the farmer, the fruit grower, the market gardener and the stock and poultry farmer against fraud in connection with such preparations.

WHO'S WHO IN THE TRADE—AND WHY

THOMAS McGEE.

HEREWITH is presented a portrait of Thomas McGee, of McGee & Davis, proprietors of the Scottwood Greenhouses, Toledo, O., taken in Mr. McGee's favorite environment—his greenhouses. Mr. McGee has been in the florists' business a great many years, starting when he was 19 years of age with Robert Craig, Philadelphia. Later he heeded Horace Greeley's advice to "go west, young man," and went to L. L. May & Co., St. Paul. In 1893 Mr. McGee removed to Toledo, where he acquired a piece of property 75x221 feet and built a greenhouse. Later he took Mr. Davis into partnership and they purchased property on either side of the original place and now have a modern range, which is a most interesting place for any florist to visit, as it is filled with exceptionally well grown stock. One of the features of the establishment is that not a pound of ice is used, the cooling room being in the basement. Close attention to details is Mr. McGee's recipe for success. An idea of his personality may be gained from the fact that he is widely known as "Uncle Tom."

The record for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1918, shows that 132 cases of alleged violations of interstate law were reported to the solicitor of the department, with recommendations that the facts be transmitted to the attorney general in order to institute criminal action or seizure proceedings. By correspondence with the manufacturer 195 cases involving technical or non-flagrant violations were disposed of. Action was taken by the board also to place in abeyance 726 samples of insecticides and fungicides, which, upon examination and test, were found not adulterated or misbranded, or were from shipments of the same goods made prior to shipments for which the manufacturer had been convicted, the manufacturer after citation conforming to the requirements of the law.

Fifty-five cases were awaiting preliminary hearings or before the board for final action June 30, 1918; 217 were held in temporary abeyance pending the receipt of further information, the outcome of prosecutions based on the same product, or correspondence with the manufacturers, and 325 samples were undergoing analysis and test. The inspectors and sample collectors of the board, operating throughout the United States, collected 748 samples during the year.

Springfield, O.—Fire believed to have originated from the explosion of a boiler damaged the greenhouses of John Graeber's Sons December 10 to an extent not yet estimated. The nearest hydrant is a quarter of a mile distant and the fire had gained considerable headway before the firemen were able to lay enough hose to combat it.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

LILACS.

It hardly pays to start many deciduous flowering shrubs before the middle or end of January, but with lilacs it is different. A few plants can be started now at any time in a warm, moist house. Spray the plants two or three times daily. You will soon see the buds swelling. It is best to cease spraying as the flower heads show. Plants can be forced successfully in complete darkness, but, of course, only the flowers in a cut state are of any value, and these are much lacking in substance and odor in comparison with those produced in the light. There is no better early-forcing white lilac than Marie Legraye, with Mme. Lemoine as a double white. Charles X, Michel Buchner and L. Spaeth are finely colored sorts for early forcing.

BULBOUS PLANTS.

Dutch bulbs were so late in arriving last fall that none were available at Christmas this year and it will be late January before any considerable number are on the market. It is poor policy to start forcing any which are not sufficiently rooted or have not made a couple of inches of growth. Tulips, in order to give them good stems, should be grown and flowered practically in the dark. Narcissi can have the light all the time, but it is necessary to see that hyacinths get a good start. House a batch of bulbous plants weekly. They can stand below one of your benches for a time, but do not leave them there long enough to become drawn. It will be necessary to advance sharply the wholesale prices of bulbous flowers in order that growers of them may break even.

SHOW PELARGONIUMS.

Now that we are having settled cold weather, the show pelargoniums make excellent growth. They enjoy a cool house as much as schizanthus, calceolarias and cinerarias. Pinch the tops out of the stronger shoots and, if you are short of stock, these tops can go into the propagating bench. Give repottings before the roots become matted. Pelargoniums enjoy a compost containing three parts of fibrous loam and one part of well rooted cow manure. If the loam is retentive, some sharp sand will give it porosity. The earlier flowering pelargoniums of the Easter Greeting type should be in fine condition next Easter, while a few of the older varieties, if not pinched too late, should be available also. Do not let green aphis ruin your plants. Aphis loves show pelargoniums and to insure perfect immunity from their attack, fumigate once a week.

START SOME EARLY ROSES.

It is not necessary to start the pot roses for Easter just yet, but there is sale for them some weeks ahead of that date. If you are fortunate enough to have grown some of your plants in pots right through the summer and rested them in the fall, you will find them decidedly superior to the field-grown plants and to fall-potted plants for early crops. Tausendschoen makes a splendid early forcer and all the polyantha or baby rambler family can be depended upon. Cut out dead or weak wood and bend over strong shoots. Start the roses cool and later raise the temperature to 58 to 60 degrees at night, cooling off somewhat when the flowers start to show color.

PERENNIAL SEEDS.

Everything points to an immense increase in the sale of trees, shrubs, roses and hardy perennials next season, and country florists should be prepared to handle at least some of the demand which is surely coming. Perhaps you omitted saving the perennial seeds last summer which you ought to have started by this time, thinking, naturally, that the war might last for years and that sales would be problematical. The ending of the war has put an entirely different complexion on the outlook for the hardy plant trade. These notes are to remind you that you can sow many seeds now under glass and have nice little sturdy plants to line out in the field or nursery next spring. Aquilegias, dianthus, Shasta daisies, delphiniums, lupines, lychnis, stokesia and many other useful perennials can be started now. Use a light soil, cover the seeds sparingly, water carefully, and you are bound to get an abundance of seedlings, and do not forget that if you are short on pansies, violas and forget-me-nots, they also can be sown now and will flower a little later than the August sown seedlings.

CANTERBURY BELLS.

Plants of Canterbury bells potted up in the fall which have been stored since the coming of cold weather in a cold frame or cellar, can now be started in a cool house to flower them for Easter. Ordinarily these plants are of inferior quality so early in the season as Easter, but coming, as Easter does, unusually late next year, it will not be difficult to have well flowered plants for that great floral festival. We shall have practically no lilies at that time and the few azaleas available will have been sold. Canterbury bells therefore should prove a desirable acquisition. Always grow these plants cool; a maximum of 50 degrees should not be exceeded. They will not tolerate hard forcing, but enjoy a greenhouse where they can get plenty of fresh air. Use great care in watering during dark weather and do not water over the crowns. I always like to keep the plants on the dry side until the flower spikes are a few inches high. After that plenty of moisture at the roots and occasional applications of liquid manure can be afforded.

THE GLADIOLUS

LATE GLADIOLI.

I would like to know the names of some good late-blooming gladioli.

J. P. H.—Mo.

Almost any of the large-flowering gladioli will bloom late if planted late. Plant from May 20 to June 30 for late spikes, covering the bulbs five to six inches deep, and water the trenches after laying in the bulbs, if the soil is dry. A few good varieties to plant would be America, Mrs. Francis King, Halley, Augusta, Baron Hulot, brenchleyensis, Panama, Prophetesse. All of these are of moderate price. C. W.

ONE OR MANY?

There is no word in general use in the trade to which more frequent violence is done than is perpetrated on "gladiolus." The penultimate "o" in this word is short and the accent, therefore, as Latin, properly falls on the antepenultimate, in spite of the fact that the use of the long "o" accented is common in colloquial usage.

But the greatest violence is done by those who do not distinguish between the singular and the plural. Gladiolus is one; gladioli are many. Gladioli have become extremely popular with the public and the demand for gladiolus bulbs will be heavy right after the holidays. There are many millions of gladiolus bulbs of American production this year, but the gladiolus growers in Holland will not ship the usual quantities of bulbs this season.

When in doubt as to a choice of the words, gladiolus or gladioli, try the sentence substituting rose or roses; it is a test which enables most florists to be sure they are right.

FERTILIZER FOR GLADIOLI.

Please advise us as to the best fertilizer for gladioli. J. G. B.—Mass.

Avoid using any fresh stable or cow manure for them. Any animal manure should be thoroughly rotted. They succeed well on land which has been well manured a year previous for other crops, without any further enrichment. If manures are hard to obtain, use any good complete vegetable fertilizer at the rate of 750 pounds per acre. C. W.

THE BOYS WHO DID THE TRICK

WARRIORS WORKING.

Back in Stores and Greenhouses.

In practically every news letter in The Review last week there were reports that members of our trade, who had forsaken their peace-time jobs to go to war, had returned to the stores or greenhouses they left during the last eighteen months. This eased the labor situation considerably and made the pre-Christmas rush easier to handle. More of the florists who were in the army overseas or in training at the various cantonments are being released daily and it will not be long before the boys who grow wholesale and retail flowers will be at home, working at their former employment.

In the Army and Navy.

Albert J., Jr., and Francis X. Lorenz, sons of Albert J. Lorenz, Brooklyn florist, did their part to help the Allied countries win the war. Albert was with the naval aviation forces and saw service abroad. Francis was called for service with the army and trained at Camp Devens, Mass. Both are well known to the trade in Brooklyn, having been associated with their father at his establishment, corner of Flatbush avenue and Dean street.

Bauske Convalescing.

Written large on the panels of history will be the story of the 131st Infantry in the operations on the St. Mihiel salient and north of Verdun in the closing days of the war. The 131st Infantry is a Chicago regiment and among the florists in it is Otto Bauske, who was drafted in September, 1917. He was assigned to the machine gun company.

Albert J. Lorenz, Jr.

Otto Bauske.

After training at Camp Grant, the regiment was one of the first sent to France and was in the first all-American attack. Otto Bauske went "over the top" three times, July 4, August 28 and September 27, in the Verdun sector. The last time he was wounded in the leg so seriously that when last heard from, under date of November 20, he still was in the hospital at Vichy, where the mineral water comes from.

Otto Bauske is the eldest son of Herman Bauske, the well-known Chicago rose grower, and, before he was drafted, was his father's chief assistant in the management of the greenhouses. He is 27 years of age and a first-class grower. Mr. Bauske has another son, Herman, Jr., who was with the A. L. Randall Co. prior to being drafted. After a few weeks in camp he was honorably discharged because of his physical condition, but, being unwilling to let great events pass without participating, he went to Washington and secured an appointment in the Ordnance Department. He was sent home a fortnight ago.

Charles Steidle Gets Discharge.

Charles Steidle, of Olivette, Mo., on being discharged from the army at Camp MacArthur, Waco, Tex., left for Chicago, arriving December 21, instead of going to his home, as Mrs. Steidle was in Chicago on a visit. He has two brothers in service, one in France and one in this country, and is the owner of a range of glass in Olivette. Upon his return home Mr. Steidle will take active charge of his business again.

Corporal W. G. Loveridge.

Corporal William G. Loveridge, son of Charles Loveridge, Peoria, Ill., has been with the fighting forces in France since November, 1917. He is with the 90th Aero Squadron and recently was sent on a "flying trip" over battlefields to get instruments and guns from disabled airplanes. This was an important commission for the youth of 20 years, Corporal Loveridge's age at his last birthday, September 2, and last reports indicate that prospects were good for a speedy promotion. The uncertainty of the mail service is responsible for the fact that the parents of the young aviator had no word from him between June 9, 1918, and November 10, 1918. Families which do not hear promptly from soldiers may therefore take heart.

Pittsburgh Recruits Return.

Later arrivals from camp and cantonment, from naval training station and from actual war service overseas to Pittsburgh include Samuel McClements II, who has been serving at Pier 19 since the beginning of the war; Samuel P. Gidas, who has seen six months of intensive training at Camp Dix and one month at Camp Merritt, whence he was on the point of embarking for France when the armistice was signed; Thomas McKee Elliott, who has returned to the offices of the Elliott Co. from Camp Joseph E. Johnson, and George C. McCallum, who arrived in time for Christmas at home.

Rupert, Ida.—The Rupert Floral Co. recently donated to the Junior Red Cross girls two pots of tuberoses, a bouquet of heliotrope and another of roses. A small stand was put up on the sidewalk, where the girls sold smells at 5 cents each. They cleared $12 and then sold the plants for $1 more, sent the roses to the sick, divided the heliotrope among themselves and felt well repaid for their work.

MULCHING.

Nearly all directions for using mulch for the protection of outdoor plants say not to put on the mulch until the ground is frozen solid. From our experience here, however, we take exception to the rule. In the severe climate of Idaho, with an altitude of 4,200 feet, we find most of the winter-killing is done by the dry zero winds. Neither windbreaks nor irrigating water would be considered as mulch, but both are extensively used here to prevent winter-killing. It has often been proved that plants well wet before winter sets in are less apt to be killed than those left dry. Mulching with brush or cornstalks, or even a wire fence, answers the same purpose in that it collects the snow which otherwise blows off. We mulch lettuce and spinach with coarse material, which has the threefold advantage of partial shade, holding moisture and breaking the wind. We use manure mulch in our hotbed frames to prevent the ground freezing up and, for the same purpose, we spread it on ground we wish to sow early sweet peas on.

We mulch our roses as soon as the fall frosts have checked the growth and find it more advantageous than to leave them until winter, as others do, only to find them already winter-killed.

The great difficulty with mulching strawberries, as well as some perennials, is the presence of the straw in the irrigating rills next spring. To avoid this, we use either fine manure or poultry manure and try to force a heavy growth during the fall, so that the plants will supply their own protection.

Everyone who does any gardening knows the advantages of the dust mulch. The phrase originated with the orchardists who perfected implements to maintain it in their orchards. It is simply cultivation brought down to a fine point and is beneficial whether the area to be cultivated is a 4-inch pot, a flower garden or a 40-acre orchard.

THE PLANT QUARANTINE.

In The Review of December 19 A. H. Graham, in criticising the action of our government with regard to the plant quarantine that goes into effect next June, says, "We have suffered about enough from the pernicious activities of swivel chair theorists tampering with practical matters." The fact is that one of the trade's biggest handicaps has been the lack of "swivel chair" theory. But now that the business has grown and wages are on a par with those in other trades, American spirit, coupled with American ingenuity and advanced ideas, has come into the trade and, with the help and protection of our government, we may hope to see new developments in our country, which is developing the finest brains in the world.

I am glad to read of the quarantine. The Belgians will understand the need for it.

In a letter to an English trade paper from Jules De Puysseleyr, of Loochristy, quoted in the same issue, it is stated that many a Belgian nursery now has no plants at all. Then why worry? Palms have practically disappeared and there is no young stock at hand. It seems to me we should think of the old adage, "Necessity is the mother of invention."

American talent is at work developing in this country those plants that formerly came from Europe and, with a little encouragement, wonders may be accomplished, and employment found for many of the men returning from the army.

FORCING FRENCH HYDRANGEAS.

Will you please give instructions for forcing French hydrangeas?

G. E. N.—N. Y.

French hydrangeas, owing to the absence of lilies, will be more valuable than ever next Easter. They force into flower easily by April 20. Place them in a cool greenhouse as soon as Christmas crops are out of the way. A minimum of 45 degrees to 50 degrees will suffice. Be careful not to wet the foliage too much on dark days and to ventilate carefully, or you may get mildew on the foliage. The plants can have 60 degrees at night, once the growths are two or three inches long. Be sure not to crowd the plants. As hydrangeas are thirsty subjects, see that they never become dry. They also need feeding every four or five days with liquid manure or a chemical surfacing until the heads show color.

BULBS IN NEW POTS.

Directions for potting bulbs say, "Do not use new pots." If such pots are used, what is the damage or result and how should the bulbs be treated?

R. F. C.—Idaho.

It is proper to use new pots if the pots are soaked in water until bubbles cease to rise; otherwise the dry clay will draw moisture away from the compost in the pots.

WHITE BONNAFFON.

We are sending you a chrysanthemum to find out its name and where we can procure stock of it. Its merits are that it is easy to grow, it has dark green foliage, upright leaves, always a good stem three or four feet long, a pure white, ball-shaped flower with incurved petals, averaging seven inches in diameter, which appears ready to cut two or three weeks before it is full-grown. The mum ships well also. We began cutting flowers of this variety November 20 and cleaned up on them at Thanksgiving, though we could have held them easily until December 20. They brought the best price paid in the wholesale market here.

P. B.—N. Y.

The name of the variety is White Bonnaffon. It is not a sport of the yellow Major Bonnaffon, but a seedling raised by Elmer D. Smith & Co., of Adrian, Mich., and disseminated by this firm in 1900. White Bonnaffon is a good commercial variety for anyone who has a demand for a late white bloom of medium size, but it was found to be hardly large enough to stand the competition of the open market. Another thing against the variety is that it does not furnish cuttings freely from the stock plant. A good plan to work up the stock to propagate now and, when the cuttings are rooted, plant them five inches apart in light soil on a bench that gets full light in a carnation-house temperature. When the young plant has grown large enough to make a cutting and still leave a fair-sized plant, remove the top for a cutting. It will not be long before new growth will start from both sides and base of the plant. These new shoots make the best cuttings and the plant will continue to furnish them until late in the spring.

One good feature about this variety is that its small, dark green, upright foliage allows close planting. Some growers have complained about the wood hardening up and not growing away freely enough to produce sufficient stems, but when this can be overcome, it is a valuable late white for commercial purposes. Elmer D. Smith & Co. advertised it in their 1918 catalogue.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SOCIETY.

Work of Chicago Committee.

The Chicago examining committee of the C. S. A. has submitted a report of the following new variety.

At Chicago, December 9, the bronze pompon, Agnes Mazey, submitted by E. H. Mazey, Minneapolis, Minn., scored as follows: Color, 37; form, 18; stem and foliage, 19; fullness, 17; total, 91.

The variety published as Alex. Clarke, submitted by William Whitton, superintendent of the Flagler estate, Greenwich, Conn., should be Alex. Clarkson.

"STAGGERING PRICES"

MISLEADING THE PUBLIC.

Inaccurate Newspaper Statements.

The members of the trade in Chicago were surprised and disturbed at an unfavorable article which appeared in the leading Sunday newspaper, the Tribune, December 22. It was interesting to note that practically every florist had seen the offending paragraph and that there was general remark that the paper should be so disregardful of the facts and the trade interests as to tell its readers that flowers are "all at staggering prices" and that the bird's-nest fern is the only "new novelty."

The article said in part:

What the Tribune Said.

"A problem of great magnitude faces the retail florists all over the country this Christmas. Never in the history of the flower business has there been such a shortage of cut flowers. The florists who have the knack of making a few flowers go a long ways in combinations of green and other materials in baskets and vases are the ones who are going to win. Prices are very high. Even in roses and carnations the supply is low. There are some sweet peas, a few violets, lilies of the valley, and a fairly good showing of Scotch heather. There are few other varieties in evidence, and all at staggering prices. The demand seems heavier than in other seasons.

"The same conditions prevail in the stock of flowering plants. The growers have been handicapped by shortage of coal and labor. There are, however, good specimen plants of cyclamen, poinsettas, begonias, with the usual collection of foliage and ferns, including varieties of berry plants. The only new novelty in the plant line is the birdsnest fern. This has bright green, glossy leaves and is beautiful. Several of the largest specimens of Scotch heather ever seen in this city are on display. These are California products. The berried ardiesia is the rarest plant in the collection. Celestial and bird's-eye peppers are in favor. We may have a few azaleas later."

There was more in the same vein.

Calling Editor's Attention.

Believing that such misinformation would not be published if the editor of the Tribune knew the facts, the editor of The Review sent the following letter:

Edward S. Beck,
Managing Editor, The Tribune,
Chicago, Ill.

My dear Mr. Beck:—In behalf of the industry this journal represents, may I not venture a protest on such articles as "Flowers for Christmas" in the Sunday Tribune of December 22?

Even if the facts were as stated, I think the World's Greatest Newspaper might well refrain from such statements as "Prices are very high" and "All at staggering prices"—florists have had enough to contend with during the war so that it is scarcely due them to scare their customers away now that peace has returned.

But the fact is that the prices of flowers this Christmas are not advanced so much as are the prices of other commodities. The best grade of roses brings forty per cent to fifty per cent more than in recent years of low prices, but please remember that the public pays forty per cent more for your Sunday Tribune and 100 per cent more for the weekday issue.

There is another matter which will interest you: Your story speaks of the bird's-nest fern as the only "new novelty" (respectfully referred to B. L. T. for his School of Tautology). The bird's-nest fern is Asplenium Nidus-avis. Nicholson's Dictionary of Gardening has record of its description as far back as 1820. There is no record of what part of the last hundred years the bird's-nest fern has been an item of commerce, but I have been in this trade for more than twenty years and the bird's-nest fern was in Chicago flower stores when I started.

I am enclosing your article marked by our proofreader to show the correct spellings of the words that were unfamiliar to yours.

May I close with an invitation to use the facilities of this office whenever you wish to get the facts with regard to any matter concerning the florists' business?

With compliments of the season, I am,
Very truly yours.

The heads of large newspapers pride themselves on their accuracy. If florists will adopt the practice of calling attention to misstatements that occur in their local papers and offer to pass on statements of fact at any time, they will help set the newspapers right on our trade affairs, to the great advantage of all concerned.

A PROMISING PROSPECT.

If the volume of business for the holiday season is any criterion of conditions, the trade is on a firm foundation. Stock of all classes and grades found ready buyers and much more could have been used to advantage. Growers everywhere are planning to increase their areas, encouraged by the liberality of the holiday purchases. The holidays inaugurate this year a season of social festivities which doubtless will continue throughout the winter and promises to be marked by more than the usual elaboration in the rejoicing over the return of peace. That is one reason why stock advertised in the Classified columns is so quickly taken, clearing the houses of their surpluses and encouraging the growers to sow larger crops to meet the increasing demand. Like this:

Please discontinue my ad for primulas, as I am sold out.—N. O. Caswell, Delavan, Ill., December 9, 1918.

Kindly cancel our ad of cyclamens, as we are sold out.—A. Wiegand's Sons Co., Indianapolis, Ind., December 9, 1918.

Please discontinue our echeveria ad until further notice, as all surplus stock has been sold.—Clody's Flower Shop, Chicago, Ill., December 4, 1918.

When you hear a man complain of the cost of advertising you can be pretty certain he spends a good bit of money elsewhere than in The Review.

GREEN WORM ON CINERARIAS.

We have a small green worm on the under side of our cineraria leaves. Can you tell us what it is and how to get rid of it? J. M. K.—Wis.

This is the same worm which attacks cabbages and other members of the brassica family outdoors. It also attacks calceolarias, mignonette and some primulas under glass, as well as cinerarias. It is the larva of a white butterfly which you will see in quantity in the late autumn. On cinerarias, careful hand-picking is the best remedy. C. W.

TO DESTROY MEALY BUG.

Is there any way of keeping mealy bug in check other than hand-picking? H. E. C.—O.

The force of water from a hose, especially when directed through a fine nozzle, is an effective cure for mealy bug. There are also several insecticides which will cripple or kill these pests. Hand-picking may be a good remedy, but no one in business has the time to hand-pick mealy bugs. C. W.

Legislation and Legal Decisions

ESSENTIALS OF CONTRACTS.

There are some fundamentals concerning contracts that are clearly stated in elementary law books, and there are some fundamentals in merchandising that are often restated by experienced traders. A little bit of freshening up on these things may help to clarify some of the fogs that are sure to be encountered from time to time.

Here are some of the things that appear in most of the law primers and are quite as familiar in substance to merchants as they are to lawyers:

"The law presumes that the parties to every contract deal fairly and honestly with each other, and authorizes each of the parties to assume such fairness and honesty on the part of the other."

"The actual contract consists in the meeting of the minds of the parties upon the same thing and in the same sense. In other words, the thing intended to be proposed and actually proposed on one side must be in all material respects the very thing intended to be accepted and actually accepted on the other. In the absence of this meeting there can be no contract."

"Any contract is broken by the failure of either party to do or to refrain from doing the thing which he agreed to do or not to do in the manner, time and place in which it was agreed to be done or not done."

"Contracts are said to be express when the mutual promises of the parties are declared in so many words, either orally or in writing. They are implied when the law presumes the existence of such promises from the acts or circumstances of the parties."

There are certain essentials that great merchants regard as binding for their own protection. One is that trading shall be mutually advantageous. Another is that sustained prosperity in a business cannot be had unless a reasonable effort is made to conserve the interests of the customer rather than take down an inordinate profit. And still another is that the best protection for a business is full confidence in the integrity of contracts and those who make them, the latter being known as the moral risk of trade, which to some men is the sine qua non of commercial life.

A SPIKE OF SPECIOSUM.

An unusual spike it was, as the illustration testifies. In number of blooms it almost reached the century mark, carrying ninety-five flowers and buds early in July, when the photograph was taken. However, it was not precisely a Lilium speciosum, but was the variety of speciosum known as Melpomene, which has much deeper-colored flowers than the type, besides being somewhat different in habit of growth. As most florists know, the flowers of L. speciosum are white, more or less suffused with rose-pink in the center of the perianth-segments and plentifully spotted with claret-red. But the Melpomene flowers have only a narrow margin of white and are elsewhere a rich, bright crimson or carmine-crimson, spotted with red.

On sending to The Review the photograph from which the illustration was made, the correspondent referred to the spike as "a fine fasciated stalk of Lilium speciosum Melpomene, one of several stalks in an 8-inch pot."

Any florist who wishes to add to his supply of blooms in midsummer, when flowers frequently are scarce, will find that the different varieties of speciosum are well adapted for the purpose. The bulbs from Japan usually arrive late in autumn or in the winter. A satisfactory way to treat them is to pot them in good loam, placing about three bulbs in a 7-inch or 8-inch pot and covering them slightly with the soil. If, without being watered, they are then set under a cool bench where they are not soaked with drip but are only moderately moist, they will remain almost dormant for seven or eight weeks.

When they have made a few inches of growth they should be removed from under the bench, but should continue to have a cool, shaded, well ventilated position. As they bloom in midsummer, a cool temperature and shade are conducive to strength in the plants, and to size and durability in the flowers. They should not receive much water until well rooted. After starting growth, however, they form roots rapidly and thenceforth require an abundance of water. As green fly is partial to them, they need an occasional fumigation.

Some growers plant speciosums singly in 6-inch pots. Other growers argue that better results can be secured by planting in boxes instead of pots, as the roots are less liable to dry out in boxes. The boxes generally used are six inches deep and the bulbs are placed about six inches apart.

PITTSBURGH.

The Market.

Stock of all varieties has been so scarce that it is difficult to make comparisons of Christmas business with that of former holiday seasons. A combination of circumstances unprecedented has arisen to occasion this shortage. Excessive funeral demands, although lessened, continue; cloudy skies, of late, have been a factor; and the majority of growers, owing to fuel restrictions, did not fire their boilers sufficiently early in the season, hoping to make the supply of coal last until spring. It is expected that later, with the elimination of the epidemic, there will be a glut in excess of any previous surplus of the midwinter season. Prices, of course, were exceedingly high. American Beauties brought $15 per dozen wholesale. While a few of the short-stemmed Beauties came in, the dealers made practically no effort to handle them. Russell, Prima Donna and Columbia were listed as high as 75 cents apiece. Carnations were $15 per hundred, while Paper White narcissi were $6 and $8 per hundred and scarce. With the one exception of stevia, which was 75 cents per bunch, there was practically no change in the prices for greens.

Various Notes.

Our soldiers and sailors at the various home cantonments, naval training stations, government piers, etc., are coming back to take up again their former life. Young Samuel McClements, who has been serving at Pier 19 since the beginning of hostilities, returned to Pittsburgh a fortnight ago, but has been unable to have much conversation with his father, owing to the latter's strenuous life in anticipation of the holiday season. On Baum street near the firm's building, Randolph & McClements used a large vacant lot for the sale of Christmas trees.

Samuel P. Gidas has returned from seven months of service in uniform and is again installed at his old post with the Alpha Floral Co. Following six months' training with Company 25, of the U. S. Infantry, at Camp Dix, Mr. Gidas spent a month at the embarkation Camp Merritt, whence he was on the point of sailing when the war ended.

Thomas McKee Elliott has returned from his brief sojourn at Camp Joseph E. Johnson and is again installed in charge of the office of the Elliott Nursery Co.

William Andrews, an old-time accountant and shipper for the E. C. Ludwig Floral Co., together with Mrs. Ludwig's nephew, Roy C. Engel, was in the designing department during the holiday season.

Boy Scout officials here have been notified to cease the hunt for black walnut trees, although the planting of the walnut for future purposes is recommended, not for the ends of war but for the aims of peace. The walnut wood is to be used for blades for propellers in the aircraft industry. The purpose of the government, as set forth in the communication, is the restoration of the walnut to its normal commercial position. What Uncle Sam now has on hand will be turned into aircraft material or gunstock blanks.

John Matsukes, who has been making a ten days' visit with friends in Chicago, returned home in time to resume work on the staff of the Liberty florists.

George C. McCallum returned home unexpectedly from New York December 23, having been released from the service upon his request just as he was about to be assigned to an ocean-going steamer. Earl Tipton, who is identified with the salesroom of the McCallum Co., is again on duty following a week's absence.

INDIANAPOLIS.

The Market.

Roses and carnations were the mainstay of the Christmas market. They cleared readily at the highest prices ever known in this city, ranging from $5 to $35. Carnations varied in price according to quality from $8 to $15, all good blooms making the latter.

The demand for funeral work continued unusually heavy throughout the week. Calla lilies were in good supply and were used largely for this purpose. Callas of quality make $2.50 and $3 per dozen. Easter and rubrum lilies have been scarce.

Poinsettias were limited in quantity at from $3 to $6 per dozen. Both yellow and white narcissi were in the market, the white at $5 per hundred, the yellow at $6. Some good stevia was available at 50 cents per bunch. Sweet peas and violets were rare. Marguerites, calendulas, mignonette and pansies in small quantity were offered.

The Christmas greens market was good, the supply being limited, while the demand was brisk and prices high. Loose holly has been in evidence at from $8 to $10 per case. Laurel has been short, also lycopodium. Christmas trees were few in number and high in price. Frieze roping and all artificial ornaments met with ready sale. Mistletoe was practically out of the market by the first of the week.

Various Notes.

Frank Hasselman was brought home the other day from his farm at Waveland, Ind., ill with pneumonia. He is on the road to recovery now.

The early part of the week, John Rieman was at home sick, but is back on the job again now.

Harry Bookedis, the Claypool Hotel Florist, has influenza, and Frank Sohles, of the same firm, also has been ill.

A. Wiegand's Sons Co. had its windows arrayed in Christmas attire and made an attractive display. A frontage on Illinois street of 125 feet was gay with seasonable plants, including begonias, azaleas, cherries, poinsettias, made-up pots, hampers, etc. In the main store window a color scheme of red, green and silver was carried out in red and silver ruscus, poinsettias and baskets featuring candles.

Another unusual display was staged in Green's Flower Shop. Here fancy pottery and fruits, featured with Christmas plants, showed what can be done in a time of scarcity of flowers in arranging an attractive window.

A. F. J. Baur states that he will have the carnation schedule in the mail in just a few days. Arrangements are being made for a big peace celebration at the Carnation Society convention. The society is desirous of having the cooperation of the S. A. F. for this event.

Baur & Steinkamp's new carnation, Ruth Baur, has excited great admiration among the tradesmen, some having come many miles to see it. Among late visitors to see this plant were S. S. Skidelsky, Joseph Hill and Mr. Henningsen. Mr. Hill motored over in his new 1919 Hudson.

Temperley's supplied the local market with Lorraine and Chatelaine begonias, cyclamens, Jerusalem cherries, azaleas and exceptional Primula obconica for the holiday trade. This firm has a fine new seedling red Chatelaine begonia, Christmas Gift, that it intends to put on the market next year. This is identical in growth with pink Chatelaine and flowers as profusely.

Bertermann Bros. Co. grew splendid azaleas and good stevia for Christmas. John Heidenreich had good poinsettias and cyclamens.

William Roepke went to Chicago for stock. He has been bringing in excellent Primula rosea.

Never before in the history of the trade have so many artificial flowers and other decorative substitutes been used as during the last few weeks. Paper flowers, ribbons, dyed leaves, etc., baskets, candles, in fact, anything attractive for decorative purposes has been utilized.

John Hartje and A. Kempe visited among the sweet pea growers of the city last week and saw that peas for Christmas would be at a premium.

F. A. Conway is cutting an abundance of good calla lilies.

H. J. Battreall, well known to the trade as "Bat," has just received an honorable discharge from the navy. Formerly he was with A. Wiegand's Sons Co., but is now at Green's Flower Shop. E. E. T.

SPOTS ON RUBBER PLANTS.

I have several rubber plants and they are apparently healthy, with no scale or other insects, but the leaves develop brown spots which in a short time cover the whole leaf, starting at the edge and working toward the center. Can you tell me what the trouble is and what the remedy? R. V. B.—N. M.

Probably deficiency of moisture at the roots is the main source of the trouble. Rubber plants never should be allowed to become dry at the roots It is possible that your plants have a disease with which I am not acquainted. If so, it is probably a fungoid affection and spraying with Bordeaux mixture as soon as it makes its appearance should check it. C. W.

COLD STORAGE LILIES.

Should cold storage lily bulbs be left in a cool house after potting? J. M. K.—Wis.

Lily bulbs will start much better in a temperature of 55 to 60 degrees. Giganteums, whether fresh bulbs or cold storage, start better in a fairly warm house. C. W.

OBITUARY

Andrew Masson.

Pneumonia, following influenza, claimed one more victim December 17 in the person of Andrew Masson, superintendent on the estate of Mrs. Louis Frothingham, formerly Miss May S. Ames, North Easton, Mass. Mr. Masson's illness was a brief one. A native of south Scotland, the deceased came to America while young. After working on estates in Pomfret, Conn., and Brookline, Mass., he went to North Easton seven years ago. He laid out and planted the new estate with excellent taste and was one of the cleverest, most conscientious and faithful of employees. His loss is keenly felt in the community where he resided, as was evidenced by the large and sympathetic gathering December 20, when funeral services were held from his late home.

Mr. Masson leaves a widow and little daughter, for whom great sympathy is felt, also a brother and sister in America. He was a member of the National Association of Gardeners and of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston, also of Easton Grange, P. of H. Numerous floral tributes bore eloquent testimony to the esteem in which he was held. W. N. C.

John Bresnahan.

John Bresnahan, for eighteen years head gardener on the Bryce-Allen estate, Beverly Cove, died December 17 in the Beverly hospital after a short illness. He was a native of Ireland and highly esteemed among the north shore gardeners. W. N. C.

Mrs. Augusta C. Mather.

Mrs. Augusta C. Mather, the pioneer florist of Rockland, Me., died at her home in that city December 12, after an illness of nearly ten years. She was 79 years old November 30, last. Mrs. Mather in her younger days was a telegraph operator and went to Rockland as manager of the telegraph office there. After thirty-one years of service in that capacity, she resigned in 1892 and established the greenhouse range at Pleasant and Purchase streets. With the assistance of her husband, Albert I. Mather, and her son, Harry A. Mather, she built up a large business. Since her retirement ten years ago, the establishment has been conducted by the husband and son. During her career, Mrs. Mather became intimately acquainted with a number of prominent persons, among them being James G. Blaine, Thomas A. Edison and Frank A. Munsey. She was a member of a number of fraternal organizations and was widely known among the florists' trade. The business will be continued under the present management.

Wilbur A. Fisk.

Wilbur Augustus Fisk, for more than a quarter of a century president of W. E. Barrett & Co., dealers in seeds and agricultural implements, Providence, R. I., died December 16, after a long illness, at his home in that city. He was in his seventy-sixth year. He suffered a stroke of paralysis about eight years ago and for the last four years had been an invalid, being confined to his home most of the time.

He came to Providence from Bethel, Vt., where he was born October 4, 1843, and as a young man entered the employ of W. E. Barrett & Co. That was forty-four years ago, but in 1878, having married a daughter of Mr. Barrett, he was admitted to the firm and when the business was incorporated in 1898 he was elected president, which office he retained until his death. He took a personal interest in everything pertaining to agriculture and horticulture and to his management was largely due the growth and prosperity of the concern. He was a member of the Rhode Island Horticultural Society and the old Rhode Island Society for the Encouragement of Domestic Industry, which for many years conducted the big annual fairs at Narragansett Park. He was also one of the members of the Florists' and Gardeners' Club of Rhode Island and was affiliated, previous to his illness, with the West Side Club, Union Club, Squantum Club and the Providence Athletic Association. He is survived by his wife and one daughter. W. H. M.

Charles A. Bellows.

Charles A. Bellows, for many years a member of the Florists' and Gardeners' Club of Rhode Island and the Rhode Island Horticultural Society, died at his home in Adamsdale, Mass., December 20, at the age of 72 years, following an illness of three weeks, caused by a complication of diseases.

Mr. Bellows was born in Slatersville, R. I., June 7, 1846. For many years in his younger days he was employed as a conductor on the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad, but for upwards of a score of years he had conducted a florists' business. He was a member of Good Samaritan Lodge of Odd Fellows and of Cumberland Grange, Patrons of Husbandry, for the last twenty-five years. He is survived by his wife and a number of relatives. On Thanksgiving day, 1917, he celebrated his golden wedding anniversary. W. H. M.

D. Mendels.

D. Mendels, of the firm of Freyling & Mendels, Grand Rapids, Mich., died at his home on Wealthy street, December 18, after an illness of only two days' duration. Although he had not been in good health during the last four years, he was at his work until two days before his death.

Mr. Mendels was 68 years old August 20. He was born in the Netherlands and came to this country in 1870. He had been engaged in floriculture since 1875. In 1880 he started his present business, with Nicholas Freyling as partner. Mr. Freyling passed away fourteen years ago and was succeeded by his son, Edward N. Freyling. Mr. Mendels is survived by his wife and one married daughter.

Besides being a successful business man, he was a man of exemplary habits and stanch principles. He was a prominent member of the Reformed church and zealous in its interests and philanthropies.

Grove City, Pa.—J. M. Ellenberger has purchased James Clelland's range, comprising 15,000 feet of glass, together with thirteen acres of ground. Dwelling houses are included in the purchase.

EMPTY benches are the most costly things in any greenhouse establishment.

MANY a bench now will be filled with gladiolus bulbs instead of being permitted to stand idle this winter.

THERE should be a good demand for 2½-inch rose plants next spring, so many growers did no replanting last season.

A MAN may know his business ever so thoroughly, but it gets him nothing in the florists' trade unless he works at it.

IN days of old, the commission men had to placate the grower; now it is the retailer who is kicking. Truly, "life's a strife."

TRANSPORTATION troubles have been no more than normal this Christmas. Few of us ever will forget the experience of Christmas 1917.

WITH the transfer order department in representative stores showing a turnover of $1,000 to $3,000 per month, in proportion to the effort made to get business, no retailer can afford to neglect it.

THE Editor's Desk was decorated over the holiday by a vase of Christmas Gold, a pompon chrysanthemum of the button type, sent by the Friedley Co., Cleveland, O. It promises to be useful because of the lateness of its season.

THE idea prevails that it will be possible to sell spring bedding plants in 1919 at prices proportionate to the cost of production, which has not been accomplished for several years. A wholesale price of 15 cents for well grown 4-inch geraniums is one of the values suggested.

THERE are those who believe that the new plant exclusion order must soon be modified in many respects because of its numerous inconsistencies. For instance, why exclude gladiolus and scores of less important bulbs if narcissi, hyacinths and tulips are admitted? What danger to American agriculture can lie in one if not the other?

USE that empty house for asters; don't let space be idle.

GROW for quality, not quantity, and watch your bank account grow obese.

So far as plants are concerned, we may look for a repetition of the Christmas shortage at Easter.

WITH this issue The Review completes its eleventh "century." To look ahead, 1,100 weeks is quite a few.

IF STOCK is extremely scarce during the next three months, as many predict, it simply will serve to stimulate production next season.

DEALERS report that sphagnum moss will be one of the scarce articles before spring. The price has been boosted, the cost of burlap and labor having become important factors in its cost.

RETAILERS who have recommended the use of baskets for funeral flowers say such arrangements invariably give satisfaction. Among a lot of sprays, wreaths and conventional designs, a well arranged basket stands up and makes a show out of proportion to the money represented.

SOME florists will save themselves disappointment and dispute if they will read a little more carefully. For instance, frequent complaints arrive because some buyer has failed to note that an advertisement says "for" pots of a certain size, not "from" pots of that size.

FLOWERS AS GIFTS.

"Flowers are always fit presents, because they are a proud assertion that a ray of beauty outvalues all the utilities of the world."—Emerson thus epitomizes in his inimitable phrase the message of the flowers. It has been said that the sending of flowers conveys a double compliment, because they are beautiful but perishable. Hence the selection of flowers, instead of a useful and lasting gift, implies our faith in the ability of the recipient to appreciate the spiritual sentiment behind their fleeting loveliness.

FLOWER BUSINESS IN FRANCE.

"In prewar years exports of cut flowers, especially during the winter months, were among the sources of prosperity in this consular district," says the report of William D. Hunter, U. S. consul at Nice, France. "Two special trains daily transported, in postal parcels of five and ten kilos (kilo, 2.2 lbs.), cut flowers in willow baskets to Paris, London, and the large cities of central Europe and Russia. Although no official statistics are available, the figures given for the year 1914 by the Chamber of Commerce of this city estimated the number of baskets sent at 2,200,000 and the total value of the floral production for the Riviera at almost $12,000,000. In this sum were included the flowers produced for the perfumery industry.

"In the year 1917, the exports of flowers to the Central Powers, Russia and Great Britain ceased, and the number of postal parcels sent to Paris fell off, largely because of lack of adequate communication between Nice and the capital. Although the demand of the perfume industry for flowers was large and the price was high, the lack of men laborers for the hoeing made the production unremunerative, and many of the flower cultivators used their land for truck gardening."

CAUSE AND EFFECT.

"Things which are equal to the same thing are equal to each other." The best trade paper, broadly speaking, would be the one that supplies to the grower with every issue timely and reliable cultural advice for each successive season, includes news, information and discussion about everything of trade interest and offers a wide outlook upon every phase of the trade's activities. Such a paper would attract the largest number of readers and would provide therefore the best medium for publicity. Modesty forbids the publication of all the acknowledgments received at the offices of The Review from appreciative subscribers, but the following will serve to point the moral:

We are enclosing check for renewal of subscription to The Review. Be sure that we do not miss an issue, as we would surely be lost without it. The Review undoubtedly is the best journal for the grower published in the good old United States. It is a regular encyclopedia for the florist, who needs no other trade paper if he reads The Review.—Enid Floral Co., Enid, Okla., December 16, 1918.

As the logical corollary of the soundness of the technical articles supplied by the staff of experts contributing to The Review, its liberal policies and comprehensive scope of vision, to say nothing at all of other features which have been factors in attracting to it the largest circulation of all publications in the special field of its adaptation, testimonials to its value as an advertising medium are received constantly in increasing volume at the offices of The Review. The morning's mail illustrates:

Kindly omit my ad, as all stock ready for sale is sold.—M. S. Etter, Shiremanstown, Pa., December 16, 1918.

Discontinue my cineraria ad in the Classified department for the present. I am getting too many orders.—C. E. Smith, St. Johns, Mich., December 14, 1918.

Please take my ad for rooted geranium cuttings out, as I have sold all I have and hate to see how many more I could have sold, to judge by the orders coming in every day.—R. P. Bohlander, Melrose Park, Ill., December 12, 1918.

When you hear a man complain of the cost of advertising you can be pretty sure he spends a good bit of money elsewhere than in The Review.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

This issue of The Review goes to press in the midst of the Christmas rush, with little change apparent from the market conditions of last week. Stock of all kinds is coming in and going out in large quantities, with advance orders being well taken care of, all things considered, but no sign of any surplus. There were not so many belated shipping orders as usual, as most of the orders were placed in advance. The last-minute buyer was well warned that if he did not place his orders in advance he would not receive his stock. Mild weather and sun have so increased production that many of the wholesalers are of the opinion that all last-minute orders can be taken care of. Prices, however, have kept up, the only exception being in the case of carnations. These proved not to be in such great request at the prices asked, the sun helped increase the supply and it developed some growers had been holding stock off last week's big market in the hope of getting still higher prices. Instead they got much less, for there was enough good stock so that the old, soft flowers did not realize half last week's prices. There will be much disappointment at such a result.

The prices of roses are holding firm, with the short and medium grades in larger demand than the choice stock. Extra fancy stock is relatively more plentiful than other grades, but the supply does not exceed the demand. After the big shipping days December 22 and 23, most of the wholesale houses being open all day Sunday for the first time in nearly a year, there were few good flowers on hand for city trade, but there were considerable quantities of soft stock, off color. Killarney, Russell and Milady all showed the bad effects of recent weather conditions.

Orchids are meeting with an unusually good demand, but the price is not higher than the oldtime holiday prices. The quality of the stock coming in is exceptionally fine and the retailers report a heavy demand for them. Everything else in the cut flower line is short of the demand, with prices holding up, the only exception being poinsettias. These are plentiful and there are even a few more than enough to go around.

Toward the end of last week quite a few shipments of holly reached the market, but these were not offered for sale owing to the large number of orders already in the wholesalers' hands. All Christmas greens are on the short side.

That it will be the largest Christmas business in the history of this market goes without saying; largest, that is, in money value and returns to the growers.

In the Retail Stores.

The retail stores were alike in two respects: They were full of customers,

A. T. Pyfer & Company

all the employees on the run, apparently doing a record business, and their displays principally were made up of other things than plants and cut flowers. Many retailers doubted their ability to increase their selling prices in proportion to the greater cost of cut flowers and bought lightly on that account, while it was the general idea that cut flowers cost too much to use them for decorating the store. Plants were so scarce that few stores obtained all they wanted. Recourse, then, was had to boxwood, ruscus, etc. With these baskets and hampers of green and red the stores were bright and gay; it is open to question if they ever looked more attractive to the public. There seemed to be little complaint over prices. While customers went out without buying, it seemed hardly more than usual and it appeared to be taken as a matter of course that prices were higher than usual. What line of Christmas goods was not higher this year?

Various Notes.

Charles Cowdery, formerly greenhouse foreman for Edward Amerpohl, Janesville, Wis., has entered the employment of Wietor Bros., in the same capacity.

The firm of Kyle & Foerster after January 1 will operate under the name of the Joseph Foerster Co. William P. Kyle sold his interest to Mr. Foerster some time ago and it was their agreement that the firm name remain unchanged during 1918. The business will be under the management of Joseph Foerster, as it has been.

The American Greenhouse Mfg. Co. has opened a New York office, at 50 Broad street. Mr. McKee evidently is getting ready for a boom in greenhouse building.

It may be that it was the excellent prices for long Russells this autumn, or it may be Frank Schramm's fondness for the Knight motor, or it may be the combination of the two that caused Mr. Schramm to make himself a Christmas present of a brand new Moline De Luxe seven-passenger touring car.

Herman Bauske, Jr., has returned from Washington, where he has been serving in the Ordnance Department.

It was Edward Enders' thirty-first Christmas with C. A. Samuelson.

Michael Fink made a delivery of plants to John Schoepfle's, on Belmont avenue, but when driving away Mr. Fink evidently had his mind on Christmas business and was not watching an approaching Belmont avenue car. The street car hit his machine head on, smashing it against a heavy funeral car standing at the curb. A wrecking wagon was not needed for what was left of Mr. Fink's car; a shovel would have sufficed to clear it away. Yes, it was a Ford. Mr. Fink's young son was with him and it was fortunate that neither he nor the boy were injured.

Paul Klingsporn, manager of the Chicago Flower Growers' Association, secured the release of Edward Hunt from the Great Lakes Naval Training Station to help out over the holidays. Mr. Hunt was with this concern before entering the navy and will get his release from active duty early in the new year. He will resume work at his old place.

Curtis Kindler, of the Raedlein Basket Co., has been released from active duty at the Great Lakes Naval Training Station and has resumed his duties with his company. Mr. Kindler goes on the navy reserve list for four years. He enlisted in the navy about six months ago.

The demand for cold storage lily bulbs exceeds anything in the previous experience of A. Henderson. He illustrates the anxiety of many buyers by saying that December 21 his house shipped 100 cases, 30,000 bulbs, by express to a grower at Philadelphia.

Wendland & Keimel Co., Elmhurst, has cut an average of 9,000 roses per day the last two weeks.

To illustrate the mood of the buyers, the American Bulb Co. points to orders for Glory of Noordwijk, a new cream yellow gladiolus, at $60 per hundred. There is an unusual demand for stock of the new and higher priced European varieties, perhaps due to the knowledge that importations will cease after this season because of the new quarantine.

Ernst C. Amling, the Maywood grower, has been cutting excellent Columbia and is well pleased with this new rose. He had planned to run some of his houses cold after Christmas, to keep within his fuel allotment, and therefore ran the Russells and Ophelias through the usual resting period, with the result that his Christmas cut of these varieties was less than normal. Mr. Amling believes many other growers followed the same course, which would account for the reduced supply this Christmas.

I. Rosnosky, traveler for the W. W. Barnard Co., is in Chicago to spend the holidays.

The Christmas staff, including extras, in A. Lange's three-storied store is about 125 people. They have been "as busy as busy could be."

"Never praise the day until evening," quoted Emil Buettner, "but I will say that so far I am satisfied with this season." Mr. Buettner cut slightly more than 40,000 roses in the week before Christmas.

Foreseeing a shortage of cut flowers, A. Van Gelder stocked up heavily on artificial flowers. He says he has had the best demand for this class of merchandise ever experienced by his company and that the supply line has become a big factor in the business of Percy Jones, Inc.

Have you made your reservations for the Florists' Club's banquet to be held January 9 in the Bluebird room of the Randolph hotel, Randolph and Wells streets? If you have not, do so at once. Make reservations with T. E. Waters, care Poehlmann Bros. Co. Bring your friends and do not forget the ladies. There will be good music and dancing.

In the December 23 issue of The Tribune, the Fleischman Floral Co. ran a full page advertisement on Christmas flowers in which prices were quoted. Edward Mallinson, manager, embodied in the advertisement the statement that owing to present day conditions flowers are higher in price than at this time last year.

Visitors.

Lieutenant Roy F. Wilcox, of J. F. Wilcox & Sons, Council Bluffs, Ia., stopped in Chicago December 23 on his way home from Washington, where he has been stationed in the aviation division. He has been honorably discharged from the service.

S. Thallas, of Sioux City, Ia., bought heavily of cut flowers the early part of the week to make sure of getting certain kinds of stock. He did his own packing in one of the wholesale houses, where he gathered his stock from around the market.

C. L. Powell, of Mishawaka, Ind., was in the market the early part of the week, attending to his Christmas shipments.

W. Jarvis Smith, of Canfield, O., was one of the heavy buyers of fancy, long roses who visited the market last week.

Frank X. Gorly, A. S. Cerny and W. A. Rowe, of St. Louis, spent several days in the market last week.

T. Vogt, of Coldwater, Mich., spent several days in the local market last week, to make sure he would get his Christmas orders filled completely.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Owing to scarcity of stock, the market has been in the hands of the sellers entirely; consequently prices have been high. In every line, holiday figures have been in force, although it is not believed they would have been lower even if the holiday had not been near at hand. The laws of supply and demand are in splendid working order and retailers are passing the taxes to the ultimate consumer in the best way possible.

The supply of flowers for the holidays will undoubtedly be found insufficient, but it was not expected that flower prices would advance further, as they were considered to be at the maximum already.

An exception to the general rule of things was found in orchids and gardenias, which were really in oversupply, notwithstanding the time of the year; consequently prices tumbled to practically half what they were last week. The finest cattleyas were to be had at 50 cents, and the best gardenias brought only $5 per dozen, with other grades running at $2.

Violets were "out of sight," both in quantity and price, December 20, only six boxes having arrived, and specials brought $3 per hundred. It is said that the growers along the Hudson are shipping their cut to western markets, and this accounts for the shortage.

Carnations have been better in quality and moved quickly in spite of the high prices. The best reds December 21 were bringing 15 cents, Mrs. C. W. Ward and other fancy grades as much as 12 cents and any grade which did not bring 10 cents was certainly poor. Arrivals became heavier every day, but as plantings in most cases were reduced one-half, there was no prospect of a glut this season and prices are not likely at any time to sink to normal.

Roses have been in good demand, but the supply is short, and a great part of it is sold before arrival. Outside buyers have been in the market, but have found it difficult to place orders. Stock, as a rule, is of fine quality, particularly Hadley and Ophelia. American Beauty was up to the holiday dollar, and many went higher, as the supply was light.

The supply of sweet peas is increasing and promises to be heavy after the holidays. With violets going west, the demand for peas is expected to be strong, as they will be used extensively instead of violets.

Quantities of other flowers are arriving, such as calendulas, bouvardia, snapdragon, pansies, stevia, wallflowers and mignonette, but all clean up well. One or two varieties of chrysanthemums are lingering, among them the pink Godfrey, a single variety which sells well and is among the best of its type.

Lilies are not in heavy supply, but are sufficient for the demand, which is light, due largely to the high price, 20 cents being asked for the best. Rubrum lilies move well at 5 to 10 cents. Lily of the valley is both scarce and poor; its use is avoided as much as possible. Callas are plentiful at 15 to 25 cents.

Poinsettias have been in the market for a week or more, but are only now really in demand. Some unusually large flowers are available, and bring as much as 75 cents each, with a good grade at 50 cents and smaller down to 25 cents.

Christmas trees have been short in supply, and late prices were as high as $5 per bundle of three. Holly also has been scarce, and the price advanced from $6 to $10. Greens were plentiful, but moved at prices considerably higher than those in force last year.

Christmas this year was remarkable for the smallest supply of cut flowers in two decades, with prices not altogether out of proportion to those of other years at the same season.

Various Notes.

The many friends of John Donaldson

WE take this opportunity to extend to our many friends and patrons, greetings for the NEW YEAR—a year with the world again at peace. Also to thank them for the many courtesies shown us in the year of 1918, which is at its close.

will regret to hear that he is ill at his home in Patchogue, L. I. His absence from the December meeting of the New York Florists' Club was generally remarked upon as an indication that all was not well with him.

Many members of the New York Florists' Club and their families were guests at a tea given by the National League for Woman's Service, at its headquarters at 257 Madison avenue. Invitations were sent to every member of the club, and the tea was given as a token of appreciation of the club's coöperation with the league in its work of flower distribution at the military hospitals.

Arthur Herrington, of Madison, N. J., was in town last week and read to his friends a letter he had just received from Alfred Dimock, of London, England, who was well known here a few years ago as the representative of Sander & Sons, the orchid specialists, of St. Albans, England. The letter was interesting as containing news, which no longer could be censored, of the air raids in and around London. Mr. Dimock's office windows were shattered in one of the raids and during another he was compelled to rush to safety. Twice, he said, Covent Garden market, the home of the London wholesale florists, was bombed, great damage resulting. Mr. Dimock looks after the London interests of the Yokohama Nursery Co., Ltd.

Harry A. Bunyard, who is now a Y. M. C. A. secretary, was in Paris in the early part of this month, after a short stay in London. He was then expecting to go to Bordeaux.

A. L. Young & Co., the wholesale and retail florists, at 54 West Twenty-eighth street, have added fruit to their stock and displayed in their window an assortment of fancy boxes of fruit for the holiday trade.

Meyer Otile, of Riedel & Meyer, 49 West Twenty-eighth street, is able now to get around, but, on his physician's advice, he is relinquishing the cares of business for a time.

A merry party trooped into Secretary John Young's office December 17 and presented him with a huge cake, on which were arranged fifty candles, emblematic of his fiftieth birthday, attained that day. The candles were lighted and congratulations extended. In the party were Philip F. Kessler, J. K. Allen, F. H. Traendly, C. H. Totty, A. F. Faulkner, J. H. Pepper and F. R. Newbold. The genial secretary was so delighted that he started, "Hail! Hail! The Gang's All Here!"

Recent visitors included George B. Hart, Rochester, N. Y.; Wallace R. Pierson, Cromwell, Conn.; Mr. McCarty, of P. R. Quinlan & Co., Syracuse, N. Y.

The secretaryship of the American Dahlia Society will be taken over January 1 by John H. Pepper, who has been appointed to this office by the board of directors, in place of Jasper R. Lewis, resigned. J. H. P.

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

Providence never approached a major holiday with such a dearth of flowers as on the present occasion. The abnormal demand for funeral purposes, together with the consequent shortage from closing off of large numbers of greenhouses, combined to make so limited a supply that almost any price is being paid. Quotations exceed anything known in this market in many years, and what these would be at the holiday itself was beyond the ken of anyone. The prospect of supplies for the holiday week was more discouraging than during the week just closed. Carnations are quoted December 21 at $8 to $15 per hundred; roses were $15 to $35 per hundred; lilies $16 to $25 per hundred, and even at these figures the supply was limited.

Various Notes.

The Budlong Rose Co., Auburn, is making heavy shipments of roses to Boston and New York.

T. O'Connor had a largely increased force to handle the large number of Christmas orders on potted stock.

Johnston Bros., Dorrance street, had an unusually heavy demand for decorative potted plants.

William H. Bowers, of Washington street, returned the first of the week from a several days' trip through New England after stock.

Vose the Florist, Woonsocket, has been making a big drive on narcissus bulbs.

Fred C. Green, superintendent of parks, has reported to the police that several rare spruce and evergreen trees have recently been stolen from Roger Williams park.

Conrad Schultz, of Westerly, was a business visitor to this city and Boston last week.

Charles Smith, of Washington street, spent a part of last week at Hartford, Conn. During his trip he visited the Pierson greenhouses, at Cromwell.

W. H. M.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Although the wholesale cut flower market was in good condition last week, it was hard to predict December 21 what would be the supply for Christmas. It was certain, however, that stock would not be overplentiful and that prices would be high—higher, in fact, than were ever asked at this season of the year. During the last part of the week prices slumped, as, outside of a large demand for funeral work caused by the influenza epidemic, there was little demand at the retail stores.

the demand last week centered on carnations, for which high prices are asked, but they seemed to clean up at that. The last part of the week the price for fancy grades dropped to $12.50 per hundred, although it was expected they would rise to $15 and $20 for Christmas. Roses, too, demand high prices. It was expected there would be a good supply for Christmas, although advance orders were thought to be large enough to clean up the market. Violets took a drop last week to $1 per hundred, but it was thougnt they would be around $2 for the holiday. Paper Whites were in demand at $10 per hundred. Valley, sweet peas, Easter lilies and calendulas were in excellent demand. Cut poinsettias are scarce. The market is well supplied with greens.

Various Notes.

As the date for the next meeting of the St. Louis County Growers' Association is January 1, it will be postponed. Secretary Deutschmann will notify the members of the new date.

Frank X. Gorly, W. A. Rowe and A. S. Cerny, who spent several days last week in the Chicago market, have returned and say that the conditions here as to quality and quantity of stock are better than in the Windy City.

The St. Louis Seed Co. had an extra fine lot of holly and lycopodium for Christmas and cleaned it up nicely. August Hummert says his company has received a shipment of cabbage seed from Holland.

F. H. Weber has received word that two of his former employees, Paul Heil, who has been at the Great Lakes Naval Training Station, Great Lakes, Ill., and Adolph Steidle, who trained at Camp MacArthur, Waco, Tex., have received their discharges and will return to their former positions. He hoped they would reach St. Louis in time for the Christmas rush.

The W. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co. put a new Hupmobile delivery truck in service last week.

Guy Reburn, of Chicago, spent last week in St. Louis calling on the trade. He reports large sales of gladiolus bulbs and bedding plants.

Henry and William Meier, of Kirkwood, cut chrysanthemums up to December 21. They cleaned up nicely at top prices.

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

In the cut flower market stock has been far short of requirements. A few good poinsettias came into the market and were quickly taken. Short roses have been in strong demand for funeral work, also the long-stemmed stock, among which were fine Hadley, Ophelia and Columbia. Carnations have been coming in more freely, but there are not enough for the demand. Sweet peas and freesia have been available, but violets still are scarce. The cut of Easter lilies has cleaned up daily. Stevia continues in good demand. Calendulas have been clearing daily. Many of the florists have been so rushed with funeral work that it has been impossible for them to take time to make up a supply of Christmas wreaths and garlands.

Various Notes.

First Lieutenant J. R. Cowgill, of Canton, O., was in the city recently calling on his many friends, while on leave for a few days. Lieutenant Cowgill is connected with the aviation corps and has been in training in England, whence he has just returned.

Private Karl R. Witthuhn, in a recent interesting letter to his father, describes a florist's shop which he visited with his comrades in the city of Angers, France, He says that few cut flowers were sold, but that potted plants were much in evidence and jardinieres, fern dishes, etc., were carried in such large stocks that the place presented the appearance of a crockery store rather than a flower shop. He tells of the use by the French of artificial pieces for funeral work, such as wreaths, crosses, lyres, harps, etc., many of which are made of tin, and the flowers painted to resemble natural hues. He saw little use of chiffons, ribbons, corsages, etc., in the smaller cities of France. The boys spent an enjoyable evening visiting with the florist and his wife. W. F. B.

The Market.

This report is written on the evening of the shortest day of the whole year, a time when a market report would naturally be as short as the day on which it is written, because it is just before Christmas. It is not going to be short this time; there is too much to tell, too much of unusual interest. It is the first of the last three shopping days, a day when the market naturally is buoyant because of the many orders for select stock that are going out and because of the many more orders that are still to go. Buoyant is a term that only faintly describes the tone of the market today. For the whole week the market has been brisk, at prices equal to those of last Christmas. Stock has kept moving with no accumulation. Today prices are higher, decidedly, than they were last Christmas, with every indication that they will go higher still. The growers have wisely kept sending their stock in as fast as it was fit, taking full advantage of the demand. The result is that there is no stale stock to pull down the really splendid average returns of this month. There has been a temptation to hold flowers back and yet there has been almost no holding back. This means that the flower-loving public will receive fresh flowers this Christmas and fresh flowers will go a long way toward offsetting the evil of high prices, and high prices are a necessary evil this year, for flowers are scarce, extremely scarce, indeed, and with increased cost of production prices are dangerously high.

A few growers have as much stock as in former years at the holidays, but the great majority of growers have nothing like their usual supply. This is clearly shown in the case of Cypripedium insigne. Generally this modest flower is used to help fill the gap just before Christmas and is much sought by some at Christmas at prices ranging from $12 to $15 per hundred. Today, order after order for Cypripedium insigne has been refused because the stock was all bought up in advance by those who foresaw what was coming. The market price on Beauties was $85 a hundred two years ago at Christmas, and $75 a hundred last year. Today it is $100 to $125 a hundred, with the supply rapidly disappearing. Carnations have been $10 per hundred for some time. Now they are $10 to $12, with some red at $15 and an occasional sale even higher. Short-stemmed roses, and they are extremely short-stemmed, are sold at $8, $10 and $12 per hundred, while anything approaching dignity in stem and foliage goes much higher, especially in yellow and in red. Fine, long-stemmed Russell brings $50, $60 and $75 a hundred. Early in the week it was thought that cattleyas would be plentiful, but now the orders have taken most of them at as much as, sometimes more, than, the figures just quoted on Mrs. Charles Russell.

The bright, warm weather has brought in more sweet peas than were expected, so many, in fact, that they may be called plentiful at times. The price is from $1.50 to $3, with a few extra peas at $4. Double violets are scarce. The planting has been lighter and there is said to be disease. The best bring $2. Single violets are more plentiful, by comparison, at $1.50. While a modest flower, stevia plays a part at $35 to $40 a hundred bunches. Cut poinsettia is good and abundant at $25 to $50. There are lilacs, snapdragon, mignonette, pansies and the first Paper White narcissi. Easter lilies are in fair supply at last week's figures and there are a few callas. The amount of business already lost through scarcity of stock and from high prices is appalling.

The retailers find it unsafe to accept cut flower orders for specified stock. They will take orders conditionally only in many cases and do the best they can.

These are the market conditions the night of December 21.

A Retail Shop at Christmas.

A tastefully arranged window with a suggestion of Christmas color in the center and tall crotons at one side invited further investigation. Inside was revealed a scene of rare beauty. The counters in the front part of the store had been removed for the time being to make room for the better display of a glorious array of plants. A few were single specimens. Many were made-up combinations of flowering and foliage plants and long-handled baskets. There were choice heather, poinsettias, solanums, begonias, cyclamens and dracænas. There were crotons and Pandanus Veitchii and many, many ferns, all displayed to great advantage. No crowding, no clash; a well arranged show, with a great Cibotium Schiedei overlooking all, as it were, a sentinel on guard. It was in the store of William Berger's Sons that the scene was laid. The commercial side was seen in the price tags clearly marked on each basket or individual specimen. "The plants are sold," Harry Berger said, "from samples." These were the samples, no two alike, though there were many of them. As many as 100 could be furnished of some; of others, less. There must have been 100 or more samples, some large, all choice. Mr. Berger said that greens would not be pushed this Christmas, owing to market conditions, though some orders had been taken and would be filled. He added that plants are selling well and all indications point to a great Christmas business.

Coal.

The statement was made in this column some time ago that the embargo on No. 1 buckwheat coal had been raised. This was fine, but soon afterwards the embargo was put on again and still remains in force, although No. 1 buckwheat coal can be bought. The situation is odd. The National Fuel Administrator has resigned, but his resignation has not been accepted. The local fuel administrators are still in office, but are expected to resign ere long. Soft coal and hard coal smaller than No. 1 buckwheat are free to all, while No. 1 buckwheat coal is openly offered by some dealers who say they have a surplus of this size.

Flowertown.

It is perfectly proper to take license with a name for an occasion. The name of the hamlet in question is spelled Flourtown. It is changed to Flowertown for this week only, as the showmen say, because George E. Campbell has a Christmas crop. So Flowertown it is in good earnest, just for the holidays. Richmond and Prima Donna are in full bloom. This getting roses in flower for Christmas is a good example of the pennies and the cake. You go without for ten to twelve weeks to have them all at once, or, to be exact, you give up your fall crop to get a Christmas crop. Mr. Campbell has done this successfully with over half his place, keeping his Maryland and his Stotesbury for steady cutting, with some cropped for January.

The Richmond and Prima Donna houses are beautiful with quantities of buds just showing color. The timing has been carefully done. It looks as though the crop would be off to a head by New Year's day. Mr. Campbell jokingly said he was going to Florida if the Christmas crop sold well. He certainly deserves to go. He has worked hard and well; but if he should change his mind—why, he can walk through the greenhouses and enjoy those Richmonds and Prima Donnas. Nothing in Florida could be lovelier.

The Market.

Extraordinary conditions prevailed in the cut flower market just before Christmas. There was a marked scarcity of stock and all that arrived was eagerly cleaned up at prices far ahead of former years. Growers undoubtedly held back a considerable quantity of flowers, hoping for even higher prices, for which, however, there was not much likelihood, as the extremely high prices discouraged buying. Retailers pushed plants as much as possible, which also advanced in price, but not so much as cut flowers. The weather was remarkably clear and mild and this greatly favored the plantsmen and insured the plants being delivered in prime condition.

Roses sold at from $12 per hundred upward and all colors were in demand. Reds ordinarily sell far above other colors, but Ophelia brought as much as the higher colors, and whites, usually druggy at the holidays, sold well. Carnations sold at $12 to $15, a few fancy reds going higher. The clear, mild weather favored a large Christmas crop. Violets were scarce. Some nice Spencer peas were in and made up to $5 per hundred. Chrysanthemums were small and of poor quality as a rule. Cut poinsettias sold at from $3 to $6 per dozen bracts. Stevia, wallflowers and calendulas were in fair supply. Cattleyas sold at $9 to $15 per dozen, cypripediums at $2. The plant trade broke all records and cut flowers were a comparatively minor issue at the stores. Cyclamens were in the lead. Plants wholesaled at $7.50 each and a few specimens as high as $12. Begonias were second in favor, poinsettias also moving finely. The trade in evergreens was good, but the high prices of everything restricted buying somewhat.

We want to express our hearty appreciation for the generous orders that have been entrusted to us and we hope they may be continued throughout 1919.

We want our friends to know that while our service has not been what we had hoped and tried hard to make it, conditions were extremely adverse. The war, the draft, the influenza, transportation, all held us back. We ask our friends to make allowances.

Club Meeting.

There was a good attendance at the meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club December 17, considering the nearness of the date to the holidays. Resolutions on the death of John E. Blocksidge, killed in action in France, were brought in by the committee, W. N. Craig, J. L. Smith and Peter M. Miller, and adopted. A most interesting letter was read from one of the club members, Norman W. Hunter, a member of the Pennsylvania engineers, who had been in almost continuous action since the great July offensive opened.

The president appointed Messrs. D. Finlayson, James Warr, W. C. Rust, J. R. Ness and P. J. Turley as tellers to distribute, sort and count ballots for the annual election. These officers were elected: President, A. K. Rogers; vice-president, Carl P. Sweetser; secretary, W. N. Craig; treasurer, H. J. Goddard; executive committee, James Methven, James Wheeler, H. H. Bartsch, W. H. Judd and Walter H. Golby. Messrs. Wheeler, Bartsch and Golby are now members.

It was voted to have a ladies' night at the January meeting, when officers are to be installed. It was also voted, after remarks by F. E. Palmer, Henry Penn and H. H. Bartsch, to hold a Victory banquet in February. Exhibits included two large vases of handsome poinsettias from the W. W. Edgar Co., which were awarded a vote of thanks. Chrysanthemum Mistletoe, from Janiten & Wollrath Co., was given honorable mention. Walter H. Golby received a cultural report of merit for a pair of grandly flowered Cattleya Percivaliana. He also showed Chinese artichokes. L. D. Towle had a handsome, pure white cattleya, Lady Veitch, awarded honorable mention. W. N. Craig received a similar award for a tall-growing Stevia serrata. He also showed the dwarf variety, but considers the taller much the better variety for country florists to grow.

H. A. Stevens received honorable mention for his new cerise-pink carnation, of which the committee thought most favorably.

For the good of the order, there were many valuable suggestions, and floral art, the packing of plants, proper accounting and other interesting subjects were suggested for future lectures and discussions.

Herman H. Bartsch spoke on "Growing Plants for the Christmas Trade." He said in substance: "Azaleas have been, in my estimation, the queen of Christmas flowers for years, especially the variety Mme. Petrick, which flowers easily for the holidays. Now, with the elimination of azaleas, the leading plants are cyclamens, sometimes easy to do, but there are many 'ifs,' 'buts' and 'whys' in their culture. At times they are the most satisfactory plant for both seller and buyer, are easily packed and delivered in excellent condition and there is no trouble in selling every presentable plant each year. Next in popularity come begonias, the Lorraine begonia, first grown commercially by W. W. Edgar Co., who procured 750 plants from H. B. May, of Edmonton, London, probably bringing more Christmas money to growers than any other plant. It has been outclassed of late years by Glory of Cincinnati, which in turn is being gradually displaced by Melior, the latter being of a better color, without the objectionable magenta of Cincinnati. It shows up better also under artificial light. Melior is also a splendid house plant. It may be propagated as late

FRAT-M
FRATERNAL EMBLEMS

What are they?
They are 4-inch reproductions of Fraternal Emblems embossed in gold and the colors demanded by each Fraternal Order.

How are they used?
They are attached to the ribbon or chiffon of any floral offering.

Why are they of such help to the Florist?
They save flowers, as the colors demanded by each Order are embossed on the Frat-M. They save wire designs; for instance, any plain spray with a Frat-M attached becomes a fraternal piece. Think of what this means, with a shortage of wire and flowers as scarce and high as theyare everywhere this winter. They save lettering. Think of that. If attached to door badges alone, they are worth many times their cost.

What do they cost?
They cost 20c each, or $2.00 a dozen cash, and should retail for 50c each, or $6.00 per dozen. An order of two dozen ($4.00 cash) gets the exclusive use of Frat-M's for one year in cities of 25,000 or less. They can be bought from your wholesale supply house, or the as August and September and the small plants from late propagation are in heavy demand. The newer Mrs. Peterson proves a good seller.

"Poinsettias come next in favor. Pans with three to six plants each sell well, especially if the holiday weather is not too severe. The secret of keeping the foliage on the plants means everything with poinsettias. In benches there is no trouble in keeping the foliage to the ground, but it is otherwise with plants in pots and pans. When cutting poinsettias, a gasoline torch may be used to sear the bottoms, when cut. July cuttings are best for pans and these, as soon as made, should be thrown into fresh cold water and covered with paper until placed in the sand. If once wilted they are useless. I do not lose five per cent of my cuttings each season.

"Ardisias are splendid Christmas plants. They are of slow growth and will never be a cheap plant. Anyone with well berried plants 4 years old can easily sell them at $5 to $6 each at wholesale. Oranges cannot be grown by everyone. They are a satisfactory house plant, as are ardisias. Jerusalem cherries are not so lasting, but are of easy culture and appeal to many. Chinese peppers should not be sown before June, or they become too large for Christmas.

"Freesias prove satisfactory holiday plants in pots and pans. California bulbs are a great asset, as they can easily be flowered for Christmas. Euphorbia jacquiniæflora is an old plant which, however, is new to many, and it sells well in a variety of sizes. Camellias prove a disappointing holiday plant, as, in the average steam heated home, buds dry up and fall off. Crotons, dracænas and other colored plants lend themselves admirably to made-up combinations, but retailers ought to do this making up, as they usually have a more æsthetic taste in color harmonies than the average grower. A good yellow plant is much needed and would sell well."

In the resultant discussion, Primula floribunda and Linum tetragynum were mentioned as desirable yellow Christmas plants. William Downs said he always had a pan of water boiling, in which he held the bottoms of the stems of poinsettias for a couple of minutes and then the bracts never wilted.

Primula chinensis in bright colors, Mr. Bartsch said, was a good holiday plant, but he had dropped the culture of the handsome P. obconica, owing to its poisonous properties, although he still had many calls for it.

Henry Penn spoke entertainingly on "Handling Christmas Plants at the Store." He said this was a good time for optimism, that the florists had stood the hardest of tests and remained optimistic. He liked to spend his Sundays looking over the growers. He believed that the men with long vision usually came out on top. One optimist makes others. Some always saw blue and would ever remain in the rear of the procession. The retailers had made a big advance compared with ten years ago. He heard retailers sometimes boast of making a sale of plants at $25 each; personally he preferred to make many sales at about $4 and cater to the public wants and not high prices.

At Christmas, 1917, his firm's sales on the three days of the holiday trade totaled 2,368 plants. He secured additional assistants from the Harvard college employment bureau. Prices were plainly marked on all plants. He considered the delivery much harder than the selling, particularly in severe weather. Last year he employed sixty-eight boys and twenty-four autos in making deliveries and the average cost was 28¾ cents per plant for delivery. The average cost worked out at about $4 per plant. Higher prices and fewer orders he would consider less healthy.

He considered cyclamens the most satisfactory Christmas plant for both seller and buyer and they pack easily. Poinsettias, on the other hand, he said, were hard to pack. Two or three years ago he lost thirty-three per cent of his deliveries, owing to deficient wrapping during a cold wave, and all such plants were replaced. The growers allowed some of their packers to come in, which helped a great deal at the holidays.

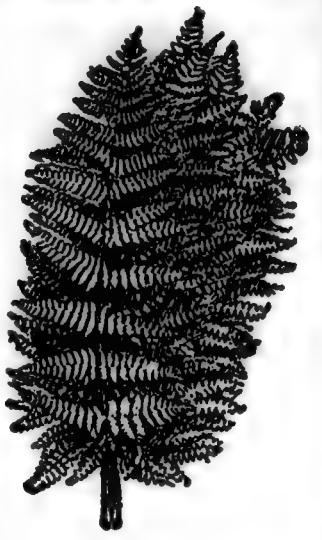
Hearty votes of thanks were tendered Messrs. Bartsch and Penn for their interesting talks.



Various Notes.

James Wheeler had a grand crop of carnations for the holidays. He has a bench of a new seedling, bright cerise in color, which sells well. Aviator has proved an excellent scarlet and Doris a free crimson. Matchless fills the bill as a white, with Pink Delight and Ward as pinks. Of Benora he has over 9,000 plants and they were a mass of blooms and buds for the Christmas trade.

The W. W. Edgar Co. never experienced such a demand for pot plants and Mr. Bartsch says if they had had treble their quota, all would have gone, as they were simply swamped with orders by mail, telephone and telegraph, to say nothing of the stream of callers. They have many thousands of young cyclamens which have just been transferred to flats and all available space will now be given to Easter and bedding plants.

Janiten & Wollrath Co. was cleaned out of everything salable. The firm had specimen cyclamens in 14-inch tubs which were of remarkable size and quality. They have 15,000 young cyclamens for next season and some 35,000 begonia leaves are rooted or rooting in the sand. For Easter they will grow roses, French hydrangeas, yellow and white marguerites and show pelargoniums principally.

There is a return of the influenza epidemic and cases are more numerous than for a couple of months. The Christmas crowds at stores, theaters and on cars make matters worse and, while fatal cases are not so numerous as last October, there is a possibility that restrictions may be put in force here again. In a number of towns and cities near Boston schools have been closed for several weeks.

John A. Nelson & Son, of Framingham, in addition to their usual fine lot of carnations, picked splendid pink Spencer sweet peas for the holidays.

William Miller, younger brother of Peter M. Miller, enlisted as soon as war was declared, being among the first to leave Boston. He is now a sergeant major in the British Royal Field Artillery and has served three years at Salonica and eight months in France. He has been three times in a hospital wounded, but is now hale and hearty and has just sent his brother a snapshot of a handsome lassie, who, he says, is his wife.

The Fottler, Fiske, Rawson Co. showed handsome cyclamens, begonias and other holiday plants. They also had a fine lot of evergreens cut and in tubs.

Owing to the halls of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society being rented January 21, the ladies' night of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club will be held January 28. The Victory banquet will occur February 26.

Norman W. Hunter, a member of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, in a recent interesting letter, speaks of seeing a German machine gunner shackled by both ankles to the tracks of a narrow gauge railroad. Previously he had discredited the stories he had heard of gunners being fastened in this way.

W. J. Collins, of Carter's Tested Seeds, Inc., has just received news of the death of his brother, James, in the late great offensive in France. He was a member of the Gordon Highlanders' regiment and had seen much service. W. N. C.

Notice of the death of Andrew Masson will be found in the obituary column.

INDEXING THE REVIEW.

Recently we saw an account of a subscriber who was cutting out of The Review all the articles he wished to preserve and pasting them in a book, and then devising some sort of an index to make the scrapbook usable. We have devised a method which, I believe, beats that all hollow.

We number the copies of The Review from 1 to 52 and have them standing in a rack on the desk. Then, for index, we get a box of cards, 200 or more, and cut a piece of pasteboard half the width of the cards to slip down between the cards of each letter. You may use ten cards under letter C, where you would use but one under L, but more cards may be added wherever needed.

Now take your copy of The Review. In looking through it, you may find an article on "Aster Blight" which you wish to refer to again. On your index card, you write under A—Aster blight, 1, p. 10. Farther over, on page 18, you find something about "The Culture of Heliotrope," which you wish to preserve and you index it under H—Heliotrope Culture, 1, p. 18.

So far as The Review articles go, this saves cutting and pasting and the attendant difficulty of utilizing articles printed on both sides of a page, but when it comes to articles from other sources you wish to index, a dab of paste on some advertising page will stick it in anywhere so that it will not get lost, yet can be indexed like other matter. A second year's file of Reviews could be indexed similarly, or the prized information could be cut out and put into your first file. H. C. Bateham.

[There is a serial number on the back of each issue of The Review. Why not use that number and keep stacking up the papers in order as they come?—Ed.]

TOP-HEAVY PRIMULAS.

Our primroses are giving trouble; many of their leaves are either dying or making but little growth. Are they always weak in the neck? They seem to be top-heavy and wobble around as if breaking off near the ground.

R. F. C.—Idaho.

You do not state which primroses you are growing. There are several sorts that are used for winter flowering and all are of simple culture. They thrive best in a compost containing one-fourth to one-third of leaf-mold, not too much decayed, and a good dose of sharp sand to give the compost porosity. All need moderately cool treatment and the usual cause of their becoming leggy is too much heat and shade, or keeping them too far from the glass. P. chinensis is naturally stocky; so is P. obconica. P. malacoides is a better grower and, unless grown cool and airy, will spread too much. The fact that your plants are "wobbly" at the neck would indicate insufficient firming at potting time and leaving the crowns a little too high. Give all the primulas a temperature of 45 degrees at night, full sun, free ventilation and a somewhat dry atmosphere.

C. W.

Schenectady, N. Y.—A. J. Grupe, who, in addition to the range of houses operated by his son Arthur, has charge of the floral department of one of the largest department stores in the city, was interviewed on his return from a tour of the plant growers in this vicinity and expresses the opinion that it would be difficult to find better grown stock, both in variety and size, than he saw. It gives evidence of close application on the part of the growers and is encouraging as to possibilities, even in the face of many unpreventable obstacles.

Seed Trade News

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

President, F. W. Bolgiano, Washington, D. C.; secretary-treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

NOTICE of the death of Wilbur A. Fisk, president of the W. E. Barrett Co., Providence, R. I., will be found in the obituary column of this issue.

THE 1919 catalogues nearly all will employ the cental system—no more quarts, pecks or bushels, everything by the pound.

DURING the last two seed selling seasons there has been a sharp falling off in the demand for flower seeds. It should come back this season.

THE early-bird seed catalogue arrived December 23, somewhat later than usual. This time it was the 1919 general catalogue of the Holmes-Letherman Seed Co., Canton, O.

ISAAC BUNTING, bulb exporter, Yokohama, Japan, is visiting the trade in the United States. At Chicago last week he said no lilies can be expected to come over this season even if restrictions presently are raised.

"MAY the glories of liberty shine each day on our friends and homes in the U. S. A." is the Christmas greeting on an attractive card which is being sent to the trade by Robert Nicholson, of the Home of Purity Brand Seeds, Dallas, Tex.

THE War Trade Board has withdrawn the embargo on the importation of plants and bulbs from the country of origin and will issue import licenses without restriction. This will let everything come in until June 1, 1919, when the new quarantine goes into effect.

PRODUCTION of lily bulbs in Bermuda has "greatly diminished," according to the annual report of Ethelbert Watts, U. S. consul general at Hamilton. The exports of bulbs decreased more than fifteen per cent in 1917, as compared with 1916, dropping from 1,224 to 1,009 cases.

SEED CORN TO CANADA.

The War Trade Board, after consultation with the United States Department of Agriculture and the Seed Commissioner of the Canadian Department of Agriculture, announces in a new ruling (W. T. B. R. 422) that on and after December 10, 1918, licenses will be granted for a limited quantity of seed corn (without restriction as to varieties) for export to Canada.

All applications for licenses to export seed corn to Canada in quantities exceeding 100 bushels must have attached thereto a Canadian import permit, issued by the Canada Food Board, Ottawa, Canada, to the consignee for the quantity specified in the application for export license.

Arrangements have been made with the Canada Food Board whereby applications for licenses to export seed corn in quantities of 100 bushels or less need not be accompanied by a Canadian import permit.

now may not only be overcome, but may also be turned to the permanent advantage of the empire,'' says one of the British horticultural writers. ''Among these difficulties were, first, the lack of transport, and second, the lack of labor.

''As is well known, the shortage of transport and the activity of the submarines seriously restricted the free exchange of commodities. Both export and import were interfered with. Pedigree stock seeds, raised in this country and ordinarily sent abroad to better seed-raising districts for producing seed in large quantities, were often held up, and, as a consequence, the supplies, which should be returned to this country, were not forthcoming. It might be argued that this was not altogether a disadvantage, inasmuch as it should lead to a large increase of seed-raising in this country. But, unfortunately, this happy solution was by no means always practicable, and this for two reasons. In the first place, there are important vegetables—and also flowers—which fail to ripen their seeds well in this country. This, we believe, is the case with cauliflower, carrot and onion, and, among flowers, phlox and aster. In the second place, with the lack of labor, many seed farmers, who were in the habit of accepting contracts for seed raising, were less disposed than in normal times to enter into contracts. It is probable, also, that with the higher prospective prices for purely agricultural crops, farmers are finding, on balancing probable profits and amount of labor available, that it is more profitable for them to grow corn than to raise vegetable crops for seed. The urgent need for increasing the wheat supply, moreover, caused agriculturists generally to look with disfavor on the farmer who gave up part of his land to growing minor crops. The fact that this prejudice is due to shortsightedness did not mitigate the seriousness of its effect. Since the war ended, however, the outlook of the seed industry is more cheerful.

''Yet, by a strange irony, the conditions offered an opportunity for the drastic revision of our customs with respect to seed-raising. In the past a large section of this trade has been allowed to pass into German hands. With their customary thoroughness, the Germans had made something like a monopoly of the seed trade in some parts of the world. Of the seed they sold, some was of their own growing, but much was raised by other countries and purchased and sold again by the Germans. There would seem to be no reason why much of this trade should not now pass permanently into the hands of British firms. It is true, as we have said, that not all seeds can be raised successfully on a large scale in this country; but, on the other hand, many of the seeds of vegetables and flowers might quite easily be raised here. In any case, the empire, which comprises every soil and every climate, gives ample ground for the raising of all the seeds of every kind of vegetable and flower which we require. Why, therefore, should not the great firms of British seedsmen seek the coöperation of the government and endeavor to arrange a system of seed-raising within the empire, which should free them and ourselves for the future of the risk of finding our supplies cut off or curtailed in time of war?

"At present the working up of pedigree stocks—raised with infinite pains in this country—is by no means always satisfactory. Those stocks sent to another country may or may not be properly attended to, even though the senders themselves dispatch skilled men to supervise the roguing. As a result, the seed derived from these stocks is not always as 'true' as it should be, and that through no fault of our seed trade. Specialized seed-growing stations within the empire, properly staffed, and coöperating with the great seed firms to secure the production and multiplication of the best seeds, would be of the greatest benefit to British horticulture, and should be of no less benefit to the seed industry. The loss of crop from the growing of inferior or untrue varieties is often great, and that loss is almost entirely avoidable. In a better organized empire, the limitations of what can be achieved by the individual and what must depend on collective action will be recognized. If this recognition were to be applied to the seed industry, it would result in the further specialization of that already complex business. It would put the resources of British science at the disposal of the seedsmen engaged in improving the strains of plants, and it would make provision for the raising of the best strains in the most suitable climates."

Minneapolis, Minn. — A. Norlander, proprietor of the Minneapolis Nursery, has 200,000 willow sprays for forcing, ranging from twelve inches to five feet in length. He says he can cut from 5,000 to 8,000 per week.

S. A. F. PUBLICITY CAMPAIGN.

Plans for the Winter.

During the months of January and February our committees have arranged to run a series of six advertisements through about twenty-eight magazines of national circulation, some being given three insertions and others two. One insertion through the whole list will give us an aggregate circulation of 10,000,000, without taking into consideration the fact that the number of readers, as generally computed, will be at least four times as many. The other insertions will be in the same proportion.

To get the full benefit of this widespread publicity, florists who are wise will connect their establishments with the magazine advertising by running reproductions of these advertisements in their local newspapers, over their own names. To make this possible, our promotion bureau is preparing electrotypes, to fit a two-column space in any newspaper. They are reproductions of the magazine advertisements. Each carries our slogan, "Say It with Flowers," as a display headline, a suitable illustration, and one of the following subheads to appropriate reading matter: "For Weddings;" "On St. Valentine's Day;" "For the Sick Room;" "On Her Birthday;" "On His Birthday;" "For Gifts."

Plates Are Ready.

The plates occupy less space than those previously put out by the bureau, and may be used as auxiliaries to the other series. Proofs of the plates and other information regarding this publicity may be had upon request made to the secretary.

Start the New Year well by connecting personal effort with the efforts of the committees, and the demand for flowers is sure to increase. In the year just closing, the beneficial results of the campaign of publicity have been surprisingly noticeable, and, with all dark clouds behind us and a clear business horizon before us, he would, indeed, be a pessimist who could doubt the efficacy of a strong, vigorous and lasting campaign for publicity for flowers.

Contributions toward the expense of the 1919 campaign are now most welcome. Make a decision to help us one of your New Year's resolutions.

He is negotiating for a line of florists' boxes; in fact, it is his intention to carry everything that the trade uses. There is no reason why an establishment of this sort should not prosper, for the market is here, and there is no doubt that a city of 700,000 inhabitants will support a first-class florists' supply house.

town reveals the information that a greater number of shipments were made by the Ove Gnatt Co. during the first half of December than had ever been handled at the express office for any other shipper and it is well to remember that La Porte is a large manufacturing town. A walk down the depot platform to the telegraph agent also brought out the information that more telegraph communications recently have been received by the Ove Gnatt Co. than had ever been received by any one concern in this town. Ove Gnatt and his business associates, Fred and Henry Henoch, are highly pleased over the season's business. The concern has had steady growth since the business was started by Mr. Gnatt, seven years ago. The number of employees has been doubled in the last year, and from indications the 4-story building soon will have to be enlarged.

What do you think she thought?

When a cultured woman customer heard one of your clerks come so far from the right pronunciation of the name of a flower or plant that she did not recognize it, what do you think she thought of your store? Sometimes, too, your clerks are "off" on the spelling of technical names. In either case the

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

The flower shop windows were dressed in their Christmas best for the holiday and they certainly were gorgeous and much admired by the throngs of holiday shoppers. Business was excellent. Christmas festivities taxed the resources of the florists to the utmost, but flowers fortunately were plentiful and the public unusually lavish in expenditure, so everybody was happy. Prices, too, were good.

Various Notes.

The monthly meeting of the Portland Floral Society was held December 17. It was well attended, despite the fact that everybody was so busy with the Christmas rush. After the usual routine business, lunch was served and then card games were played.

Chappell's Floral Shop will move January 1 to 331 Morrison street, in the N. W. bank building. Additional space will be secured by the use of a mezzanine floor for a workroom. The new location is considered ideal, being in the shopping district. The store will be up-to-date in every particular, with mirrors all around the walls. H. K.

LOS ANGELES.

The Market.

Everyone as busy as a bee and an everlasting scramble to get hold of stock, describes the situation the week before Christmas. There was every probability of an entire clean-up of everything, for the retailers were camped on the trail of the growers and wholesalers and orders were refused daily. The weather was all that could be desired. Warmer nights were hoped for, to increase production, which was far from sufficient for shipping orders. Greens were in brisk demand and there never was such a call for wreaths and garlands. Plants were scarce and doubtless will have cleaned up closely in the Christmas rush.

Various Notes.

As showing how well sweet peas do by the seaside, Miss H. Vetter, of Hermosa Beach, is cutting from a fall sowing of Zvolanek's winter-flowering varieties and they are extra fine. The blooms are large, of clear, decided colors, with long, stiff stems. They should be good property now.

J. M. Grout, well known as a landscape gardener in this section, has taken charge of a 1,400-acre citrus ranch near San Fernando.

At the nursery at Montebello where Harry Bailey grows his asparagus seed, everything looks especially promising. The plumosus seed is just beginning to ripen and is hanging like bunches of grapes. Mr. Bailey has his rows planted a long distance apart, so that sun and air play freely about the plants, insuring perfect ripening of the seed and making it easy to gather it. Freesias also are grown here by the million and Mr. Bailey says he never had his plants looking so well. A good, true strain of Purity is seen here, most of the bulbs being shipped to eastern firms.

C. E. Morton, of Phoenix, Ariz., was a visitor last week, Mrs. Morton having returned home. Their son, Henry, is still in camp at San Pedro.

Arthur Gleave, of Santa Barbara, has been in town this week looking up stock for the holidays.

"Business is too good," says Tony Tassano, of Tassano Bros. This firm certainly is shipping and handling quantities of stock.

W. Armacost & Co., the L. A. Floral Co. and S. Murata have all been working to the limit in the effort to fill the orders stacked up for Christmas.

H. R. Richards.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Not for years have flowers been so scarce or prices so high. A week before Christmas carnations cleaned up at from $2 to $2.50 per bunch, whereas last year $1 was the top price Christmas eve. Roses have found a ready market at banner prices and the same condition prevailed all along the line. Orders have poured in from every direction, but, owing to the shortage of flowers in the Bay section, only a small proportion of them could be filled, as there has been little surplus after local requirements were taken care of. With cut flowers at a premium, it is a question with retail buyers of being able to get stock at any price, rather than what it will cost them. There has been a strong effort made to keep prices standard in San Francisco, but it begins to look as though in future it would be the policy of the growers and wholesalers to charge all the market will stand when flowers are in demand, on the ground that they have to take whatever is offered when there is a surplus. Some of the retailers fear a check on business, however, if prices go too high, as they find it hard to impress upon Californians that there is actually a shortage of flowers such as to justify the advance in prices. Violets are not especially good, but there is little ground for complaint about other flowers as to quality. Old-timers in the business claim the roses were never better. A few sweet peas are offered, but not enough to cut much figure in the daily supplies. Gardenias and orchids are equal to the demand. Heather is well taken. Oregon holly is scarce and high, also California red berries.

It is expected plants will have cleaned up closely in the holiday rush, but unless the demand be found to exceed that of previous years, large downtown establishments did not anticipate an acute shortage, as they succeeded in getting as large stocks as usual. Azaleas were conspicuous by their absence, but poinsettias and cyclamens were much in evidence. Potted heather formed a prominent feature at several of the stores and so did begonias.

Various Notes.

Shellgrain & Ritter is the name of the new florists' firm which opened for business at 148 Kearny street December 13. The partners are C. F. Shellgrain and Emile P. Ritter, both of whom have had long experience in the business. The former was identified with the old firm of Sievers & Boland, which was located at 33 Post street before the great fire of 1906 and later with J. B. Boland for nearly thirty years. Mr. Ritter is a well known nurseryman and was also with the Boland business for a good many years. The members having been associated with each other for a long time, the new partnership promises to be a thoroughly congenial one. To help out further, Charles Jellett, former bookkeeper at the Boland store, has gone with the new company. Messrs. Shellgrain and Ritter are well satisfied with initial business, sales having been heavy since the first day. The store has a wide frontage on Kearny street, providing excellent display facilities, and the interior is conveniently and attractively arranged. When the final touches are put on, including the installation of additional wall mirrors, there will be nothing left to be desired from any standpoint.

December 16 was opening day for the new store of C. C. Navlet & Co., on Market street, off First street. Louis Picetti, who had charge of the branch formerly maintained in the Emporium, is manager. He is assisted by his brother John. The location is considered especially favorable for the seed and plant departments of the business, and it is believed cut flowers will have a good sale also, although this line, to start with, is being handled on a small scale. There was a rush of business the first day, according to Mr. Picetti, when many opening specials were offered, especially in the way of flowering plants. Each visitor was presented with a package of giant-flowering aster seed. In the arrangement of the store, cut flowers and plants extend down one side, and the other side is largely taken up with seed drawers, garden tools, etc., while bulb bins occupy the center space toward the rear.

The use of the adjoining store was secured to accommodate overflow holiday stock. It was filled with cyclamens, poinsettias, begonias and other potted plants.

The downtown florists' establishments generally had attractive Christmas displays, which no doubt exerted a strong influence in encouraging liberal expenditures for cut flowers and plants for gifts as well as home adornment.

Podesta & Baldocchi had a wonderful display of plants, including tubs of poinsettias selling for $35, $40 and $50. They made a big showing of heather also, and had a fine assortment of cyclamens and ferns. Few begonias were offered at this establishment, and Mr. Podesta says the reason for their absence is that his firm has not found them a satisfactory potted plant for holiday trade. Few people, he says, know how to take care of them and more complants come in about the blooms falling than in the case of any other flower.

B. M. Joseph's force was busy with funeral work while making holiday preparations. Flowers were higher here than ever before for Christmas, according to A. Cuneo, who buys for this store, but he looked for everything to clean up in the rush.

The Art Floral Co. had a wide assortment of fancy plant arrangements and combinations for the holiday trade, many of which were designed by P. V. Matraia, head of the business. This firm is proud of the fact that its members and employees went 100 per cent in the Red Cross membership campaign, as they had done in previous Liberty Loan and other war drives.

Mrs. Copeland, who, with her daughter, succeeded the Misses Hannon on Sutter street, made a holiday specialty of cone wreaths and garlands, with excellent success. The wreaths were made especially for this establishment and hundreds of them sold. Another good selling novelty was desert holly in unique arrangements. This comes from near Death Valley, in southern California. Business generally is good, Mrs. Copeland says. She bought heavily for Christmas and looked for a close clean-up.

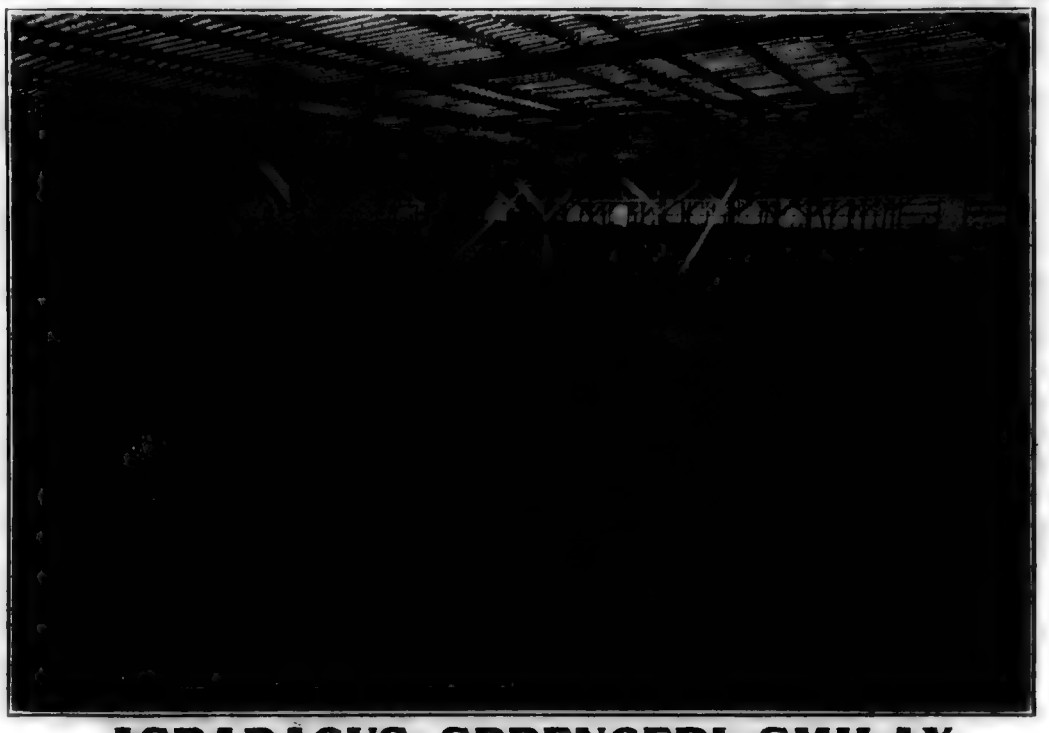
Arthur Gleave, of Santa Barbara, Cal., was a recent visitor in San Francisco, looking up stock.

E. A. Wallace, formerly in business in Victoria, B. C., arrived in California recently and expects to make his home in the San Francisco Bay district. When the war started, he says the florists' business dropped to a minimum in Victoria and it is only now getting back to normal. Mr. Wallace already has a good many friends in the trade here, having lived in these parts between the years 1893 and 1898.

Peter Ferrari has a fine crop of white phalænopsis, which is in unusually strong demand, largely taking the place of lily of the valley in wedding bouquets and corsage work generally. A fine cut of pink phalænopsis was just in time for Christmas also. He could dispose of many more roses, were he fortunate enough to have the stock.

J. A. Axell, manager of the flower market of the E. W. McLellan Co., in Rush street, and V. Holmes, foreman of the nursery, in a final effort to get stock to fill holiday orders, made a tour of the nurseries and greenhouses in the Bay section December 15, but their trip did not help out much, as they found everyone practically sold out of plants and other holiday offerings. Mr. Axell says it was not a question of prices, but rather "How much can you let us have?" December business to date with his firm was said to be fifty per cent ahead of the corresponding month of 1917.

The United Flower & Supply Co. had a big showing of flowering plants, principally poinsettias and cyclamens, for which they allowed the growers twice what they paid for similar stock last year. This firm reports many orders for cut flowers, which it cannot fill on account of the general shortage.



Domoto Bros. are among the few growers in this vicinity who have azaleas this year. They are not satisfied with the quality, however, but their poinsettias are fine.

Enomoto & Co. have a large cut of roses for the holiday trade, including some fine Ophelia. Getting enough stock to fill orders seems to be the only limit on business, according to Mr. Enomoto.

C. Kooyman was delighted to welcome other members of his family arriving from Canada a few days ago, including his father and a brother, who plan to engage in the nursery business in California.

The next meeting of the Dahlia Society of California will take place in January, at which time there will be an election of directors for the coming year. Several of the fall meetings were suspended, due to the epidemic. The society recently issued its fall bulletin, which contains reports of the different shows held in the Bay section, an article on "Dahlias from Seed," and much other interesting reading matter for those interested in the culture of the dahlia. According to the bulletin, Leslie E. Doolittle, dahlia specialist, of Del Monte, Cal., has sent in an additional list of new varieties for registration. As one of the pioneers of the industry in this state, Mr. Doolittle deserves much credit for his ability and success in the exploitation of new varieties.

The Market.

Conditions are unfavorable for a large Christmas trade, as the stock is so badly depleted through the continued demand caused by the influenza epidemic that the growers are obliged to use artificial flowers more heavily this year than ever before. Chrysanthemums are practically off the market and good roses are bringing $4 to $7.50 per dozen. Carnations will sell at $3 to $3.50 per dozen, with a small per cent of the demand supplied. Cyclamens are scarce and most of the potted plants, except ferns, will no doubt be sold out before Christmas.

The Spokane Florist Co., Inc., reports that it will have plenty of poinsettias, also cyclamens to take the place of azaleas. H. E. Reimers says he will have plenty of potted poinsettias, peppers, primulas, geraniums and cyclamens, but that there will be no cut flowers for the trade. He expects good business, however, as the market in general is especially short on some of these items. R. W. N.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

The supply continues far short of needs and stock for Christmas undoubtedly will be far from what might be used if it were available. The plantsmen have done well for the holidays; in fact, they had about sold out all of their blooming plants by the middle of the month, while decorative plants of all kinds, and particularly ferns, have been moving well. Prices continue high.

The supply of roses is small and there are not nearly enough to take care of the wants of regular buyers in the market. Warm weather during the last week brought in a good cut of carnations for Christmas and they are helping wonderfully. Easter lilies are in fair supply. Some excellent callas may be had. Poinsettias are plentiful and sell well. Stevia cleans up nicely. The few snapdragons available sell quickly. Violets, both double and single, meet with a good demand. Lily of the valley and orchids are in demand. Among other offerings are sweet peas, Paper White narcissi, calendulas, forget-me-nots and baby primroses. A few chrysanthemums continue to come into the market from time to time. Greens are selling well.

Various Notes.

J. A. Peterson & Sons had sold their entire supply of plants for Christmas by the first week of this month. The stock of begonias and cyclamens was the finest they ever have had.

The Market.

The weather of the last week has been wonderful for producing stock, having been nearly that of the week before last Easter, mild, with no snow and plenty of sunshine. The market was active for winter greens and holly. Prices were steady and better than last year. It was easy also to get increased prices at retail. If only the market could have obtained all the flowers it could have taken care of! The supply of plants was good, but the stock was medium and low grade. Fancy plants were scarce. There was a great demand for cherry plants. The improved variety, Cleveland, has revived its popularity.

Cut flowers showed the effects of the sunny days. Roses were 100 per cent better; carnations had better stems and flowers. Stevia came in good supply and greens were plentiful. Carnations held steadily all the week at from $8 to $15 per hundred. F. P. A.

Buffalo, N. Y.—Robert Scott, speaking for the William Scott Co., says business is the best ever known, the sales for the first twelve days in December this year being exactly 101 per cent larger than those of the same days last year.

IF any nurseryman has ideas that he would like to get to the trade, this is his forum. The Review will be glad to print communications from members of the trade.

GEORGE J. SCHAEFER had charge of the exhibit of the Greening Nursery Co. at the convention of the Michigan State Horticultural Society held in Detroit recently.

T. J. DINSMORE, president of the Farmers Nursery Co., Troy, O., has returned to his office after eradicating the "flu" in his family, a siege of several weeks' duration.

ADVERTISING can do two things; it can create business, or it can divert business. Now would be an excellent time for the nurserymen's market development plan to be at work to divert the present demand to stock nurserymen are able to supply.

WILLIAM A. PETERSON, proprietor of Peterson Nursery, Chicago, has sold a tract of 14.5 acres on Bryn Mawr avenue, west of Crawford avenue, for $20,000. Mr. Peterson recently acquired title to the property from the State Bank of Chicago.

THE Western Association of Nurserymen will hold a meeting at Kansas City, Mo., January 22 and 23. President W. C. Reed, of Vincennes, Ind., says there will be an excellent program for the two days and he expects that the attendance will be large.

THE War Trade Board has withdrawn the embargo on the importation of plants and bulbs from the country of origin and will issue import licenses without restriction. This will let everything come in until June 1, 1919, when the new quarantine goes into effect.

"THERE has never been a time when it was not opportune to advise the planting of fruit-bearing trees and ornamental trees and shrubbery," said R. A. Gilliam, of Dallas, Tex., president of the Texas State Horticultural Society, in discussing plans for the convention of that body scheduled for January 21 and 22.

MUST REVISE METHODS.

Orlando Harrison Speaks Plainly.

"The demand for fruit trees during the last three months has been from fifty to 100 per cent greater than it was one, two and three years ago," says Orlando Harrison, of Harrison's Nurseries, Berlin, Md. "This is due to the fact that there has been a light trade in nursery lines for the last five years or more, so much so that there has been little profit in the fruit tree line.

"There is a limited amount of fruit trees to be found. There is a good supply of shade trees, like Norway maples and other standard trees, and there is going to be a strong demand. There is already a good demand in this line, because cities, suburban towns and even individuals have paid little or no attention to the planting of shade trees for the last two years. Now that business will open up and labor will be available, more trees will be planted in cities and the suburban towns by real estate men and by individuals, and we shall find a good, strong demand.

"The supply of ornamentals in the country is not so large, but the demand for them for the last two years has been exceedingly light.

"To the Middle of January"

Our home office in Boskoop tells us that we must be careful about accepting orders after that time. We had a big stock at the beginning of the season and still have a reasonable supply of

Rhododendrons, Buxus, Retinisporas, Juniperus, Thuya, Spruces, Japanese Maples, Clematis, Dutchman's Pipe, and other Holland Specialties

American nurserymen are planning for a big trade in ornamentals. This demand, with the announced import restrictions, is likely to create a shortage in many lines. We suggest that you take time by the forelock and send us your want list for quotation. Our wholesale catalogue is ready and will be mailed on request.

"One weakness of the nurserymen for the last ten or fifteen years has been that they have grown twice as many trees and plants as have been needed and for that reason we have pushed the sale of nursery stock hard, we have extended credit to every nook and corner of the country and the loss has been heavy.

Financing the Nurseries.

"I am of the candid opinion that if every nurseryman in the country would do his business strictly on a cash in advance basis and have the large dealers and consumers go to the nursery and select stock for themselves and others and secure their discounts, it would be far better for the men doing the buying and planting. In addition the nurserymen would not be carrying on their books hundreds and thousands of bad accounts that take from one to five years to collect. In doing this it has been necessary in the past to charge, in some cases, apparently exorbitant prices for goods to the man who actually did pay the bill.

"If this were done, we would be able to reduce the selling price of nursery stock to a minimum. But it must be borne in mind that the man with the spade and shovel must be paid more wages than he has received for the last ten or fifteen years. We will not return to old conditions; in fact, we have no desire to return to them, but we must pay the price to the people who actually do the work and the cost of growing nursery stock will be far in excess of what it has been in the past. Then let us sell nursery stock for what it cost us, plus a reasonable profit. It will be far better for the grower and for the man who buys and plants. The nursery business can be made more stable than it is at the present by adopting some or all of the above methods."

KANSAS CONDITIONS.

Reports from Kansas say that in the southwestern section of the country the nurserymen have had all the business they could handle with the present supply of labor. When the season's business was figured up, however, they found that they had done better in dollars and cents than in the last several years. Stock, such as peach, Japanese plum and grapevine, is practically exhausted in that section and the nurserymen are at a loss to know how they are going to secure enough to fill orders for spring delivery. Other fruit stock seems to be in sufficient supply to go around, but will be well cleaned up when the spring season is over.

Ornamentals have been in larger demand than usual this fall, and there seems an excellent prospect that this class of business will increase next spring. The nurserymen say, however, that prices have not advanced in proportion to the increased cost of labor and packing supplies of all kinds.

A FAVORABLE OUTLOOK.

"While the season just passed has been exceedingly unfavorable and stock has not made up as it promised to do," a representative of the Willis Nurseries, Ottawa, Kan., said recently, "still we have had a good trade this fall. Our opinion is that the outlook for a clean-up in the spring is more favorable than it has been for a long while. The peach and Japan plum trees are all closely picked up and we believe by the time the shipping season is over in the spring, fruit trees of all kinds will clean up closely.

"In regard to ornamentals, while there is a feeling in some localities that there is a surplus, still we have had a good trade in them this fall and we think what we have will clean up in good shape.

"Salesmen generally are doing better than they have done in the past and are getting better prices for the stock. We do not think there is nearly so much stock in the country as there was in 1917, but it will sell for more."

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Market.

The shortage of cut flowers is keenly felt and holiday prices prevail. During the last two weeks much Christmas stock has been moved, including a good supply of greens, which this year have been late in arriving. This stock, however, is of good quality and the better grades of both laurel and pine roping have moved well. In retail circles the demand for funeral work has been extremely heavy and this, and the shortage of stock, have made it hard to execute orders. However, many orders have been filled with designs, etc., made of seasonable greens and prepared leaves. The epidemic is still in our midst, many deaths are occurring and the demand for funeral work and the rush of Christmas trade have made the situation difficult. Another hardship is that some of the assistants in the stores are down with the "flu" at the time of the rush. Daily shipments include fine grades of stock, with fewer short-stemmed roses, which, however, are chiefly in demand at this time. Columbia, Sunburst, Russell, the Wards, Prima Donna, Scott Key, Shawyer and September Morn all have been in good demand. Carnations were particularly scarce and brought top-notch prices. The stock that arrived was good, and there was no difficulty in disposing of it. The demand for violets was stronger than for several weeks, but, owing to the shortage and consequent high prices, it is not expected that sales of violets will be normal. Sweet peas found their way into the market and sold readily. Calendulas and mignonette were seen and sold well. Easter lilies were in fair supply and they, with valley, have also advanced considerably in price. A few Paper Whites that came soon cleared. There was a good supply of all kinds of seasonable potted blooming plants, except poinsettias, which were not in good supply for the holidays.

Various Notes.

Private Bertram E. Pemberton, of the United States Army, now stationed in New York, is home on leave for Christmas. His regiment was about to embark when the news of the signing of the armistice came. He recently returned from San Diego, Cal.

Baskets of dried flowers and berries and artificial stuff have been in greater demand during the present season than ever before. All the stores are showing a large stock in these lines and the demand is reported brisk everywhere.

Cecil Lester, the supply assistant at George B. Hart's wholesale house, has been ill for the last few days with the "flu," but we are glad to hear that he is recovering. H. J. H.

The Market.

Dark, rainy weather the last two days of the week threatened to shorten up the supply of stock for Christmas, but the sun shone December 22 and the growers were more hopeful of having good cuts for the holiday. There was a great shortage of flowers for Christmas, but the supply of plants was better and promised to take care of all orders. Prices of cut flowers continue high. Funeral work still is heavy.

Various Notes.

The William Blackman Floral Co. had a good cut of carnations for Christmas, but not many roses. The supply of plants was large, although advance orders took nearly all of them before the holiday. George Blackman said that he would not buy roses because of the high prices, but would push carnations and plants instead. Walter Blackman has returned to a training camp at Waco, Tex., after a furlough of fifteen days.

C. L. Niednagel had his crop of Russell, Ophelia, Columbia, Milady and Killarney roses just right for Christmas and had good cuts.

Niednagel & Sons had a good supply of carnations in for Christmas. Several benches of Nebraska are exceptionally fine. They had a large batch of poinsettias, while there was a fair supply of sweet peas, stevia, calendulas and bouvardias.

M. C. Lockyear had excellent flowering plants, ferns and Asparagus Sprengeri for the holiday.

Karl Zeidler has returned from a hunting trip to Mississippi. The weather was fine and game abundant. His rose cut for Christmas was small, but he was long on carnations. Fred Zeidler, who is in the navy, is expected home by New Year's day.

Theodore Kuebler had a nice lot of Christmas plants. A letter from his son, Arthur, states that he is stationed on the Swiss border. E. L. F.

Peoria, Ill.—Charles Loveridge, who has a range of 85,000 feet of glass and employs a force of thirty-two people to operate it, reports business for the month of November, 1918, the greatest of any month in the year so far. October, 1918, was forty per cent better than the best month in 1917. He expects 1919 to be the banner year for florists and says that the spring of 1919 will see geraniums selling at $15 per hundred for 4-inch plants at wholesale. Cannas also are likely to have heavy sales in the season approaching. Mr. Loveridge believes the trade should prepare for the liveliest business yet enjoyed.

Is Steel Going Up or Down?

JUDGE GARY of the United States Steel Corporation, in his recent notable speech, said he thought the price of steel would go down.

This was followed by an expression from the Great Bethlehem Steel Company—that doubtless steel would go down, but doubtless it would again go up.

It is only fair to believe that with the war demands for steel over, there may be a temporary reduction in price.

Following, however, the same line of reasoning, won't it also go up when the tremendous demand for reconstruction steel and iron starts making itself felt, to fill both European and our own demands? Looking at it from this angle, the building of Iron Frame Greenhouses seems a good investment.

Suppose you should wait a year for possible lower prices, think of the profits you would lose.

After all, it's not so much what a house costs you, as what it profits you.

The way things are loosening up in all other lines of business, it does look as if there is a big harvest ahead for you greenhouse men.

When you are ready to talk business, say when and where, and we will be there.

Greenhouse Heating

Subscribers are invited to write the Editor of this Department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. But please do not ask The Review to make a choice of apparatus for you. The greenhouse heating equipment advertised in this paper is, we believe, the best for the trade to buy, and each article the best in the special field of its adaptation.

CARING FOR THE BOILER.

While nature and the U. S. Fuel Administration have been extremely kind to the growers this season, the former by providing unusually mild weather during the month of December, and the latter by removing the restrictions on consumption of coal, firemen should not forget the lessons they learned a year ago when the thermometer registered below zero temperatures and the boss was only two jumps ahead of having his range frozen up because of inability to get coal.

This season everyone was prepared; that is, all the coal that could be bought and paid for was stored, and the wiser of the growers had their boilers in tiptop shape for the season. However, now that conditions have eased up, there should be no let-down on the part of the firemen. Coal is expensive and no one can afford to do anything but get all he can out of it.

So far this winter the consumption of coal has been comparatively small and the boilers have not had a chance to accumulate soot and dirt in the flues. Good firemen keep the flues clean by regularly running the brushes through, or using the modern method of "blowing them out." The lower grade of coal now being used makes it more than ever necessary to do this work, as the soot accumulations will be heavier and the cleaning required oftener.

Heating engineers are agreed that a considerable part of the wastage of fuel in the boiler room is due to the fact that the brick settings are not airtight. They recommend that the brickwork be covered with some one of the preparations now on the market, and emphasize the fact that a tight setting means fuel saving.

NASHVILLE, TENN.

The Market.

The weather last week was warm, and things were in good shape for the holiday trade. The demand has been so heavy that it has been impossible to get much stock in cold storage against the Christmas rush. There was a heavy cut of both roses and carnations here for the holidays, but a shortage of holiday flowers.

Poinsettias were finer than usual this year, but the quantity was not so large as last year. There were other varieties of plants, but by far the largest number of plants for the holiday trade were cyclamens. There never were so many really good cyclamens shown in this city before.

There was no valley this year to speak of, but the early bulbous stock was in. Paper Whites have appeared and there was reason to believe there would be a few daffodils in time for Christmas.

Holly was seen on the streets, but most of it had few berries. In fact,

THE CUSTOMERS' INTEREST FIRST—Is the basis of the Kroeschell standard, and this principle makes the Kroeschell policy the most liberal of all in the greenhouse boiler business.

The great variety of boilers that we make places us in a commanding position. We make every type of boiler that is used, from the smallest house heater to the largest water tube steam boiler (600 horsepower). For the above reason we can furnish the most efficient boiler unit in every case.

It is the Kroeschell policy to supply only that type of boiler which is best suited to the conditions, and under no circumstances do we take any other stand.

Tennessee holly never was so poor. Mistletoe likewise was poor, and not well berried this year. The florists seldom handle these items, as they are hawked about the streets, but as they were not to be had, the demand was good for substitutes.

So many really beautiful Christmas wreaths have never been seen in the florists' shops before. They sold well, too. In fact, all along the line prices were higher this year than last. While it is possible that no more flowers were sold this Christmas than last, there surely was more money received for them.

The first violets came last week. They are good, but there are not enough of them.

Various Notes.

At J. F. Corbitt's place every house was full of young stock or cuttings, except two houses that were cut out because of the fuel regulations. In one of these a colony of hens was snugly domiciled. Mr. Corbitt is getting these houses ready for stock as fast as possible now and in another month his entire range will be full of stock for the spring trade. Help Save the "White Coal of Industry"

The boiling hot water resulting from condensation in your steam lines is worth money. You have paid for it in terms of coal. It contains valuable heat units. It is the "White Coal of Industry"—it should not be wasted.

And it need not be wasted. The Morehead Back-to-Boiler System will save it for you by returning it to the boiler at temperatures as high as 400 degrees Fahrenheit. It reduces coal consumption an average of 20%. At the same time your steam will be "drier" and more efficient; your production speeded up and profits increased.

ness and will confine his work to growing plants.

At the store of the Joy Floral Co. an extra heavy cut of orchids was seen. This firm had all it needed for the Christmas trade and the later varieties are breaking freely. We cannot forbear mentioning again two seedling carnations at this range that will be exhibited at the shows this winter and probably introduced to the public next year. Our favorite is an entirely new departure in carnations, a frilled and fringed flower fully four inches in diameter. It seems to be wonderfully free in blooming, the stems are long and the color is a delicate pink, shading to a deep shell-pink in the heart. The other is of the ordinary type, fully as large, and a pure rose-pink. It has been planted in large enough quantity to be tested beside the older varieties and thus far it is easily the best of its color.

Louis Haury & Sons had a nice lot of fancy ferns in their windows. Their pot plants were fine this year. At their greenhouses they had a good supply of cut flowers.

Geny Bros. did a heavy holiday business. Their poinsettias were exceptionally good, while they had the best specimens of solanum seen in this city. They cut roses and carnations freely, their growers having timed the crops just right.

McIntyre Bros. had a great display of cyclamens and other plants, also good sweet peas.

Charles Trichler sold out his stock early. As he does not do much retail work, he has no downtown place. He already is propagating for spring. He has the best collection of ferns in the south and is planning to specialize on this item. F. B.

Horticultural Society.

The annual meeting of the Nassau County Horticultural Society was held in Pembroke hall, Glen Cove, December 11. In spite of inclement weather there was a large attendance, with President Robert Jones in the chair. The judges appointed for the monthly exhibits were Thomas Twigg, William Norman and George Platt. The following awards were made: The president's special, for the best table decoration, for assistant gardeners only, was won by Henry Michaelson, assistant to George Ferguson; second, by John Gailens, assistant to William Churchill. Treasurer Ernest J. Brown presented a creditable annual report, showing the society had passed a successful season, both in point of membership and financially. S. J. Trepess was called on to conduct the election of officers, which resulted as follows: President, Joseph Adler; vice-president, Frank Watson; secretary, Ernest J. Brown, reëlected; corresponding secretary, Harry Goodband, reelected; trustee, elected for 3-year term, Robert Jones; executive committee, William Noonan, Thomas Henderson, Ben Sutherland, William Milstead, William Churchill, W. G. Carter and Thomas Meech.

There was a short discussion on "How to Grow Amaryllis and When to Rest It."

The secretary was directed to write a letter of condolence to the family of the late M. A. Hans, one of our members who died recently.

President-elect Joseph Adler made a short address and announcement was made of exhibits for the next meeting, which will consist of three cut poinsettias, twenty-five spikes of freesia and six ears of field corn. After the meeting an enjoyable social entertainment and smoker were held. John W. Everitt presided as toastmaster in his usual good style and local talent of merit was unearthed among the members. A feature of the evening was the clog dance by Andrew Wilson. H. G.

Gentlemen:-

Being that I have used a considerable amount of Permanite in my gutters, as well as for glazing, and want to say in its behalf that it is the finest article for use around greenhouses I have ever seen. You don't need any staples for glazing, the glass stays right where you put it. They are easily taken out and replaced when broken, I never saw the like of it. It is simply a god-send to greenhouse men, if they would only get to using it. If I build more greenhouses in the spring as I am contemplating now, I will need quite a large amount and certainly will give you people the order.

Thanking you for past favors, I beg to remain

The Market.

Weather conditions as a whole were favorable for Christmas. Stock of all kinds was scarce. The following plants were shown: Poinsettias, cyclamens, begonias, narcissi and a great number of made-up plant baskets, some of late chrysanthemums, which sold well at $2 to $15 each. Cut flower prices were as follows: Roses, $3 to $10 per dozen; carnations, $2.50 to $4 per dozen; Paper Whites, $1.50 and $2 per dozen; Yellow Paper Whites, $3 per dozen; Romans, $1.50 to $2; stevia, $1 to $1.50 per dozen; orchids, $2 each. There were no American Beauties on this market this year, but Russell and Columbia sold for no less than $6 per dozen; fine sweet peas from $3 to $5 per hundred. Orders came in earlier than last year and deliveries were made. Holly and mistletoe were plentiful, but prices remained high. The holly was good, but the mistletoe is short of berries. Christmas trees were high this year, prices ranging from 75 cents to $5 each.

Various Notes.

A. H. Dailey is showing some choice sweet peas and looks for a heavy demand for them.

A. J. McNutt cut choice Russell and Ophelia roses for the Christmas trade. He did not have nearly enough to go around, but made the best of them. Mrs. Ella Angus, with Mr. McNutt, was called to Youngstown, O., on account of the serious illness of her brother. Her absence crippled his force to some extent.

Mrs. Rosa Hall Ryno had fine plant baskets for Christmas. Located at the new Gray cemetery, she had a big demand for wreaths, etc., for grave decoration.

Baum's Home of Flowers, Inc., showed choice, made-up plant baskets of chrysanthemums, cyclamens, cherries, peppers and ferns, which sold rapidly; also choice Columbia and Russell roses, orchids and carnations, but only a third as many as last year. The higher prices made up the difference, however.

The Market.

Christmas business began early this year and its volume was satisfactory to the local florists. Cut flowers were high, with the result that many who otherwise would have purchased flowers bought potted plants. The sale of both was good, however. Poinsettias were unusually good this year. Begonias, cyclamens, peppers, heather, etc., sold well. They were of fine quality. Florists look forward to the coming year with much more hope than they did to the year 1918 when it began. The many restrictions which were put on the so-called nonessential industries were burdensome to the trade and, if they had continued, would have caused some of the florists to suspend business. This inconvenience was borne in the right spirit because of the knowledge that such action was necessary to win the war. But now that all bans have been removed the florists are looking forward to the rapid resumption of normal business.

Various Notes.

Philips Bros., Broad street, report that they had an excellent Christmas business. Christmas orders began coming in a week or ten days before Christmas, and continued to come in until Christmas day.

Henry A. Strobell, 931 Broad street, had handsome interior decorations during the week preceding Christmas. His windows were also attractive. He reports a good holiday trade. R. B. M.

Smith's Flower Shop reports an unusually large run on funeral work; also plants for Christmas.

Is there value to you in an endurance test of 45 years in greenhouse sash? It is reported to us that sash made of heart Cypress by a prominent greenhouse contractor in Chicago and placed in position in a greenhouse at Des Plaines, Ill., in 1868, are still doing service.

Jacob Fries, Bethlehem, Pa., has Cypress sash that have stood the racket for 30 years and are still on the job. And these are not isolated cases—they represent no more than a fair test of "The Wood Eternal" for greenhouse use.

It will serve you as well and save you the nuisance and expense of repairs and replacements.

The argument backed by such facts cannot be answered by mere talk. Ask the manufacturer or contractor who wants to give you a "substitute" for Cypress to cite you to an endurance test of 30 or 45 years to the credit of the so-called "substitute."

That is no more than a fair precaution on your part—good, ordinary business sense.

If he would meet the Cypress record with more talk, and no test, then there's a "nigger in that woodpile." You know you would better pass up the "substitute" and stick to the real article, which is Cypress.

"PECKY" CYPRESS. You greenhouse men know how common it looks and how uncommon it lasts. The U. S. Govt. Rept. (Forest Service Bul. 95) says—"That the disease (which produces the 'peck') has been a long time preying upon Cypress timber is apparent from an examination of Cypress logs dug from alluvial deposits many feet below the present level of the Gulf of Mexico. Some of that prehistoric timber is pecky, though it has been buried during a period estimated at no less than 30,000 years. . . . The effect of the disease (known as 'Pecky') . . . is believed to act as a preservative . . . and to hinder decay."

Is 30,000 years' "hindering of decay" long enough for YOUR greenhouse?

There is no known record of rotten "Pecky." Use nothing else for benches and bench standards. It is cheap, too.
A postal will do, a letter is better—either brings a booklet or two from the famous CYPRESS Pocket Library (a strictly authoritative reference work). Vol. 3 is all about "GREENHOUSES." It is FREE. Send for it. Also ask for Vol. 2, on "Pecky"—a money-saver. Take no hearsay. GET THE FACTS. Then ACT. Vol. 4 is the Barn Book; Vol. 20 is "All Farm Needs Book"; Vol. 36 is the "Carpentry Book," in which a dozen hard jobs of carpentry are made easy, and Vol. 37 is the Big, New Silo Book. All contain plans for building and are profusely illustrated.

Prince of Wales is destined to be the best florist's cut flower gladiolus ever known. Color, a clear, gorgeous, glistening salmon, melting to throat of the sweetest yellow. The Ophelia Rose of the gladiolus world. Extremely early (just after Pink Beauty), large flowered on tall, strong spike and grand multiplier. Every spike a bouquet. Excellent forcer, weeks ahead of America. I believe that I have the largest TRUE stock in America and can offer strong, flowering bulbs for propagating, 4 for 50c, $1.50 per doz., $10.00 per 100. Grow it once and you'll want a thousand. Raymond M. Champe, Walled Lake, Oakland County, Mich.

SPOTS ON BOUGAINVILLEAS.

Our bougainvilleas are affected with white spots on their leaves, which retard the growth and finally defoliate the plants. Please define the trouble and give the remedy. R. F. C.—Idaho.

The white spots on the bougainvilleas probably are only the result of sunburn caused by defective glass in the roof of your greenhouse. Moisture on the leaves when the sun's rays are focused through defective glass will cause sunburn such as is seen on your plants. Bougainvilleas are of easy culture. If allowed to become too dry at the roots, much foliage will be lost. They do not need a warm house, especially in the winter, and 40 degrees at night, with partial dryness at the roots, will answer. When it is desired to force them along, 60 degrees at night and occasional sprayings are recommended. C. W.

—what does this mean to YOU?

One thing—Opportunity

The AGMCO can wish you no better fortune than to Profit promptly and decisively, not only by the present awakening to business, but by all that it foreshadows for the future of the florist trade.

And so, Mr. Florist, may not conditions, your own efforts and the AGMCO organization work together to make this year, 1919,

FEED YOUR PLANTS and SAVE LABOR

Mr. Bahr Did

Read What He Says:

Highland Park, Illinois,
July 21, 1918.

Mr. F. A. Zenke,
Chicago, Ill.

Dear Mr. Zenke:

Nothing pleases me more than to acknowledge that you were right when you praised up "New Plant Life" to me, and there couldn't be a better proof of it than my asking you to forward five more gallons just as soon as you can.

The results obtained were most satisfactory to me; stunted, small bedding stock after about ten days began to show new life and kept on improving. With the existing lack of help instead of giving thousands of 1-2 inch Geraniums a final shift, three light doses of "New Life" were applied and I am more than pleased with the outcome.

Sincerely yours,
Fritz Bahr.

A BIG CHRISTMAS UNLIKE ANY OTHER

That supply and demand regulate the prices of cut flowers never was so well demonstrated as this Christmas, when supply was short and demand was the largest ever known: Prices went up, in some places to the point where buying was checked; then they went down until buying began again.

CHRISTMAS, 1918, has gone on record as the most unusual in the history of the florists' business; as a Christmas the like of which we probably never shall see again, for the many remarkable features were the direct result of outside influences working on this trade. They were caused by war, restricting the supply, and by peace, with prosperity, increasing the demand.

The only measure of the extent of the demand and the shortage in supply is the price asked—and prices were higher than ever before. Therein abided the somewhat numerous causes for dissatisfaction, which were individual, depending on how the prices affected one's own business.

There are few florists who would wish to see repeated the conditions of this Christmas. We all should be better off if there had been more stock, permitting lower prices and more sales. The best interests of the trade do not lie in few sales at large prices, but in many sales at rates that admit of a reasonable profit on each sale.

Retailers Resisted.

There are many strange features of the Christmas business, but the strangest of all is that the chief opposition to the prices established by supply and demand came, not from the public, but from the retail florists. It is quite true that numerous retail florists overbought. They misjudged their ability to sell certain kinds of cut flowers at the prices they asked and they had stock left, costly stock, to work up in funeral orders after the holiday. But numerous retailers took the situation so much to heart that they lost sight of the fact that their own interests are inextricably wound up with the future welfare of the trade as a whole; they openly deprecated the price of their principal every-day stock-in-trade and advised people to buy something else! Of course a majority of those who felt that the wholesale prices were unwarranted, even in face of the great shortage and unprecedented demand, reserved their denunciations for the ear of their wholesaler, but many went much farther. The illustration on this page, while it should not be taken as typical, shows how keenly some florists felt. It is from the Christmas ad a middle-western retailer printed in the newspapers of a city which has many florists.

The Public Paid.

As for the public, while many unquestionably were deterred from buying cut flowers because of the prices asked, there was no charge of unfairness and little complaint; the customer merely turned to something else, a plant if available, or a basket of boxwood and ruscus. Perhaps it took a little better grade of salesmanship, but not many sales were lost.

Another aspect of the average retail attitude was the general belief that the retailer should make the same margin of profit under the abnormal conditions that is necessary under ordinary conditions. Where a man grows the stock he retails he usually bases his prices on what his competitors charge, frequently asking just a little less instead of just a little more, but where a retailer draws his stock from a wholesale market the rule is to double the wholesale price, or just a little better. To maintain solvency this has been found imperative in the ordinary run of business, where the sale of a dozen carnations affords a margin of only 35 to 75 cents. It seemed to be the almost unanimous opinion that the same rule should be applied on carnations which cost 10 to 15 cents each, giving the retailer a margin of $1.20 to $1.80 on each dozen sold. Here and there a retailer, doing a good volume, was content with something less—and he had a record Christmas business.

The most difficulty was had with carnations. While all cut flowers and blooming plants were scarce and higher than usual, the prices were not advanced so much on other things as on carnations. Unprecedented conditions early in December had sent carnations up above the usual Christmas level. The same situation existed everywhere, although prices went higher in some markets than in others. Nearly everywhere they went high enough to check buying. In some places it extended to what might be called a carnation "boycott."

Then Prices Fell.

The newsletters in this issue reveal that in many cities carnations brought more money the week before Christmas than they did the day before Christmas. After the break buying was resumed, prices advanced, steadied and have held on a level with the value of other flowers.

There is scarcely any statement as to the Christmas business not contradicted by someone's experience, but it generally was true that the prices of the best grades of roses were not more than forty to fifty per cent above the prices of other years, which surely was not out of line with the prices of manufactured and non-perishable merchandise. Lower grades of roses were a little higher, comparatively, because the demand was stronger. Some minor items sold for double last year's prices because of extreme scarcity, but others, and big items, too, were not higher than before the war. One need not be old in the business to have seen Beauties at $12 to $15 a dozen and cattleyas $1 apiece.

ILLUSTRATING SOME RETAILERS' ATTITUDE

Plants and Accessories.

Blooming plants were far short of the demand, with the result that the average flower store did a larger part of its business than ever before with supply-house stock, with boxwood, ruscus, ribbons and other material for bright and catchy baskets, which, as a rule, sold like hot cakes at prices which, to say the least, represented a margin of profit no cut flower producer would have despised.

There are exceptions, probably, but on the whole the reduced quantity of material available brought more money than last year, or the year before, and Christmas of 1918 stands as the best on record in a large number of stores and greenhouses. The weather was the most "unusual" thing about the experience; it rained or snowed over almost the whole of the United States, from Colorado to the Atlantic, December 24. Christmas day was clear and cold. The storm no doubt kept many shoppers at home, but they scarcely were missed; the cold, however, added materially to the difficulties of delivery.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

POINSETTIAS.

Poinsettias never sold better than they have done this Christmas and reports from several large cities indicate that every presentable plant was disposed of. There are sure to be some left-overs with poor bracts or foliage and these can be laid below a greenhouse bench where they will not get much drip, and forgotten until spring. In the culture of Euphorbia jacquiniæflora, dryness will shrivel up and kill the plants, so be careful not to dry them off too severely. With poinsettias, absolute dryness at the roots for several months will merely ripen up the wood well.

EARLY AMARYLLIS.

Look over your stock of amaryllis plants, which probably are now being rested below one of the benches, and note whether any of them are sending up their flower stalks. All such should be removed and repotted, if necessary, but usually the removal of some of the surface soil and a top-dressing will suffice. Place the plants in a temperature of 55 to 60 degrees and if they can stand on a bench where they can get a little bottom heat, all the better. They do particularly well if plunged in partly decayed leaves or tan bark.

CALCEOLARIAS.

For an early Easter, calceolarias are out of the question, but when the great floral festival comes as late as April 20, it is easily possible to have them in flower. Like cinerarias, they require cold treatment. They seem to luxuriate in a damp, clammy old house which sends a chill down one's spine after warmer and brighter houses have been visited. The large, spotted, or self-colored calceolarias will never meet more than a moderate demand. They are curious and striking, but brittle and not easy to pack up and ship so as to arrive in presentable condition. On the other hand, the small, rich yellow rugosa variety, Golden Gem, is a splendid flower of easy propagation and never fails to flower abundantly. It is much tougher than the large herbaceous types and makes an ideal pot plant, as do the hybrids between Golden Gem and the large herbaceous type of which the Golden Stewartii is the best. Here is a desirable flowering plant for florists, easy of propagation from cuttings and of simple culture, which can be flowered for the coming Easter, when it undoubtedly will make a decided hit. If you have not grown any yet, plan to do so another season, especially if you are located in one of the colder states, for calceolarias cannot be grown successfully in the warm states.

OUTDOOR WORK.

December, 1918, has been a mild month compared with its predecessor, for which florists have abundant cause to be thankful. The mild weather conserved fuel and gave an opportunity such as we rarely get in December and January to plow up fallow land. Leave the ground rough over the winter, especially if the soil is retentive, and the frost will disintegrate and sweeten it. You, of course, plan to grow some asters of the Chinese type and, if you can manure and plow land for them this fall or early winter, it will be a great advantage. All heavy land is better if fall-plowed, and the addition of a liberal application of horse manure will help to open it up and give it warmth. The successful grower, no matter where he resides, plans to finish up as much outdoor work as possible at this season rather than to leave everything to the strenuous spring season.

SEED SOWING.

Catalogues are beginning to arrive and it is interesting to look them over these winter evenings and select seeds for the coming season. Place your orders early and you are sure to be well taken care of. The seedsmen greatly appreciate these early orders, as it helps to relieve in some measure the terrific later pressure. There are a few seeds which can be sown advantageously at once. Among these are: Asparagus plumosus and Sprengeri; Grevillea robusta, which makes a neat decorative plant; Aralia Sieboldii, another splendid foliage plant with handsome leaves of great substance; Vinca rosea, pentstemons, gloxinias, tuberous and fibrous-rooted begonias and Primula obconica, where extra fine plants are wanted for Thanksgiving and Christmas.

STANDARD FLOWERING PLANTS.

The standard flowering plants are becoming more popular each year. They cannot be grown as cheaply as dwarf plants of the same varieties, but people are willing to pay a good price for the various tree-grown flowering plants. Heliotropes make specially good standards. I have found seedlings more vigorous than cuttings. With all standards it is necessary to keep the plants staked, flowers and side shoots removed and tops pinched out, when the necessary height of stem has been reached. Fuchsias make excellent standards; so do geraniums, lantanas, marguerites, hydrangeas, genistas, streptosolens, chorizemas and chrysanthemums. Out of this number, heliotropes, fuchsias, geraniums and hydrangeas are of the greatest value to florists, and all are of easy culture. Make a start with the standards now.

CALLAS.

If your callas are in a night temperature which averages 55 degrees, they should now be producing a heavy crop of flowers. I find pot culture gives far more winter flowers than bench culture and I greatly prefer it. The plants succeed best when grown in single rows along the sides of the house and not when crowded together the full width of beds or benches. The number of flowers produced from the variety Godfrey is surprising, if the plants are furnished with a top-dressing of fine bone or Clay's fertilizer every eight or ten days at this season. The avidity with which the roots eat up the fertilizer is an eye-opener.

YOUNG CYCLAMENS.

Christmas this year has clearly proven that cyclamens are now the most popular and at the same time the most satisfactory of holiday plants. They realized higher prices than ever before and the demand far exceeded the supply. With these facts in mind, give the young cyclamens the best of attention. Probably they are still in flats. Keep them well up to the light in a temperature of 60 degrees and stir between the little plants occasionally. On bright days a fine spraying will prove beneficial. You can still sow seed and get plants large enough for 5-inch or 6-inch pots for next Christmas, but the sowing should be done without delay.

FLOWERING SHRUB SHOOTS.

Usually we do not see many of the forced deciduous shrubs, such as lilacs, Azalea mollis, apples, laburnums, etc., before the end of February, but it is possible to cut shoots from some of the large flowering shrubs, place them in water in a warm house and force them into bloom much earlier than plants. Forsythias are probably the easiest and most satisfactory of these to flower in water, but magnolias, early spiræas, like Thunbergii, Corchorus japonicus, the Japanese quince, ornamental apples and several other sorts can be forced into flower and will prove attractive in any window decoration.

FEEDING CARNATION PLANTS.

We would appreciate advice as to the proper feeding of our carnation plants. Our method has been to feed with pulverized sheep manure and bone meal, mixed in equal parts and spread thinly on the soil. We start the first part of January with the feeding and keep it up until April, at intervals of six weeks. However, our plants do not develop satisfactorily. They do not bear as many flowers as they should. They look healthy, but we note the stems are brittle. Would this indicate too little feeding? We would like to know the proper amount of feeding to use per square foot and if manure and bone meal should be used in equal parts. When should we start feeding? Does the time depend on the season or on the condition of the plants? Our plants do well and produce fine flowers during the first part of the season, while the soil is fresh and contains much nourishment, but the first part of January they start to drop off in production.

We grow White Wonder, Enchantress and White Enchantress, Philadelphia and Beacon. Sheep manure and bone meal are the only fertilizers we can get, although we have a good deal of Alphano Humus, which we have used for outdoor work. How would it do for feeding carnations? Our temperature is kept around 50 degrees.

C. P. & S.—Mich.

The matter of supplying additional food to the blooming stock during the winter months requires the finest discrimination. A great deal of harm is done through overdoses of concentrated fertilizers in the hands of inexperienced growers. Frequently, too, we find that overanxiety will cause excessive feeding, on account of a strong demand for the blooms. When the market is crying for blooms and the crop is still some weeks off, there is a strong temptation to give the plants a dose or two to hurry the crop along. Up to a certain point, this is possible, but few growers have the faculty which enables them to gauge accurately the limits beyond which they should not go. Usually this crowding of the crop is overdone, with resultant injury which it is impossible to correct. If the plants are making a strong, healthy growth, they will need little else than a liberal amount of water, careful ventilation and a steady temperature. In due time they will come into crop and the blooms will be of better quality all around than if the plants had been continually dosed with one thing and another. This, of course, holds good only if the soil was properly prepared before being put into the benches. If the soil lacks some particular element, it must be supplied. There is no denying the fact that, in the hands of the skillful grower, great things may be accomplished in the way of hurrying crops, improving the quality, increasing the yield, etc., by the judicious use of commercial fertilizers.

A brief summary of our methods may be of greater assistance to you than for me to try to tell you what to do, without knowing your soil or general conditions.

To begin with, we prepare our soil carefully, enriching it by plowing under green crops, such as blue grass sod or rye, in addition to a liberal amount of stable manure. For our soil, we prefer stable manure to cattle manure for this purpose. If your soil is extremely light, I should advise the use of cattle manure throughout. Then we supply ourselves with bone meal, bone flour, sheep manure, dried blood, ground limestone, or marl; also a complete carnation fertilizer from some reliable concern.

After the plants have been in the benches a month, we sprinkle the soil with the ground limestone and scratch it into the soil. This will correct sourness, which will show in the form of a green scum on the surface of the soil. The first part of October we may apply a light mulch of fairly well rotted manure. This will protect the tender young roots from the warm sun and will give them a boost. It will also prevent later applications of fertilizer from washing. If the plants are making a strong growth and shooting up flower stems rapidly, they may get nothing more, unless we notice that something is lacking. Sometimes we find it necessary to apply a dose of sheep manure to boost the crop along, for there is nothing better for this purpose. Sheep manure is rich in nitrogen, which softens the growth, and it should not be used too freely while a crop of blooms is on. The proper time to use it is just when the shoots are ready to run up to bud. At that stage, it will hasten the growth and improve the size of the bloom. By the time the bloom develops, the softening effects have worn off and no harm will result. When the crop comes on, if the stems lack strength, we apply a dose of ground limestone or marl. We find the latter excellent for this purpose. If the stems seem brittle at the joints and still lack strength, we use bone instead of marl. While the crop is on, you should not apply heavy doses of feed, but if the quality of the blooms deteriorates, light applications of some complete carnation fertilizer will improve it. We like the complete fertilizer at this stage, because, if things are going right, it will supply the various elements necessary for normal development. This will carry us along to March. By this time the sun is getting stronger and the plants are ready to start into a strong spring growth and, unless the necessary plant food is supplied, there will be a rank growth with inferior blooms at the end. It is time now to apply a heavy mulch, to protect the roots from the hot sun and to supply plant food. First, we give a dose of acid phosphate, which liberates food already in the soil and also has a tendency to draw the feeding roots to the surface. On top of this, we apply a heavy coat of fairly fresh stable manure. It should be applied either before it has begun to heat or left until the heat is spent. No ill results will follow if the manure is not hot at the time it is put on. After a few weeks, applications of the complete fertilizer will again be in order and these may be given every three weeks without being overdone, if they are light.

To your question as to whether feeding should depend on the season of the year or the condition of the plants I will say, on the condition of your plants must depend the question of whether you should feed at all. On the time of the year and the stage of the growth should depend the question of what to feed. These questions are answered in the foregoing, if you will read carefully and study.

We have not used Alphano Humus, so cannot advise you in regard to it. A little experimenting on a small bench space might be advisable. It probably would no do harm and again it might be useful to you in the future.

CARNATION CONVENTION.

Secretary A. F. J. Baur, of Indianapolis, has printed the pamphlet containing the program and premium list for the twenty-eighth annual convention and exhibition of the American Carnation Society, to be held at the Hollenden hotel, Cleveland, January 29 and 30. As has been reported in The Review, the directors thought it desirable to make a considerable departure from custom in the premium list, the classes for named varieties having been eliminated, the idea being to encourage the average members rather than the carnation specialists to exhibit. The medals for novelties are continued.

"This being the first meeting of national scope since the signing of the armistice in the world war," says Secretary Baur, "it affords an opportunity for us to come together and discuss its effects on our business and to lay plans for the future. It has been suggested that this be made a peace celebration and plans are being laid with this end in view. Come to this convention and help make it a real celebration."

LOOKS LIKE LADDIE.

Under separate cover we are mailing you a bloom from a carnation plant which we are propagating for stock, although we call it a sport, as it is different in color and in other respects from our other stock. Will you please advise us what variety of carnation it is?

J. C. W.—Pa.

The carnation flower was too badly wilted to give any idea as to its size and form, but the color, calyx and stem resemble Laddie. If it is that variety, you will make no mistake in propagating as many as possible. A. F. J. B.

Bellefontaine, O.—Cut flowers for Christmas were scarce, but there were plenty of blooming plants. Consequently, Stelzig's Floral Store ran a big ad in a local daily newspaper offering ferns and cyclamens. "Say It with Flowers," was the command at the top of the ad.

S. A. F. PUBLICITY CAMPAIGN.

Second Year Opens.

The second year of our national publicity campaign has commenced under favorable conditions. The great war is ended and with it the necessity, which many people have believed to exist, for economies, including the use of flowers in the home. Industrial conditions in 1919 are expected to be such as to insure prosperity and everything augurs well for the florists' trade.

It was demonstrated through our work in the year just closed that the public is influenced by publicity of the kind that is suggestive. Therefore, our committees believe that it is advisable to confine their efforts along the lines already followed. As already announced, contracts have been placed for a series of advertisements to appear repeatedly during January and February in twenty-eight national magazines. Electrotypes of these advertisements for the use of florists in their local newspapers are now ready, and the set of six will be mailed promptly on receipt of the price, $3 per set. All the magazines circulate in the neighborhood of every florist in the country, so a liberal use of these advertisements during the two months is strongly recommended to those who want to draw individual benefit from the magazine publicity.

1919 Subscriptions Wanted.

Our committees are earnestly hoping that all florists who have not already notified the secretary of their willingness to make an annual subscription to the fund for the remaining three years of the campaign will do so at once. The results from the first year's publicity are too good to be permitted to grow stale in the least, but we can only retain and increase them through renewed effort. The secretary will be pleased to mail a special subscription form to anyone making request; also a copy of the new circular describing our direct service aids up to date.

In a letter just received from William L. Rock, of the William L. Rock Flower Co., Kansas City, Mo., that gentleman says: "We shall be only too glad to subscribe $200 per annum for the next four years. We feel that the campaign, so far as it has gone, has done a great deal toward building up the florists' business. Of course, we have no way of checking or telling the amount of business derived from this source. It seems clear to us, however, that if double the amount were used next year, it would be money well spent, and we believe that the smaller florists throughout the country will soon recognize its value and possibly will subscribe a larger amount than they have in the past."

If every florist would view our project in the same way, the support would be such as to make the complete attainment of our object an easy matter, and business for all would be increased to a remarkable extent. Begin the new year well—send in a subscription, and use our direct service aids.

John Young, Sec'y.

Sullivan, Ind.—Edgar Beck, of Maple Park Farm, is building another greenhouse, 30x150 feet, for the growing of vegetables for the spring trade. He also grows small fruits in quantity for the market.

Fort Worth, Tex.—The holiday window display of the Drumm Seed & Floral Co., featuring an array of flowers and "peace doves," attracted much favorable comment and secured considerable local publicity.

PRESIDENT AMMANN GREETS S. A. F. MEMBERS

Outlines His Ideas of Needs of the Trade to Meet Conditions during the Period of Reconstruction, and Plans for the Year.

AS president of the Society of American Florists, I extend hearty greetings to all members of our beloved society, and to all members of the craft, everywhere.

First, let us give thanks to the Almighty God, who has seen fit in His infinite wisdom to end the cruel conflict that has been raging in bleeding Europe for over four years, and for the part our glorious nation has been privileged to have in bringing it to a speedy end.

I am sure that the florists all over the world can point with pride to the part we, as a profession, have had in helping to win the war. Our money has been cheerfully lent to the government, and given to other war activities, while our gallant young men have marched out at the country's call, cheerfully sacrificing their all for the great cause of humanity and world democracy.

Fellow members, our work is not finished. We must now prepare ourselves for the great reconstruction period. Our business must be adjusted to meet the demands which will be made upon us.

The Readjustment.

Millions of dollars will now be diverted from other channels. It behooves us to prepare ourselves to get a large part of this business. Our product is bound to be in greater demand than ever before. We must strive to furnish better quality and more efficient service. This can best be accomplished by more thoroughly organizing our forces.

We have come out of this struggle far better equipped for this coming great period than many of us expected, so it behooves us now to concentrate our forces and just how can we best do this?

First of all, I want to address myself to the young men of our society. Be sure to cooperate. Strive to continue the wise policies so well established by the old leaders. Improve the standard of culture and quality. And let us add to that the commercial progress in keeping with the present day and age.

Push Publicity Campaign.

Just now publicity with us is the watchword. The cornerstone for this wonderful addition was laid just sixteen short months ago in the city of New York, soon after our great nation entered into the war. But in spite of the trying commercial situation all over our land, the success was most marvelous. Too much credit cannot be given to the men who launched this great movement, and to the committees who so nobly carried on this work. Everybody should get behind this great work and assist the leaders now more than ever.

To the officers and members of the affiliated organizations, I extend the most cordial invitation for a hearty cooperation the coming year. Several have already acquired representatives on the parent society's board of directors, which is indeed cheering. Let us hope that many more will soon increase their memberships so they, too, may avail themselves of the opportunity of having their presidents members of our board.

The old S. A. F. is truly proud of all its offspring, and we bid you speed on in your special lines. It not only means progress for you, but it also helps the parent society; and every good parent wants to see his children succeed.

To the members of state associations and local florists' clubs, I also extend an invitation for hearty coöperation. Every state in the Union should have either a state association or a local club in one of its principal cities. The members of such organizations should strive to secure enough members so they, too, may have representation on the national board of directors. This can be done and we cannot be too thoroughly organized. Let us make this a part of our 1919 platform, ever remembering that we need you and you need us.

J. Fred Ammann.
(President of the S. A. F.)

To the Growers.

The members of the three representative branches of our trade, namely, the growing, wholesaling and retailing, I want to invite to counsel with us for promoting the interests of the trade at large.

Mr. Grower, it's up to you to get better organized. Growers should have branch organizations, to confer often in reference to combating insects and diseases, the use of fertilizers, etc. Also the kinds of stock to grow. In fact, we need more strictly growers' associations.

The wholesalers, too, need to be more thoroughly organized locally, to carry on their own interests successfully, and to get into conference with the growers as to the varieties of stock to be grown. In a few cities coöperation of the wholesalers has shown excellent results already.

The retailers are, no doubt, the best organized of the three branches, since the splendid work of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association has so nobly helped to bind the retailers together for our common cause. May they continue to prosper, and the retailers locally take more advantage by becoming still more strongly united. The S. A. F. stands ready to help any branch of the trade to become more efficient. We have the means and the ability to assist you. Let us help solve your problems and put floriculture on the high plane where it belongs.

We are now entering an era of brotherly love never before shown in the history of the world. Never did men's hearts go out to one another so much as now. The spirit of America for humanity and world democracy prevails everywhere, and as men's hearts grow larger the world seems smaller. The light held aloft by the statue of Liberty shines the world over. Let us have for our reconstruction program the slogan, "Competitive coöperation for the best interests of all."

The Carnation Society.

The annual meeting of the American Carnation Society takes place in Cleveland, January 29 and 30, 1919. This is one of the live-wire affiliated organizations of the S. A. F. I understand all members of the society are invited to join with them in a Victory love-feast. So, as many as possibly can should plan to be present. These get-together meetings mean so much for our future progress.

To the dear ladies of our sister society, we too extend hearty greetings. May they continue in the good work of making our annual gatherings more sociable, pleasant and inspiring by their presence. May God bless the ladies for their service in the great struggle for humanity through their noble work in the Red Cross and other humanitarian activities.

BUCKEYE BULL'S-EYES

CHRISTMAS BUSINESS.

The Christmas business of 1918 was in many respects the most peculiar on record. It followed a ten weeks' period of epidemic in which the angel of death visited many thousands of homes throughout the country, compelling the use of flowers in the expression of sorrow to a degree unprecedented in the entire history of the trade. Few indeed were the circles of friends or relationships that escaped. Following the virtual close of the war by the signing of the armistice, the cancellation of heavy government business, seriously checking industry, created a feeling of uncertainty in the ranks of a vast army of workers, forcing it to heavily curtail its lavish expenditure of money. The demoralization in the sources of production caused by the federal fuel restrictions, operating to interrupt the customary timing of crops, made flowers scarce in December when the natural demand, augmented by a great advertising campaign, required an abnormally large output. Amid these powerful influences, the holiday season came, and, despite the adverse influences, a greater amount of money than ever before spent for flowers has been garnered by the trade. Perhaps no better comment might be made upon the stability of a profession. Mac.

THE HIGH PRICES.

Much has been said anent the high values of flowers, in common with the advanced price of every other article for which the demand is greater than the supply. Undoubtedly many people of moderate circumstances were prevented from buying flowers on that account, but the same might be said of numerous other things in everyday use. A better grade of salesmanship was required to move goods, but the experience was well worth the increased effort and the knowledge gained will remain a permanent asset. The smaller tradesmen felt the effect of the higher prices to a degree detrimental to their immediate interests, but persistence in allowing themselves a margin of profit vitally necessary to their business integrity will win out for them eventually. Prices of flowers have hitherto been absurdly low compared with the cost of their production and the trade stands in greater need of drilling in this particular, perhaps, than in any other. While the taking of unjust profits will start tongues wagging against us, in this day of trial for grower and retailer alike, if the importance of a legitimate degree of gain is lost sight of, breakers of a serious nature will be encountered in the near distance. Mac.

CHRISTMAS GOODS.

The high prices of plants and flowers were partially responsible for the abnormally heavy sale of Christmas greens, wreaths and prepared goods. Although heavy preparations were made, the supply of stock of this kind was tremendously inadequate to the demand. One small florist, in a favorable location, declared he could have sold 500 more wreaths and moderately priced baskets made up of such materials as ruscus, boxwood, laurel, lycopodium and holly. Although the principal stores featured combination plant baskets largely, prepared stock and accessories occupied a conspicuous place in their displays and assisted immeasurably in making the places of business strikingly attractive. Good holly was quite scarce, as was also high-grade mistletoe. Mac.

PLANTS SOLD WELL.

A splendid supply of choice plants, consisting of begonias, cyclamens, berried plants and ferns, was prepared for the Christmas trade and was moved to evident advantage. Azaleas, of course, were conspicuous by their absence, as were also finely done pans of bulbous stock. Although poinsettias were not up to their usual standard of excellence, some superb specimens were in evidence and commanded good prices. Plant growers were well rewarded for their efforts this Christmas and it is to be hoped that the increased returns will induce them to enlarge their output for next season. Mac.

FANCY GRADES OF STOCK.

Notwithstanding the unfavorably warm weather, the quality of cut flowers offered was especially good, both in roses and carnations. In the former the longer and fancy grades predominated, and even the smaller florists in the remote districts bought them with freedom. As usual, there was a greater demand for shorter stock. Eastern violets sold at prices practically double those of last year, but the call for them showed slight diminution. Fancy Russells and Beauties from distant markets arrived in fine condition and were scarcely sufficient to meet the demand. Well grown, long-stemmed buddleia was also available and proved popular. More choice double stevia was used than ever before. Cut poinsettias were in moderate supply, but of good quality and were eagerly sought by discriminating buyers. Small flowers for corsages were in good request and the call for them, including orchids, suggested a return to old times. Mac.

MEALY BUG ON PALMS.

Will you kindly advise me what to do for mealy bug on the roots of palms? The bugs are at the surface of the ground and go clear through the ball of soil. Is there anything I can do and not harm the plants? J. W. I.—Ill.

The safest method of cleaning mealy bugs from the roots of palms is to wash out the roots with a strong stream of water from a nozzle. A pressure of fifty to sixty pounds per square inch is a good force to work with and will clean out both the soil and bugs in short order. Do not expose the roots to the sun or allow them to dry out, but repot just as soon as the washing is completed. Keep the plants in a night temperature of 60 to 65 degrees, and be careful that they are properly watered after repotting. The plants should not suffer any injury from the operation.

CULTURE OF CANDYTUFT.

Please advise me when to plant candytuft so it will bloom for Memorial day.
W. D. H. M.—Mass.

The last week in January I find the best time to sow candytuft for Memorial day. As to varieties, any of the mammoth strains may be grown. I have found Mammoth White Perfection fine. This crop, if it can be flowered just right, pays remarkably well. When well advanced, the plants will stand considerable forcing, provided the glass is shaded a little. This treatment is necessary only when the crop seems to be late. C. W.

THE BOYS WHO DID THE TRICK

Some Overseas; Others on the Job.

Christmas found many members of the trade back on the job after periods in the service overseas or at the training camps in this country. It undoubtedly was far from a cheerful Christmas for those whom the ocean separated from their homes, but it was a busy one for those who had returned. Recent news letters in The Review have reported that hundreds of the florists who were in the camps here have returned. Several are back from overseas and, as the troop movements across the ocean are becoming larger, it will not be long before a majority of our florist-fighters will have resumed their peace-time occupations.

James Alva Gain.

James Alva Gain, second son of W. A. Gain, seedsman and florist, Astoria, Ill., died at Urbana, Ill., December 8, at the age of 20 years, of pneumonia following influenza. He enlisted in the Students' Army Training Corps October 1 and was a member of Headquarters Company I, at the University of Illinois. This youthful patriot was earnest and studious in his work and anxious to be of service to his country. He intended to take the 4-year course in agriculture at the University of Illinois. He was possessed of marked ability and had been a valuable assistant to his father in business.

In the Motor Corps.

Harry J. Hamm, who at the time he started in business at Pittsburgh, Pa., was the youngest retailer in that city, enlisted in the Motor Repair Service of the Quartermaster's Department, U. S. A., May 19, 1918, and served until the armistice put an end to hostilities. While he is away Allen J. Hamm is conducting the business.

Levine Brings Souvenir.

When the steamer George Washington arrived at New York December 23 one of those who were glad to see the statue of Liberty again was Corporal Morris H. Levine, who is widely known among florists by reason of his years of itinerancy. Corporal Levine brought a souvenir from France, a piece of German shrapnel. Also he walked with a crutch. The New York Herald took his picture and that of the piece of shrapnel. They appeared in the paper the day before Christmas.

Sergeant Woodruff Safe.

Sergeant Stiles D. Woodruff, of Orange, Conn., son of Watson S. Woodruff, has been heard from since the signing of the armistice. He was located on the Verdun front during the last nine days of active artillery engagement. He is a member of the 302nd Field Artillery and was exceedingly active up to the stroke of eleven o'clock November 11. He reports a most intensely interesting experience, came through without a scratch and is well and happy.

Sergeant Frank Gain.

Sergeant Frank Gain, eldest son of W. A. Gain, Astoria, Ill., won honors November 25, for which his experience in the trade aided him to qualify. He was assigned to special work superintending the planting of six acres of "spuds," which yielded a crop that was marketed for $3,800. His success in this work was rewarded by a silver medal and a parchment from the French government. He was one of five in his regiment who were decorated. Sergeant Gain assisted his father in planning and building his first greenhouse. He hopes to return home by spring, after his work in France has been finished.

Thirty-eight from Iowa Seed Co.

Since the war began the Iowa Seed Co., Des Moines, Ia., has contributed thirty-eight of its men to the various branches of the U. S. service. Included in this number are the foreman and propagator and nurserymen, rose growers, section men and helpers. Albert E. Stevens, the foreman, is now serving in the Medical Department of the 349th Infantry in France. When the boys return they will find their places open for them, the remainder of the force doing the work in the meantime.

Vern Schluraff Returns.

Vern Schluraff, who went from Chicago to Camp Gordon, Ga., where he was in the Central Officers' Training School at the time the armistice was signed, did not wait for the commission which he stood to get, but resigned in order to get back into harness in time for the holiday rush. He is in his former position as manager for J. M. Cochrane, West Pullman, Ill., a post for which he is well qualified, having been in charge of the Schluraff Floral Co., at Erie, Pa., for years before he came west. Mr. Schluraff says that florists are especially well fitted to qualify for officers, because they already have learned to apply themselves strenuously to the task in hand. His hours in the training school were from 5 a. m. to 9 p. m. and the days were spent in hard work. He found the work incident to the Christmas rush "like play," after his experience in camp, where he says The Review was his constant companion.

NASHVILLE, TENN.

The Market.

The holiday trade was the best on record. There was not enough stock to meet requirements. In fact, business was limited only by the supply of flowers, but as prices were double those of last year, no one should complain. A business aggregating many more dollars than in any holiday season in the past was done with much less rush and overwork. This is as it should be. We are sure that if the growers were not so prone to produce a surplus of everything in its season, we should all make more money, sleep longer hours and enjoy better health.

Poinsettias were in evidence in all their glory. In fact, they seemed finer than ever before, perhaps because they did not have to compete with azaleas. The supply was not so large as last year, but perhaps that was better than to have had too many. There is no better way to get people to shop early than for them to find things all sold out occasionally, if this does not happen too often.

The feature of the stock was the large number of high-class cyclamens. Our growers have been showing improvement in their cyclamens for several years. This year there were hundreds that were fit to exhibit in any show in the land. They sold well, too, many of them bringing as high as $3 and even $4 apiece. But these were specimen plants, with half a hundred blooms on a single plant.

There was practically no valley and few sweet peas. There were orchids in abundance and they retailed readily at $2 each. We saw one plant a few days before Christmas that had twelve good blooms on it, not a bad profit for one plant. There will be more orchids grown here as soon as the stock can be secured at a reasonable price. Though a few years ago the demand for orchids was small indeed, this has now grown to be decidedly an orchid town.

Both roses and carnations were in abundance, and the quality of both was good. We saw a few Killarneys, silent witnesses to the rapidity with which new plants are being produced and used these days. It was a distinct surprise to see any at all.

There were few bulbous plants this Christmas. There were plenty of Paper Whites, of course, and a few Grand Soleil d'Or, but no hyacinths at all. The trade surely is finding that it can do business without these items if necessary.

One surprising thing noted in recent visits to the growers is that there are not so many sweet peas growing here this season as usual. One would have thought that this would have been a sweet pea year. Violets also are few and far between. The American Beauty rose is another flower that is passing. There are still a few and they command the highest price of all roses, but few growers feel that they can afford to grow them, at least in quantity.

Various Notes.

Miss Louise Sloan, who had been out of the Joy store for a number of weeks caring for her sick mother, was able to get back in time to help with the Christmas rush. Her mother is improving, but is still far from well.

Mr. Johnson, who grew roses for the Joys for a number of years, but has been in Illinois for the last three years, is with the Joys again. Of course he has charge of the roses.

S. S. Skidelsky, of Philadelphia, was in the city a few days ago looking after the interests of his firm. He reports that the trade in general is looking forward to a heavy business the coming year.

Geny Bros. had the best lot of solanum this Christmas that we have ever seen grown in Nashville. These are proving better sellers here every season.

Now that the holiday rush is over, Leo Geny, president of the Tennessee State Florists' Association, is trying to get things in readiness for the coming meeting. The date and place of meeting will be given in our next report. F. B.

Huntington, Ind.—A. G. Bieberich says he has no reason for complaint over business, but he says not all florists with whom he comes in contact seem to have awakened to the present values of flowers; some of his neighbors still care more for sales than for profit.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Never in the recollection of the oldest wholesaler was there a Christmas market like the one just passed into history. As was expected, the supply of flowers was, with one or two exceptions, short, and would have been short even for an ordinary Saturday trade. Consequently, how to make a holiday market with it was a problem. Prices adjusted themselves under the rule of supply and demand. Only a small bundle of roses could be bought for $100 and, while the retailers mourned their sale prospects, they could not hold out, and the buying was brisk. Carnations were the weaklings of the market. Towards afternoon they were arriving in quantity, with whites in great majority. Prices took a tumble on all colors but red; whites were borne down to 4 cents. American Beauty roses were not in heavy supply, but, in spite of limited quantity, brought no more than their customary Christmas top price of $125 per hundred. Other varieties forged ahead of records, and the lowest grade could not be bought at less than $15, with little available stock in the grade. There was an unusually good supply of cattleyas, but the demand was not heavy, and prices in few cases exceeded the dollar mark, with small flowers bringing as little as 20 cents. Violets were particularly scarce, but the price of the early part of the week only was maintained, and sales above the $3 mark were not heard of. Easter lilies were in adequate supply, without change in price. Godfrey chrysanthemums were in good supply at one or two establishments and cleared quickly at 50 cents for six sprays.

It was a high-priced market on a short supply of stock, rather than a good business with a plentiful supply.

The plantsmen cleaned up their stocks long before the actual holiday buying set in, and the plant business was profitable, according to reports.

The end of the week saw a settling back of conditions to those of just before the holiday. Roses are not in heavy supply, but heavy enough for the demand, which really is light. It is not expected that there will be much change in the rose supply for some weeks. The quality of arrivals generally is excellent.

Carnations are in fair supply only now, after passing the holiday cut, and there has been a reaction in prices, the range now being 8 cents to 12 cents, the latter figure for the finest quality only.

The supply of cattleyas is not so good, but 75 cents per flower is the limit. The supply of gardenias has declined considerably, consequently the best grade brings as much as $9 per dozen. Oncidium splendidum is available in small quantities and of good quality; 3 cents per flower is the price.

Violets are scarce, due to diverted shipments; but sweet peas are in better supply and of finer quality, so they are largely taking the place of the violets.

There are plenty of Easter lilies, although the quality as a rule is poor. Arrivals consist of small, green flowers, fit for nothing but funeral work. The top price is still 20 cents per flower.

Calendulas, bouvardia, forget-me-not, pansies and other such flowers are in good supply and move well. Paper White narcissus, strange to say, is not greatly in evidence, although usually common at this season. Spanish iris has put in an appearance and sells well at rational prices.

Retailers, with few exceptions, did a fairly good business, but are unanimously of the opinion that trade with them would have been heavy had they been able to supply flowers at prices normal for the Christmas season. The retail price of $5 per dozen for short roses turned away many buyers, and customary profits had to be severely cut to make sales.

Various Notes.

A fire December 26 above the store of George C. Siebrecht, 109 West Twenty-eighth street, did considerable damage, but the store was not greatly harmed.

W. H. Coldwell, of the Coldwell Lawn Mower Co., Newburgh, N. Y., died December 26. He was a member of the S. A. F. and was greatly respected and esteemed by the officials of the New York flower shows as a stanch supporter of the trade sections of these exhibitions. He was of a cheery disposition, and will be generally missed at future shows. He was 55 years of age. Thomas F. Galvin, Inc., 561 Fifth avenue, furnished several handsome pieces for the funeral, which took place at Newburgh.

Richard Wenham, 76 East Ninety-third street, had the decorations for a dinner party at the home of Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr., 666 Fifth avenue, at Christmas. The style of decoration was unique and supposedly emblematic of the times. The motif was "The World Upside Down," consequently the decorations were, as far as possible, in reverse order. Trees were suspended by the roots, and the other decorative features were in harmony.

C. H. Totty, Madison, N. J.; Major O'Keefe, Boston, Mass.; W. R. Pierson, Cromwell, Conn., and John Young, of New York, are arranging to attend a meeting of the Florists' Club of Philadelphia January 7, to take part in the proceedings of the evening, which are to be devoted to a boost for the publicity campaign. A PAGE ABOUT PLANT IMPORTS

WHO WANT QUARANTINE?

No Claim of Trade Demand.

While certain members of the trade favor the approaching plant quarantine, it seems clear that they must be few in number, because the Federal Horticultural Board, in its annual report, surely would have mentioned the fact had it felt that the approaching quarantine had any support in the trade. Of the demand for the quarantine the board's chairman, C. L. Marlatt, has the following to say in his annual report:

"The need of additional restrictions or prohibitions, particularly with respect to the entry of certain classes of nursery stock and other plants and seeds on account of exceptional risks involved, has been under consideration by the Federal Horticultural Board for some time. This consideration has had relation particularly to (1) plants imported with earth about the roots or 'balled' plants and (2) plants and seeds of all kinds for propagation from little known or little explored countries. The large risk from importations of these two classes of plants comes from the impossibility of properly inspecting plants with earth or of disinfecting the attached earth; and from the dangers which can not be foreseen with respect to plants coming from regions where plant enemies—insect and disease—have been studied very meagerly or not at all. Inspection of such material is necessarily in the blind, and the discovery of infesting insects, particularly if hidden in bark or wood, or of evidence of disease, is largely a matter of chance. The inspection and disinfection of both of these classes of plants as a condition of entry, therefore, is a very imperfect safeguard.

"There has further developed throughout the country a wide interest in this subject, which has manifested itself in numerous requests for greater restriction on plant imports from official bodies representing the state departments of agriculture, the inspection officials of the states, entomological and phytopathological associations, forestry associations, etc.

"Scientific," not Practical.

"As a basis for such needed additional quarantine restrictions a public hearing was conducted at this department May 28, 1918, at which the whole subject was fully discussed with all of the interests concerned, including, in addition to those enumerated, both the importing nurserymen and seedsmen, as well as the producing nurserymen of the United States."

The report stops right there; there is no claim of trade support.

Report of Federal Inspector.

The Federal Horticultural Board exists for the purpose of protecting the agriculture and arboriculture of the United States from destruction by the hunnish hordes of European plant pests—for that and to provide jobs for a lot of gents most of whom were or are addressed as "Professor." It is of course necessary to justify the board's existence and this is what it did, with state assistance, in the year ended June 30, 1918, in the way of inspecting imported nursery stock, over 13,000 cases of it:

"As the result of state and federal inspection of imported nursery stock and other imported plants and plant products during the fiscal year, some 280 different species of insects were intercepted, including seven nests of the brown-tail moth and three egg masses of the gipsy moth from France; six pupæ of the sorrel cutworm on miscellaneous stock from France, and one on azaleas from Belgium; larvæ of the gold-tail moth on rhododendrons, laburnums, roses, and Japanese maples from Holland and on Cerasus avium from France; the lesser bulb fly in bulbs from Holland, nests of the fruit-tree pierid in six shipments of deciduous fruit-tree seedlings from France, numerous scale insects and ants from various quarters of the globe.

One on the Nurserymen.

"During the same period, 218 plant diseases were intercepted and identified on imported material. These organisms occurred on 115 different host plants. Three attempts were made to import, respectively, grapefruit, mandarin orange, and round orange, found to be affected with citrus canker. All were from the vicinity of Canton, China.

"With respect to the assurance by nurserymen that apple stocks from France are very free from crown gall, it is interesting to note that every tree of a shipment of 1,009 apple stocks received by the United States Department of Agriculture from France was rejected because it was affected with a hairy root form of crown gall."

The above is from the annual report of the board.

The seriousness of the situation and the importance of the results accomplished are all in the point of view.

OFF YEAR'S IMPORTS OF PLANTS.

The table at the foot of this page gives the country of origin and the classes of plants imported during the year ending June 30, 1918. It should be remembered that the plant imports in that fiscal year were only a little more than one-fifth the number of cases that came in the second season before.

Practically all this will be cut off by the approaching quarantine.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Extraordinary conditions prevailed in the market the first Christmas after the close of the great war. There was a marked shortage of cut flowers, with remarkably high prices. As a consequence plants were pushed more than ever and the remarkable feature of the last holiday was the increased favor shown plants by buyers. All the plant specialists sold out well ahead of Christmas and had to refuse numerous orders. Easily the leader among flowering plants was the cyclamen and Boston never had so many well flowered specimens of it before, many thousands being disposed of in pots from four and five inches in diameter up to 14-inch tubs. Begonias had big sales, especially Cincinnati and Melior; the old Lorraine proved less popular, but Mrs. Peterson sold well.

Poinsettias, thanks to the warm weather, never sold better. Euphorbia jacquiniæflora proved popular and primulas, ardisias, solanums, peppers, Erica melanthera, camellias, azaleas, of which a fair number were available, freesias, colored-leaved plants, indeed, everything in the plant line sold splendidly and the holiday set a new high record in plant sales.

As to cut flowers, the warm weather favored the growers. When we remember the severe weather in December, 1917, and compare that season with the present one, we see that the supply of flowers this year was fully three-fourths that of a year ago. The high prices, of course, frightened many would-be buyers, but supplies easily sold out and practically everyone had to cut down orders or refuse them. Roses sold remarkably well. Select American Beauties made $18 per dozen and extra fine Hadleys $12, a good many realizing $6 to $8 per dozen. Ophelia was in great demand and made up to $50. Russell, next to Hadley, realized the highest price of all the hybrid teas. Stanley and Columbia each sold well. Many items were off crop and reds were scarcer than usual. On short-stemmed stock prices were from $12 up. Carnations sold well until December 24, when a considerable quantity of held-back stock arrived, for which growers asked $16 to $20, which retailers refused to pay. As a consequence, prices broke and a good many flowers went as low as $6 to $8. Christmas morning sales were made at $10 to $15; a small number only sold above the $15 mark. Violets were scarce and sold at $3 to $5, the highest price for them ever recorded here. Sweet peas were not abundant at $2 to $4.

Of pansies a good number appeared, but not a fraction of what were needed. They made $2 to $4. A supply of freesia appeared, selling at $8 to $10 per hundred. Marguerites made as high as $6 and mignonette, $8 to $12. Only small lots of Paper Whites came and no daffodils or tulips. There was a great call for callas at $24 to $30 per hundred. Lilies went slowly at $20 to $25. Cattleyas were in tolerably good supply and a fair supply of other orchids was available. Asparagus went sluggishly, owing to the scarcity and high prices of flowers. Greenery, such as boxwood, holly, laurel, hemlock, etc., sold out clean.

Prices since Christmas remain high. Short-stemmed roses are realizing $10 to $12 and carnations $10 to $12. There is also little drop in prices of violets, callas, lilies and other flowers, due to the continued heavy call for funeral work. The influenza is still with us and Boston reports 300 to 450 new cases daily, of a milder form, however, than in September and October.

Various Notes.

John T. Gale, of Tewksbury, had a splendid lot of marguerites for Christmas and cleaned up the last of his mums at high prices. He is picking a fine crop of Spencer sweet peas.

Henry M. Robinson & Co. report a satisfactory Christmas, although they had to refuse many orders for flowers. They have had a large call for wax flowers of late to replace natural flowers. Christmas greenery sold out clean.

The roses of the Budlong Rose Co., of Auburn, R. I., were in light crop for the holidays and this firm had only a small number of reds, but Stanley, Ophelia and Columbia realized high prices.

Frank Wheeler, salesman at the Cooperative Market for his father, has been passing cigars. This makes his second boy, born December 26 and thriving finely.

B. A. Snyder states that business with his firm was better than ever this Christmas. He enthuses over the Chicago wholesale market and the numerous long-distance buyers met there.

Donald Carmichael, of Wellesley, hit the market right with a fine crop of mignonette, carnations and calendulas for the holidays.

James Lister, of Stoneham, had a nice cut of Erica melanthera, which has been used a great deal here in funeral work of late, and of stevia for Christmas.

Peter Jansen, of Norfolk Downs, and Miss Washington, of North Stoughton, had large Christmas cuts of freesia. Miss Washington also had calendulas of fine quality.

Hadley, Ophelia and Russell roses of remarkable quality came from the Waban Conservatories, Natick, and from the Hadley establishment of the Montgomery Co. They realized the highest price of all roses in the local market.

Frank Edgar says he never experienced such a demand for poinsettias as for the last Christmas. He had, among other plants, a fine lot of large-flowered cinerarias and has a large batch coming on for late winter blooming. He will try Delphinium Belladonna as a pot plant for next Easter.

Charles T. Beasley says, while he sold more pansies than a year ago, he could have sold treble the number. He will grow Canterbury bells and sweet peas in one large house he has empty at present.

Thomas Iliffe, one of Daniel Iliffe's sons, in active service in France, states in a recent letter that Fathers' day was celebrated there November 24 and many flowers used. In the United States Fathers' day, so far, seems to be considered a joke.

At both the stores of T. F. Galvin, Inc., a record Christmas trade in plants was done. Among cut flowers at the Park street store were noted some handsome cymbidiums, vandas, lælias and cattleyas.

Recent visitors included Paul A. Winter, representing Sutton & Sons, England, and F. C. Green, superintendent of parks, Providence, now well convalesced from a serious illness.

The seventh annual convention of the New England Nurserymen's Association will be held at the Hotel Bellevue, Boston, January 28 and 29, 1919. A splendid program has been arranged, which should interest growers greatly. Able speakers will discuss important topics. Among the more important are the "Proposed Quarantine on the Importation of Nursery Stock," "New Rules Affecting Transportation," and "New Laws Relating to the Distribution of Nursery Stock in Interstate Commerce." The last named will be discussed by Curtis Nye Smith, of Boston, counsel for the American Association of Nurserymen.

Of interest to the general public will be an illustrated lecture, "How Can we Make New England More Fruitful and Beautiful?" Another timely topic will be "New Ornamentals of Real Merit Nurserymen Should Grow," by William H. Judd, of the Arnold Arboretum. As a result of the war and new legislation, changes have come to the nursery trade and under new conditions it will be necessary to grow a wider range of hardy trees, shrubs and plants to take the place in some measure of those previously imported. All interested growers will be welcomed to the meetings.

Henry Penn states that business with his firm ran thirty-five per cent ahead of 1917 for Christmas. Unusually mild weather greatly facilitated deliveries and customers unwilling to purchase cut flowers at existing high rates turned to plants, of which there was fortunately an excellent supply of unusually high quality.

The sensation among scarlet carnations for the Christmas trade was Peter Fisher's Red Cross. This variety completely outclasses Beacon and will bear watching. Mr. Fisher has some 700 plants at Ellis, where he is operating this year only two houses for the local trade, but at the range of the Arnold-Fisher Co., Woburn, 10,000 plants are growing. This variety will be shown at the Cleveland convention. It will not be introduced this winter, Mr. Fisher believing in giving all novelties a thorough try-out first.

Many of those who have attended the annual club picnics at Cunningham park, East Milton, will learn with deep regret of the death of Mrs. George Simpson, wife of the superintendent, on Christmas day, after a brief illness with influenza. Mrs. Simpson was most hospitable and at each annual picnic endeavored in every way to make it pleasant for the ladies. Funeral services were held December 28 and were largely attended. Among the many floral tributes was one from the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston. Mrs. Simpson was in her fifty-eighth year.

Thomas Roland's establishment at Nahant was swept clear of practically every salable plant. Stock here was never in finer condition. At Revere the rose houses were in good crop and prices realized were the best ever.

It was an ideal season for poinsettias. The mildness of the weather made them sell as never before. John McFarland, of North Easton, had a large house of splendid plants which easily sold out. Other growers report equally satisfactory sales.

Peter Pederzini, of Medfield, is recovering from a severe attack of influenza. Both Charles S. Strout and wife, of Biddeford, Me., are at present sick with this disease. W. N. C.

OBITUARY

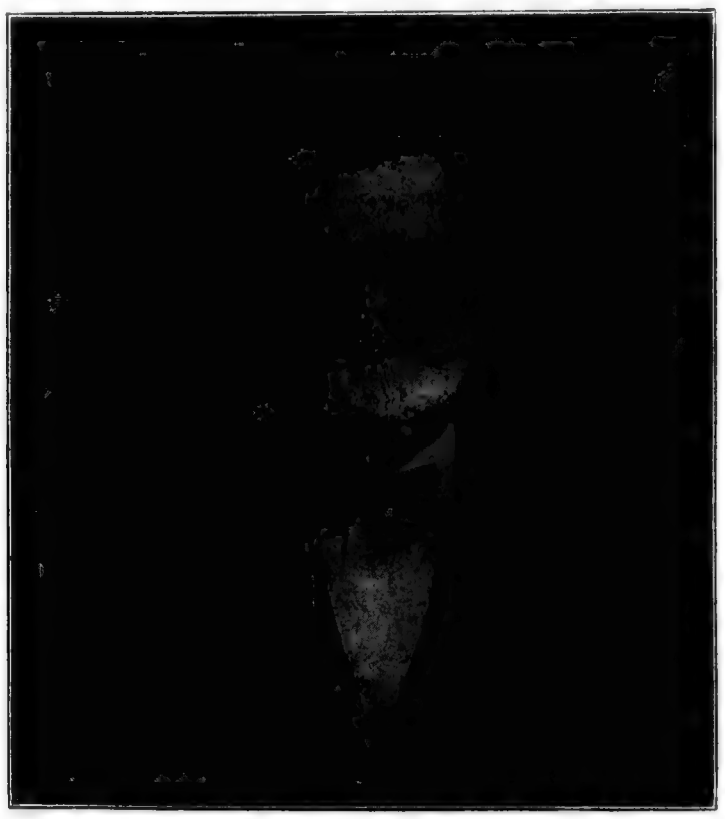
E. Y. Teas.

A veteran horticulturist and nurseryman passed away December 15 in the person of E. Y. Teas, who has been living at Eaton, O., since his retirement in 1912, when the Cunningham Nursery Co., of Seymour, Ind., purchased the business, stock and fixtures of the firm of E. Y. Teas & Son. F. E. Teas, the "Son," however, continued in the trade, giving special attention to the growing of gladioli for the wholesale market.

It was in 1842 that the brothers, E. Y. Teas and John C. Teas, started growing orchard trees in a small way for their own use, when the former was only 12 years of age. This led, however, to the growing later of fruit trees for sale and, as the years went on, an extensive business was developed in the nursery line.

The firm of E. Y. & J. C. Teas supplied the eastern trade with many varieties of fruit trees of western and southern origin and in 1844 the brothers commenced the growing of catalpa trees from seed. They placed on the market the first seedlings of Catalpa speciosa sold commercially in this country. The superior hardiness of this variety has brought it into wide acceptance since that date and millions of it have been used. It has largely replaced C. bignonioides, which had been the catalpa of commerce. E. Y. Teas was the first disseminator of Garber's Hybrid pear and of the Lucretia dewberry. He produced the variety of sugar cane known as Early Amber from seed selected personally in Paris, in 1859-60. He originated the President Wilder currant. The name of Teas also is linked imperishably with the weeping mulberry.

E. Y. Teas was one of the twenty-one charter members of the Indiana Horticultural Society in 1880 and he survived all the others by many years. He also was one of the earliest members of the American Association of Nurserymen and was faithful in attendance upon the meetings of that body for three decades.



Mr. Teas' illness was brief, although he had been failing in health for several weeks, being in his eighty-ninth year. He never lost his interest in horticultural affairs and was a reader of several horticultural publications, as well as of trade papers. He is survived by his wife and a daughter, Mrs. J. E. Parker.

Floyd Long.

Floyd Long, manager of the greenhouses of Rolf Zetlitz, Lima, O., died December 16 at his home on Bellefontaine avenue, of pneumonia. Mr. Long was 29 years of age and had been employed at the greenhouses for six years. Besides his widow and a daughter, he is survived by his father, J. M. Long, of American township, and four brothers.

Winfield S. Harry.

Having rounded a half century in the florists' trade at Conshohocken, Pa., Winfield S. Harry died at his home in that city, December 19, at the age of 75 years. He was one of the best known of its citizens, his vocation having brought him into association with many people. He is survived by his wife, two sons, Reverend Ernest Harry, an Episcopal clergyman, of Cleveland, O., and William Harry, of Philadelphia.

Edward Y. Teas.

Emmett McDonald.

Emmett McDonald, a dahlia specialist and mum grower, died at his home in Overland Park, Mo., of influenza, December 24, at the age of 42 years. Mr. McDonald was well known in trade circles in St. Louis and was a member of the St. Louis Florists' Club. He leaves a wife and two brothers to mourn his loss. The funeral services were held December 27 and the interment was December 28, at Decatur, Ill., his former home. J. J. B.

Alonzo W. Vose.

Alonzo W. Vose, for more than a quarter of a century identified with the greenhouse and retail florists' business in northern Rhode Island and southern Massachusetts, died at his home on Cumberland hill road, Woonsocket, R. I., December 26, after an extended illness. He was in his seventieth year, death being due to a complication of diseases.

Mr. Vose was born in the town of Lincoln, R. I., August 6, 1849, the son of the late Albert E. and Minerva (Esten) Vose. He attended the public schools in his native town and graduated at the Woonsocket high school. He married Miss Ida Sprague, of Cumberland, June 20, 1869, and remained in Cumberland until 1895, when he moved to his present home on the Cumberland hill road.

While a resident of the town of Lincoln in his younger days he was prominent in town affairs and held important town offices. For a number of years he held the office of postmaster of the Manville office. He retired from this position thirty-five years ago to enter the florists' business and had been identified therewith ever since. He was a member of the Rhode Island Horticultural Society and frequently officiated as judge of plants and flowers at the exhibitions of that and similar societies. His greenhouses were situated near his home and comprised more than 10,000 square feet, wherein he grew several thousand vegetable and bedding plants each year, in addition to cut flowers for his retail store at 241 Main street, Woonsocket. He also supplied other retailers in that section.

Mr. Vose was a man of sterling character and one who took a deep interest in the affairs of the community, as well as in the upbuilding of horticultural and floricultural interests. Besides his wife, he is survived by a daughter, one son, two sisters and three grandchildren, one of the latter, Joseph Foster, being a private in the 26th Regiment of Engineers, A. E. F., now in France. W. H. M.

W. H. Drake.

W. H. Drake, who died December 23 at his home in Kenosha, Wis., was a veteran florist and landscape gardener, whose success in these lines was due to his fine taste. Mr. Drake was a man of sterling character and held the esteem of many friends. He was 67 years of age.

John Paget.

John Paget, landscape gardener of the Pennsylvania State hospital, Harrisburg, Pa., for the last twenty-six years, died December 23 at that institution, at the age of 73 years. He formerly was gardener for the late Senator J. Donald Cameron, at the latter's farm at Lochiel, Pa., a position he held for seventeen years.

Charles Warncke, Jr.

Charles Warncke, Jr., Detroit, Mich., died Christmas morning of bronchial pneumonia at his home on West Fort street. He had been associated with his father, Charles Warncke, in the trade for the last ten years. He was a member of the Detroit Florists' Club and of the Elks.

Enfield, England.—A disastrous fire occurred at Perry's Hardy Plant Farms, December 10, completely gutting a large block of buildings, including at least 4,000 lilies awaiting shipment to a customer in the United States. Unfortunately, this stock cannot be replaced.

AMERICA could grow its own narcissus bulbs easier than its own bay trees.

PRACTICALLY all government war restrictions were withdrawn January 1.

IT will be a long time before the production of plants of most kinds again catches up with the demand.

A GENERAL balancing of accounts now is in order. There is no sense in paying income taxes on uncollectable accounts included as profits.

THE boys are coming home by scores and each one finds his old job waiting for him. The trade still is short-handed, particularly in the greenhouses.

THE average florist has no definite objective. Plan one. What are you after? Where is it to be had? What is the way to it? Are you on that road? Go to it.

THOSE florists who are awaiting the next special flower day should study the ways of the marathon runner—he puts his best efforts into every mile of the course.

STARTING some palm seeds whenever you can get them will be like buying war savings stamps. In about five years you are certain to cash in at a good profit. In the meantime, you probably won't miss the money.

A YEAR ago we all had many more troubles than we have now. In January and February, 1918, most of us were mighty glad we didn't freeze out yesterday and hoped we wouldn't tomorrow. Beyond that, there wasn't much doing.

PRESIDENT and Mrs. Wilson continue to be the ambassadors of flowers to the Peace Conference. Mrs. Wilson, through her habitual use of orchids as corsages, has become known to Europeans as "the orchid lady," news dispatches say, while the President's progress through the European capitals has been over flower-strewn streets.

CANNAS, 4-inch, will be good property in season.

NOW come the days when a reserve supply of coal is worth all it cost.

FIVE years from now, if the quarantine lasts, a pair of bay trees will be a curiosity.

DON'T miss the coal article in the Heating Department of this issue. Unfortunately, it offers little hope of lower prices for next season.

COLLECTIONS should be good this month. If a florist can not buy after three months of such business as that of the last quarter of 1918, what is the reason?

To each individual in the United States, whether he was selling services or merchandise, his own this year's Christmas prices seemed fully justified. All others were profiteering.

IN writing for the trade press one must be literal, absolutely. If sarcasm or humor are not blunt a contemporary likely as not will fail to get the point and waste a column over it.

DON'T let your wish to produce the largest possible quantity of spring bedding stock cause you to lose sight of the necessity of maintaining quality. While fine prices are in prospect for good stuff, poor quality will produce nothing but dissatisfaction.

PROBABLY it is too much to ask of human nature, but it will be far better to charge the public fair prices and pay the grower enough to enable him to hire the men he needs; don't take advantage of every opportunity to grind prices down; let's see "how good, not how cheap" we can do things in this trade.

THE WINTER SEASON.

Prospects for the winter season promise a demand that will absorb every item of stock the grower can place upon the market. In fact, due to war-time exigencies and consequent limitation of production, the probability is that at best the supply will fill only a part of requirements. Prices will be at the top notch and the market steady. It therefore behooves the grower to move his stock as rapidly as it comes into season and utilize his space for the growing of crops in rapid rotation, in order to reap a rich harvest in this time of unexampled activity for the trade. Many growers realize the importance of embracing the great opportunity like this:

The carnation stock advertised in the Classified section of The Review is entirely sold out and we could have sold ten times as much.—George Seubold, Huntingburg, Ind., December 20, 1918.

Kindly discontinue our ad of schizanthus, as we had an order for the entire lot the day The Review came out.—The Morris Floral Co., Morris, Ill., December 23, 1918.

When you hear a man complain of the cost of advertising you can be pretty sure he spends a good bit of money elsewhere than in The Review.

CYCAS LEAVES SCARCE.

Reports from Japan indicate that the American trade will experience a big shortage of cycas leaves this year. One big shipper in Japan has advised American supply houses which prepare these leaves for the florists' trade that there is a great scarcity of leaves and that, owing to European markets having absorbed a large portion of the supply, it has been impossible to ship to this country the quantities that the orders called for.

The crops of cycas leaves are cut in the autumn in Japan and some shipments already received here are far from the size expected. The new crop will not be cut until the autumn of 1919, meaning that the preparers will not be able to supply leaves again, after their present stock is exhausted, until early in 1920.

According to one manufacturer, the supply now in this country will not last long.

GARDENERS' WAGES.

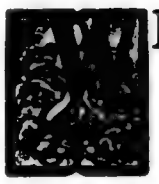
The subject of gardeners' wages is up for discussion, the wages of those who work on private estates.

M. C. Ebel, secretary of the National Association of Gardeners, has written an essay entitled "The Gardener and His Recompense," which he has sent in proof form to the secretaries of local horticultural societies with the suggestion that it be made the subject of discussion at the January meetings.

The same mail brings a copy of "Flower Lore," published by Maurice Fuld, containing an article entitled "The Underpaid Gardener." "You must admit," writes Mr. Fuld, "that it takes some courage to present this article to my readers, but I feel that it is timely and that it is really necessary. My paper now goes into the homes of about 6,000 of the most influential garden owners and so it will bring this matter home where it should be, but it does not reach the gardener, and so I would appreciate if you would give this article wide publicity, and I am sure it will redound to your credit as well."

We will all agree that every good gardener should have what his services are worth to his employer and it is quite possible gardeners would be more highly appreciated if their services cost more.

CHICAGO.



The Market.

Summing up the Christmas business, it was much the largest this market ever has known, accounted for by higher average prices, as the quantity of stock available did not equal that of other years. The individual percentages of increase vary widely, partly because some growers had more or less stock than others, and, with the commission men, because there has been considerable switching about among the consignors.

Taking it as a whole, probably stock matched up with orders as well as in any other years. As a big shortage had been foreseen, wholesalers had been careful about booking orders and, because prices were higher, retailers had ordered conservatively. Nobody had stock enough for all the orders he might have taken, but many houses filled about all the orders they took. The market was a little easier after the shipping orders were out, partly because December 24 was a wet, sloppy, snowy day, but at no time did the market have a surplus of anything except stock of such poor quality as not to meet the requirements of the gift demand. Poor stock never is in request at Christmas. There were many complaints that stock had been "pickled" by the growers, but the probability is that there was less holding back than in any other year; the condition of many roses and carnations more probably was due to the soft, dark weather and the high temperatures the growers used to force out as many buds as they could. It was the undoing of some of them.

The most trouble was experienced with carnations. The supply proved rather larger than expected and many buyers took no carnations at all, because of the high quotations. The strictly first-class stock cleaned up at about the prices of the previous week, but there were soft, sleepy carnations in some houses that were not easily sold and which pulled the averages down quite a little.

Roses never sold better. There were more special fancy roses sold at 75 cents than ever before were sold at 50 cents. There were more roses sold at 35 cents than ever before were sold at 25 cents, and the shorter grades were in greatest request and brought, relatively, the best prices. It certainly was the rose growers' harvest season and most of them cut more than they had been expected to. There were many extremely fine roses and some that were extremely poor. Russell was in both classes. Beauties were not the leading item of bygone years; the reduced supply has resulted in reduced demand, but the best were in request at good prices, more selling at $15 per dozen than in any previous year.

Violets, sweet peas, Paper Whites, valley, stevia, mignonette, calendulas and lilies were scarce and brought record prices. Orchids were more plentiful than expected and did not advance in proportion to other items usually plebeian. Poinsettias were in large supply, but sold well at the best prices in many years.

When the wholesale houses closed on Christmas day there were few flowers left, but for the next day or two the market was not so bare as it might have been. Prices declined rather sharply, especially on carnations. The retailers were not doing much and were busy working off what they had left from Christmas, which in some cases included quite a few cut flowers. Then demand picked up again, prices stiffened and the week closed with the market in good condition. At the opening of the present week a good New Year's business was being done as this issue of The Review went on the press.

The local retailers nearly all report the largest business on record, if not with cut flowers or pot plants, with baskets of boxwood, ruscus and novelties of one kind or another. Some of the larger stores did little with this class of material, but on the whole Chicago retailers sold much more of it than ever before.

Greenhouse Building.

The Chicago manufacturers and jobbers in greenhouse building material report the heaviest run of inquiries ever received at this time of year, with orders developing promptly in a fair proportion of the prospects. One of the special features noted is the large percentage of eastern inquiries; the requests for estimates for greenhouses to be built east of the Ohio-Pennsylvania line constitute a larger part of the whole volume of inquiries than ever before in the history of the Chicago material suppliers.

E. F. Kurowski, president of the Moninger Co., says he thinks a large percentage of the smaller places will build in 1919, a house or two, because of the recent fine business and the ability to handle more glass; but it looks to him as though the big establishments still are short of help and are not yet able to operate their present glass to full capacity. He thinks, also, that many small orders affords the basis for an extremely healthy business condition.

Various Notes.

The trade in Chicago will learn with regret of the death of Dorothy Lynch, only daughter of W. E. Lynch and Mrs. Lynch, at their home near Northampton, Mass. Their only son died only a few months ago. The Lynchs have many friends here, made during the score of years Mr. Lynch was in the wholesale end of the business in Chicago.

That the receipts of the last three months of 1918 and for the first nine months of the year are about equal is the report of W. J. Keimel, who adds that this record of Wendland & Keimel Co., he believes, is representative of the average grower's experience. He adds that, were it not for the fine finish, the year's showing would be a sorry one and that as it is it represents nothing which comes within the law's description of war profits—those above the average of pre-war years.

Returning to his first love after four years' absence, "Willie" Abrahamson again is in the florists' business. Mr. Abrahamson has been in the store fixture business since 1914 and has taken the place of F. J. Rioux in charge of the refrigerator and store outfitting department of the A. L. Randall Co.

In December Frank Schramm cut over 30,000 roses from his four houses, which contain Russell and Milady.

The A. L. Randall Co. had another of its salesmen's conventions between Christmas and New Year's, all its representatives being here for the talk over 1919 plans. There were several entertainments for them.

Speaking of the supply of violets this season, C. J. Michelsen says that the Rhinebeck district is producing only about twenty per cent of the usual quantity. The largest shipper, he says, planted only two houses out of ten and many small places closed down for the season.

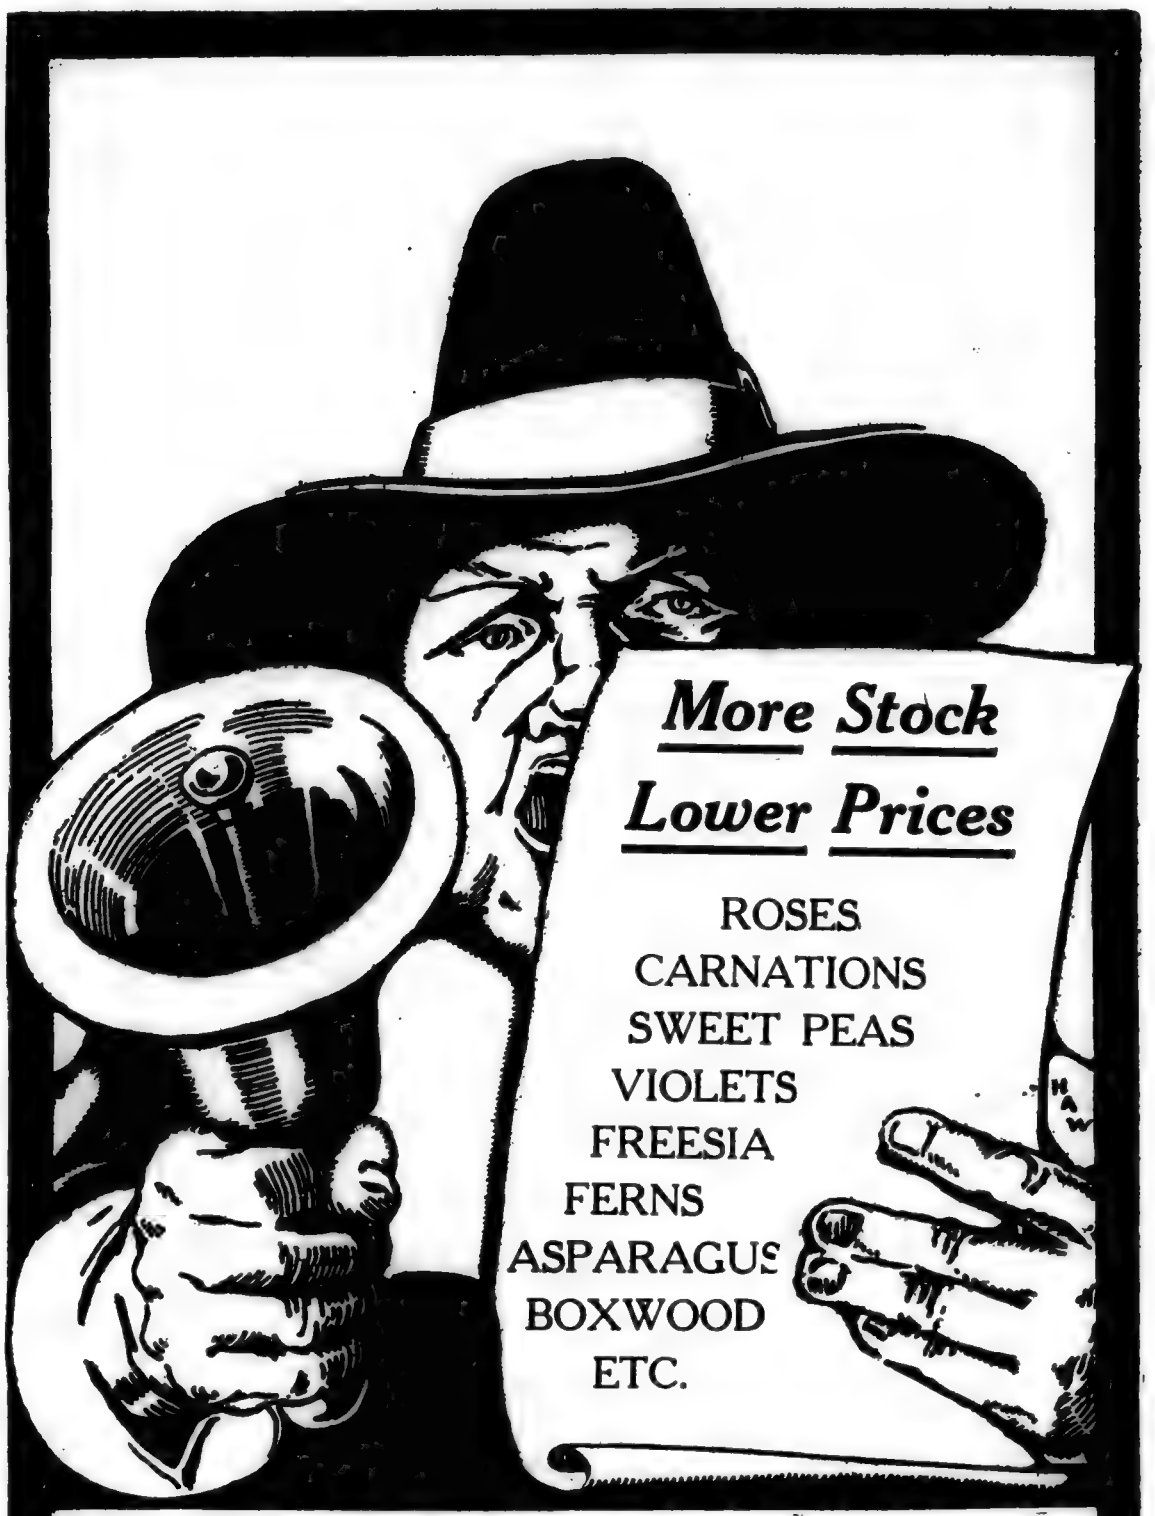
Emil Buettner's method of keeping within his fuel allotment was to plant several houses to chrysanthemums and let them stand idle after the mums were cut. When the fuel restrictions were lifted he filled one house with mignonette, another with snapdragon, a third with freesia and a fourth with cold storage lily bulbs. One way or another, he has his space quite well utilized, but he will have no lilies for Easter.

F. O. Franzen, for a number of years in business on the north side, now is located at Redlands, Cal.

George Way, formerly of the advertising department of the A. L. Randall Co., is doing sales promotion work for the Duro Paper Products Co. He assumed his new duties January 1.

When asked how Christmas business was, Edward Mallinson, manager of the Fleischman Floral Co., expressed himself thusly: "Ten large motor vehicles, besides our regular facilities, were needed to deliver our orders."

Application for a patent has been made by Paul Rasch, who has invented a simple sprayer which automatically mixes nicotine with water under pressure of the hose. Mr. Rasch has grown roses for Poehlmann Bros. Co. and other large Chicago concerns and discovered that there is much need of a better method than hand-mixing insecticides in water in the knapsack sprayer. So he contrived a double-barreled affair of extreme simplicity. One cylinder contains the nicotine. The water passes through the other and draws in the desired proportion, regulated by a gauge. If he gets his patent he will put the sprayer on the market.



One of the proudest men in Chicago these days is Morris S. Smith, of the W. W. Barnard Co. His brother was the first American newspaper correspondent to enter Berlin. His name is Frederick A. Smith, with the Tribune. He has spent two weeks in the former Kaiser's empire, eight days of which he spent in Berlin, reaching his headquarters at Paris again the day before Christmas. Mr. Smith made the trip from Frankfort to Berlin, a distance of 385 miles, by airplane, with a German airman as his pilot.

One of the north side florists who did an exceptional Christmas business was Charles Props, the Wilson Avenue "L" florist. The store of Mr. Props is directly opposite the Wilson avenue elevated station and people coming from this station are bound to see it. A large transient business is done here and all hands were kept busy by this class of trade Christmas day.

The friends of August Barnett, of Erne & Co., will be pleased to know that after being in the hospital for four weeks, his wife, who has undergone a serious operation, is now at home and recovering rapidly.

Clarence Ellsworth, of the J. F. Kidwell Co., in speaking of Christmas business at his company's store, says that while it was the best Christmas he had ever experienced, Christmas day, however, was unusually quiet in counter trade, which he lays to the fact the walking was bad and people stayed indoors. Phone orders kept them fairly busy all day. Most south siders had the same experience.

Have you made your reservations for the Chicago Florists' Club's banquet? If not, better do it now. The date is January 9; the place, the Bluebird room of the Randolph hotel, Randolph and

J. F. Ammann, of Edwardsville, Ill., president of the S. A. F., spent Christmas and New Year's in Chicago with his daughter and found time to call on many of his friends in the trade.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Pahud, of Indianapolis, were in Chicago two days the first of last week, doing their Christmas shopping in the market and among the seed houses.

days before. However, blooms of all varieties in season were plentiful and there was practically enough to go all around. There was, at the last, plenty of stock and good stock at that, which was disposed of at good prices. Roses, including Russells, Richmonds and Columbias, brought anywhere from 50 to 75 cents wholesale, while Sunburst, Hilda and the Killarneys ranged from 12 to 35 cents. The best American Beauty roses demanded $15 per dozen. The wholesale price of special carnations was $15 per hundred, there being no advance over the preceding week for top-grade blooms. Lily of the valley, absolutely the best stock ever handled hereabouts, demanded from $6 to $12 per hundred. Good Easter lilies brought $25 per hundred. There were also a few good early sweet peas, demanding $4 per hundred. Greens continue plentiful, with no advance in price for any of the varieties. Mexican poinsettias, Jerusalem cherries, Lorraine begonias and other Christmas plants were from twenty-five to fifty per cent higher than last year's prices.

Various Notes.

William T. Usinger, formerly a correspondent for The Review, and a salesman for the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co., is expected home any time from the machine gun service in connection with the 318th Infantry in France. Mr. Usinger, who for some time was a patient in a hospital in France, has more recently been an orderly in the same institution. Howard J. Hook, formerly auditor of the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co., who has been with the United States Ordnance Department, in Baltimore, spent a few days at home last week, remaining over Christmas.

Michael Kronis, who has been a patient in Mercy hospital for the last five weeks, does not improve so rapidly as had been hoped for. His condition still remains serious.

The McCallum Co. is lined up for another good year of work. Charles F. Edgar, well known throughout the country as manager of the Alpha Floral Co., of Denver, Col., has been added to the staff of traveling salesmen. Mr. Edgar will retain Denver as his home headquarters, his commercial territory embracing everything from the Mississippi river to the Rocky mountains. The McCallums have assigned their other territory as follows: R. E. Gary, Michigan and western Indiana; Henry Blind, New York state; C. C. Phillips, western Pennsylvania; A. F. Levy, California, Oregon and Washington, while Ross E. Adgate, the oldest man in the employ of the company, will retain Ohio and eastern Indiana.

Charles S. Zimmerman, of Glenfield, Pa., formerly entry clerk for the I. N. Scott Seed Co., has returned on furlough from Springfield, Mass., where he has been for some time in the aviation service.

All of the retailers report that there was little complaint from customers because of the high prices of cut flowers and practically everything sold.

James O. Hill, of the downtown Fifth avenue store of Hill Bros., writes that he is on the German border with Company C, 305th Field Signal Corps. Mr. Hill wishes to be remembered to all his friends and acquaintances in the trade,

The Market.

The Christmas demand was as heavy as any ever experienced here. Everywhere customers were turned away because of the lack of stock and everywhere prices were the highest ever known in this locality. Potted plants were the leaders in popularity, perhaps, because more popular in price. Jerusalem cherries, peppers, poinsettias, cyclamens, begonias and ferns cleared readily at from $1 up.

Although some people refused to pay such prices, practically all cut flowers were sold. Carnations ranged from $3 to $6 a dozen, while roses made from $4 to $24 per dozen. Poinsettias were good property at from $6 to $12 a dozen. All small flowers were rare. Violets, sweet peas, valley and calendulas were in good demand for corsage work, but were inadequate in supply. A few Roman hyacinths made an excellent substitute for valley.

Carnations have become more plentiful since Christmas, with clear weather. Prices, however, have not dropped, as they still bring from $10 to $15 per hundred. Roses are scarce, especially short grades, and they range from $6 to $30 per hundred.

Funeral work continues in heavy demand and absorbs all available lilies. Easter and rubrum lilies are in limited supply and callas move readily at $2.50 and $3 per dozen.

The usual supply of poinsettias has not been available this year. Both cut flowers and potted plants are inadequate to the demand. Narcissi, both yellow and white, are in the market at $6 per hundred. A meager supply of Roman hyacinths is seen.

So far this season, sweet peas have had no place in the market because of their extreme scarcity, dark weather having affected the crops.

Various Notes.

Indianapolis has a new flower shop, called the New York Flower Store, which is located on Illinois street between Market and Washington. It is owned by a young Greek, who devotes half of his store to flowers and the other half to candy.

Christmas Business Heavy.

From reports gathered from the leading retailers downtown and in the west end, we must record this year's Christmas business as satisfactory. A great quantity of plants was offered because of the high prices of cut flowers and the retailers had large numbers of them. These brought the business, as the public kept away from cut flowers as much as possible. The weather, too, was highly satisfactory and plants needed little wrapping, which saved a great deal of time. In looking over the showrooms of the uptown florists, we found them empty by noon Christmas day, but there was still a fairly good supply of cut flowers in the iceboxes. Among the plants that sold well were cherries and peppers. Poinsettias, as usual, had the call, with cyclamens and begonias next. Arrangements of mixed plants in baskets sold better than ever, and some exceedingly handsome ones were seen. The usual pots and pans of bulbous stock were missed, as only a few were in.

As to cut flowers, there hardly was any choice. The high prices scared many buyers off. One retailer declared that "another year of out-of-reach prices on cut stock will about kill the cut flower business for Christmas." December 24 prices in the wholesale market broke badly, as many of the retailers refused to buy at the quotations. Consequently prices were cut heavily. Carnations went down to as low as $5 per hundred, with $8 per hundred the top for fancies. The wholesalers this year surely were "between the devil and the deep, blue sea," with the growers demanding high prices and the retailers refusing to buy, while those who had placed orders in advance were complaining when the market broke. This situation applied only to carnations, as other cut stock was held at about the prices of other years.

There was a satisfactory demand for roses in all grades and varieties. Beauties were scarce, but the supply of Russells, Ophelias, Columbias and the Killarneys was good, and prices were about normal. Violets were held at $2.50 per hundred, but the price dropped to $1.50 per hundred December 24. Bulbous stock was scarce, Paper Whites sold for $10 per hundred and lily of the valley at $8 per hundred. Sweet peas cleaned up well, as the supply was small all through the week. There was a big call for greens, especially adiantums, asparagus and smilax.

Business since Christmas has been dull, but there were a great many orders placed for decorations for New Year's, which was expected to be a good

In the west end Joseph Witek, F. C. Weber, F. H. Weber, the Sanders Nurseries, H. Young & Sons Co. and John Boerm all report a satisfactory Christmas business, especially in plants.

Along Grand avenue the retailers report one of the best demands in years for plants. Among those who cleaned up nicely were George Waldbart, the Ayres Floral Co. and Miss M. S. Newman.

The Koenig Floral Co., Mullanphy Florists, the Bentzen Floral Co. and the Tower Floral Co., on the north side, also say business was good.

In the south end the demand for plants was excellent, while cut stock moved well, according to reports from the Eggeling Floral Co., R. J. Windler, C. Bergstermann, C. E. Schoenle and Charles Beyer. F. W. Bruenig, W. H. Kruse, A. Meyer, Mrs. M. L. Pelletier and the Diemer Floral Co. all say business was better than a year ago.

Downtown, Grimm & Gorly, Ostertag Bros., the C. Young & Sons Co., F. J. Foster, the floral department of the Vandervoort-Scruggs-Barney Co., Otto Sander and the Riessen Floral Co. say that business was satisfactory in all lines and would have been better had prices been nearer normal.

Thomas Carr has closed his flower store in the Union market. Mr. Carr says he will reopen it in March, when the plant season begins.

The Market.

It was a great Christmas. It was a green Christmas. It was a Christmas of high prices. Those who had stock did well, extremely well, but there were many who had little stock. The strong points in the market were the fine, mild weather, barring only Tuesday, December 24, which hurt the cemetery demand; the excellent transportation and the tremendous demand. The weak points were the scarcity of stock and the high prices. There was competition between flowering plants and cut flowers. Both were all sold; many more of both could have been used.

The volume of business undoubtedly was larger than that of last year, but hardly so large as that of two years ago. Prices were much higher and the quantity of stock was decidedly smaller. Had the stock been available, a new record would have been made. Never before has so much business been declined for lack of material. Prices advanced more on the ordinary than on the fancy grades of stock. These prices were paid by the flower-loving public much more cheerfully in most cases than could have been expected. The general opinion is that scarcity and high prices made the work lighter than usual and its value proportionately greater. In other words, the cut flower business began in earnest the morning of December 22 and lasted until noon of December 25. During that time there was never a moment when the market was in danger of breaking; it was stronger at the close than at the opening. White carnations were the only flowers that were ever in danger. They weakened a little for a short time only.

Roses are estimated to have totaled over one-half the amount of business transacted in cut flowers, carnations one-quarter. The feature of the rose market was the high prices of the short-stemmed grades. All grades brought more than last year, but the shorts brought more than double 1917 prices. There were not nearly so many red roses as last year, neither Hadley nor Richmond being in strong supply. Yellow roses also were scarce. While there were a good many more pink roses, there were not nearly enough, particularly of the lower grades. The ruling price on long Beauties was $1 each and on Russell 50 to 60 cents, but a number brought more on special orders. Carnations were a shade easier than was expected, due chiefly to a good supply of white. This was shown in slightly lower prices. Violets were scarce and higher even than listed prices. Sweet peas were abundant; some of them were extremely fine. The good supply of orchids went well. Cut poinsettias and stevia were freely used.

Since Christmas.

The market continues strong on a slightly lower priced level. Receipts of flowers are light; the demand is sufficient to take quickly all that is offered. Notable features are the bud-dropping in sweet peas, which has marred a promising crop at the last moment, and the absence of double violets. Poinsettias and cypripediums are over.

At the London.

The London Flower Shop has had the best Christmas in its history. The seven days from December 18 to December 25 made a new record of sales. So encouraging were the results obtained that the London is planning an extension. Discussing Christmas business, W. B. Tabor said the system in use had been so carefully worked out by his firm that only one package had been lost in a total of 4,000 deliveries. Mr. Tabor spoke of the benefit derived from a line on each order sheet concerning cards accompanying the order. This line requires a "Yes" or "No." It saves much trouble. Mr. Tabor thinks it would be good business to accept no order that calls for a card to be sent later. It takes too much time to find the proper package and put the card in it afterwards. The London Flower Shop was compelled to cease accepting orders for Christmas delivery at noon, December 24. The result was that many persons took their purchases with them in their cars and delivered them. The London did a brisk business in its side line, vases. Bowls, usually filled with a plant or plants, sometimes with growing bulbs of Paper White narcissi, were especially popular.

Floracroft.

The Floracroft greenhouses are the pride of Moorestown, N. J., horticulturally speaking. They were built by Walter P. Stokes as an aid to his large Philadelphia seed house. Gradually they have been increased until the place in the rear of the pretty residence of Mr. Stokes became an important business, so important, in fact, that, as Mr. Stokes once humorously expressed it, "The tail bids fair to wag the dog." Floracroft has become noted for its products, both in cut flowers and in plants, in Philadelphia's wholesale market, as well as in Moorestown, in the Jersey farms and in the seed world.

The moving spirits at Floracroft today are Mrs. Walter P. Stokes, proprietress; Edward Ross, manager, and Thomas Potts, sales manager. Mr. Potts is still there, despite the fact that H. H. Battles was wont to tease Walter P. Stokes by telling him that Tom was so attractive somebody would surely steal him away.

It was the day after Christmas. Alas, Mrs. Stokes was in Philadelphia and Mr. Potts was detained by important business at the bank. Fortunately Mr. Ross was there and most cordial in his greeting. It is not always safe to call just after a big holiday; things are apt to be upset. But Floracroft was all right, showing no let-up in the energy that has brought the name to the fore. The Easter lily is the main crop now, mainly cold storage giganteum, with some other sorts on trial. The giganteums were worthy their name. They were large and of fine quality. They are grown in benches and in pots. A third method, that of growing them in flats, is being tried. While only an experiment so far, Mr. Ross thinks well of it. The flats are more easily handled than pots and the space is recovered more quickly than when the bulbs are planted out on the tables. Stevia serrata, grown in a sash house, is extremely well done. Freesia Purity from California, staked by chicken wire netting, a great labor saver, is a beautiful sight, just coming into bloom. Another table of freesia grown from imported bulbs has been successfully carried over the second year in the same bench unmoved. After it flowered last winter, Easter plants were set on top of the freesias, and later tomatoes. The freesias started to grow again before the bench could be cleared in the summer, so they were fed. The chicken wire support was gradually raised and now they are in bloom. Chrysanthemums are over; so are poinsettias. Bulbs are the next crop. They are in flats outside, ready for moving into the houses. Golden Spur and the Emperor are the important varieties. Tulips have been reduced.

Ferns, for which Floracroft is famous, are grown in large numbers. The appearance of the stock was pleasing. The salable sizes had evidently sold well.

But what of valley? Mr. Ross could see no immediate prospect of these lovely flowers, for so long the pride of Floracroft, returning. German valley has disappeared. Valley from Holland and from Denmark is inferior. It is too bad.

Do you remember Garrett Malloy? It was Mr. Malloy who brought the valley king's crown and scepter from Lansdowne to Moorestown, after the death of A. J. Pennock, and presented them to Walter P. Stokes. Mr. Malloy is a good rose grower and a wonderful valley grower. Mr. Malloy said it was better to be without valley than to have poor pips.

GREENS of all kinds

The annual luncheon of the officials and field men of the Henry F. Michell Co. was held at a leading hotel in the center of the city, December 28, to talk over plans for the coming season. Those present were Paul F. Richter, F. J. Michell, Jr., J. A. Smith, J. H. Bachman, Charles A. Goudy, Otto B. Roboll, L. A. Cullerey, D. J. Keohane, W. J. Stokes and A. F. Eilers.

Sydney H. Bayersdorfer gave a dinner to the firm and employees of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., at the Hotel Adelphia, the evening of December 22. It was largely attended and much enjoyed. A feature of the evening was the visit of the telegraph boy to each guest with some comic message. The first telegram was for the host, from President Wilson, who regretted that his absence on the peace mission prevented his being present. Stephen B. Green added to the pleasure of the evening by playing piano accompaniments to the singing. The affair did not end until late.

Frank R. Hastings reports an exceptionally good Christmas.

J. J. Habermehl's Sons report a splendid Christmas, away ahead of last year.

M. J. Callahan got better results at Christmas than ever before, with less effort.

Charles H. Grakelow enjoyed his best Christmas; people were willing to pay the prices.

Hugo Niessen is the new chairman of the club room committee of the Florists' Club.

The meeting will be addressed by ex-President Chas. H. Totty, Secretary John Young, Major P. F. O'Keefe, Wallace R. Pierson and W. F. Gude.

ient, particularly those who have Philadelphia for their market, to attend this important meeting. Retail store men will be particularly interested in the address of Major O'Keefe, whose slogan, "Say It with Flowers," has done so much to benefit the trade. Wallace R. Pierson is one of the brightest and most practical men in the craft. A line from him is worth more than a page of theory. President Totty and Secretary Young, who have given so much of their time and best effort to this movement, will tell of its success, while W. F. Gude, who so ably guards the interests of the craft in Washington and, as president of the F. T. D., keeps the members keyed up to the greatest efficiency, will have an interesting story. Let every member of the trade in this section make a special effort to be present and receive the inspiration that is bound to come from meeting with these leaders of the profession.

KNOXVILLE, TENN.

The Market.

Never before has Christmas business been so heavy and, after all, stock was not so scarce as anticipated. All cut flowers sold out clean at the highest prices ever received on this market, and it was noticeable that the high-priced stock sold first.

Columbia, Russell, Hoosier Beauty and Hadley roses were much in demand and sold at from $5 to $12 per dozen. All carnations were fine and the best red sold for $4 per dozen; white and other colors brought from $2.50 to $3 per dozen. Paper Whites sold for $2, Soleil d'Or from $2.50 to $3 per dozen, Romans $1.50 and $2 per dozen, orchids $1.50 and $2 each, sweet peas in limited quantities at $5 per hundred.

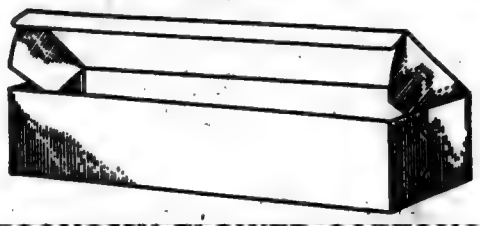
All plants sold well, but were limited in supply. The following were shown: Poinsettias, from $1 to $10 per pot; cyclamens, from $1.50 to $5; begonias, from $2 to $6; peppers and cherries, from $1 to $3; potted Paper Whites and Romans, from $1.50 to $5. Birch-bark baskets and willow baskets made up of ferns, cherries, chrysanthemums, lilies, stevia and poinsettias were plentiful and sold well at prices from $4 to $25 per basket. There were practically no plant baskets left over. Holly wreaths sold exceptionally well this year at $1.50 to $5 each. Immortelles and wreaths sold well.

Holly this year was not so plentiful as in former years, but the quality was much better, large, with well colored berries and dark green foliage, and the price was three times as much as in former years. Knoxville experienced its first snow the morning of December 28. December weather, as a whole, has been warm and bright.

Funeral work has continued to clean up all stock each day; also the demand for wax and prepared wreaths is strong and helps out the supply of natural flowers.

Various Notes.

A. J. McNutt cut some choice Russell roses for Christmas and was compelled to refuse orders for them. His sweet pea crop is fine. He reports Christmas business good and is well pleased. Mrs. Ella Angus, with Mr. McNutt, has the sympathy of the trade in the loss of her sister.



A. H. Dailey reports a good Christmas. He sold out all stock at top prices.

Mrs. Rosa Hall Ryno, as usual, had choice plants for Christmas.

Baum's Home of Flowers, Inc., had some of the finest red carnations ever shown on this market, also the finest Columbia roses. This firm was fortunate in having enough stock of its own growth, as the shipments coming were poor and in most cases delayed. It reports a fifteen per cent increase in Christmas business, with a thirty-five per cent decrease in Christmas expenses, which speaks well for its system. This

The Markets.

Trade on the whole was hardly up to expectations last week. Especially was this true of the cut flower market. High prices seemed to be the cause of the slackening of sales. Poinsettias had the first call. Roses, carnations and other cut flowers were in demand chiefly for funeral work. The general feeling of the trade is that cut flowers were too high-priced and that, though sales reckoned in dollars and cents were probably equal to those of other years, the number of individual purchases was less.

Potted plants, including poinsettias, cyclamens, begonias, primroses, etc., were in larger demand than formerly, while azaleas and rhododendrons were conspicuous by their absence, much to the regret of the florists. The sales since Christmas have dropped off noticeably, and it looks as though prices would have to be reduced or business will slacken up decidedly. A snow storm December 24 interfered with deliveries and doubtless curtailed the sale of cut flowers to some extent.

To show the way in which high prices affected sales of cut flowers, a lady patron stated that a patient in a local hospital received seventy-five potted plants during his illness, his room appearing like a conservatory. When all available space was filled, he directed that the plants be distributed among the other patients who had not been remembered so well. Cut flower growers may draw their own inferences.

Various Notes.

The Bills Floral Co., Davenport, Ia., reports that poinsettias were the only cut flowers in which sales came up to expectations. Of potted plants of all kinds this firm could not secure enough to fill orders.

Forber & Bird, Davenport, Ia.; J. Staack & Sons, Moline, Ill.; J. R. Tuckis, Rock Island, Ill., and Henry G. Pauli, Davenport, Ill., all enjoyed brisk business, in potted plants especially, and all report an active market since the holiday.

Mrs. George Forber is again at her place of business, after an attack of diphtheria.

C. O. E. Boehm and his daughter both have been ill with the "flu," but have recovered.

Harry Bills also is around after a siege of the same malady. W. G.

Christmas Business.

The weather December 24 was cold, cloudy and windy. While it was not freezing, making deliveries was disagreeable, but only a little wrapping was necessary. Christmas morning the temperature dropped to 25 degrees and toward evening the first snow of the winter fell, making it seem like Christmas. Business was excellent, the demand being greater than the supply of either cut flowers or plants. Prices were at least fifty per cent higher than a year ago. Roses and carnations were so high in price and hard to get that most of the florists who did not grow their own stock depended on plants to supply their customers. There were fine ferns, poinsettias, begonias, cyclamens and other plants in pans to be had.

Various Notes.

The Lockyear Floral Co. enjoyed a fine business. Besides some fine roses, which Mr. Lockyear secured on a contract with a grower, the company had a nice line of plants and a few cases of holly.

Mrs. J. C. Elspermann and her daughter, Mary, were on the sick list Christmas, and Carl Elspermann had his hands full, as business was the best ever.

SOUTHERN EVERGREEN CO.
J. L. CUMBIE Mgr. MORRIS STA., GA

Plants and flowers were cleaned up completely and more could have been sold. Good prices were realized.

Karl Zeidler sold all his roses and carnations and could have disposed of more. Plants were in great demand and he had a fine variety of them.

The William Blackman Floral Co. did not have enough stock to supply its customers. The company had its usual amount of holly and received about double last year's price. It was of poor quality, however. A large cut of carnations helped considerably.

Niednagel & Sons report a satisfactory business. Emil Niednagel says that they could have sold many more plants. They had a cut of several thousand carnations, which brought from $2 to $2.50 per dozen for the pink and white and $3 per dozen for the reds. They had C. L. Niednagel's cut of roses, which sold for from $4 to $12 per dozen.

The William Holbrook & Son greenhouses are idle this winter. E. L. F.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Christmas business was excellent. Prices, however, were high and buyers and retail consumers protested against them toward the close of the business. Blooming and foliage plants sold well, however.

The supply of roses continues short. Excellent American Beauties were on hand for Christmas business, but they moved out slowly. Other roses cleaned up readily. The carnation market has eased up during the last week, owing to heavier receipts than have been available for some time. Easter lilies are more plentiful than they have been for over a month. The supply of poinsettias for Christmas was excellent and sold well. Callas have been meeting a good market. Snapdragon sells well. Double violets, lily of the valley and orchids did not sell so rapidly as was anticipated for Christmas. Other offerings include sweet peas, stevia, calendulas, Paper White narcissus, forget-me-nots and primroses.

Greens are in good supply and find an excellent market. Mexican ivy may be had.

Various Notes.

Lieutenant Charles Windram, George Kessen and Ray Eck were home on Christmas furloughs.

George Epely, formerly with George N. Corbett, has been reported as missing in action. This is probably the first casualty among Cincinnati florists in the service in France.

W. C. Schaefer & Co. continued to send excellent cuts of Easter lilies and snapdragon to C. E. Critchell throughout the recent shortage in flowers. These cuts helped out wonderfully in taking care of the demand for stock in the market.

Florists, consignors of the William Murphy Co., arranged for a surprise on W. Ray Murphy for New Year's night. Mr. Murphy is moving into a new home he has purchased in Overlook, on Price Hill.

Frank Kyrk is home after several months spent in work at Canton, O.

Among recent visitors were A. Miller, of the American Bulb Co., Chicago; C. L. Osborn, Sidney, O., and J. R. Goldman, Middletown, O. C. H. H.

Seed Trade News

President, F. W. Bolgiano, Washington, D. C.; secretary-treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

CALADIUMS are scarce.

GLADIOLUS bulbs never sold so well as this year and the market is strong in spite of large production.

BECAUSE of the approaching quarantine, Holland will send over large quantities of gladiolus bulblets this season.

LOEWITH, LARSON & Co. received 300 bags of seeds on the Cedric, from Liverpool, which reached New York December 23.

THERE is a rather general belief that the 1917 season was high water mark in the seed business, but the 1919 season will be a big one.

IT is the belief, supported by considerable evidence, that most of the gladiolus bulbs have passed from the hands of the growers and that prices will advance.

ADDITIONS to the equipment of the Farmers Seed & Nursery Co., Faribault, Minn., include an entire new floor on the main building, giving increased floor space of 9,200 feet, also labor saving devices, cleaning mills and an electric elevator. Higher prices on all seed stock purchased necessitates the use of larger capital than ever before, but trade prospects warrant liberal expenditures. The spring catalogue will be mailed early in the new year to the 150,000 patrons of this firm, which annually appropriates $10,000 for other publicity.

SEED GROWING CONTRACTS.

Legal Status of Grower.

An instructive and important decision of the Georgia Court of Appeals, handed down in the case of Gilbert vs. Copeland, 97 Southeastern Reporter, 251, shows that an agreement to grow seed for another may constitute the grower a seller in the sense that he retains the title until delivery, or, by pertinent language, the grower may be held to be a mere employee, thereby precluding him from making a valid sale of the crop to some third person without the consent of the other party to the contract. The agreement in this case was close to the border line on the question whether the grower was a seller or mere employee, but the court holds that the seed at all times belonged to the seedsman, determining that the grower's legal status was that of employee.

Terms and Conditions.

The plaintiff and one Bell entered into a written contract which recited that the latter would "raise for and deliver to" the former watermelon seed to be grown during the year of 1917 on ten acres of "land suitable in quantity and condition for the purpose." Bell also undertook to "properly cultivate and care for the crop, and harvest, cure, separate and clean, as well as practicable with ordinary farm machinery, its entire seed products in such manner as to secure the greatest possible returns of seed suitable for seedsmen's use, deliver all seed to D. H. Gilbert (plaintiff), at his warehouse in Monticello, Fla., as soon as it can be put in suitable condition, and before October 31, 1917, without reserving, wasting, selling, or allowing any portion of the crop to pass from my possession, except as delivered to said D. H. Gilbert, as herein provided."

Another clause of the agreement required the plaintiff to furnish the stock seed, with a condition that "the stock seed and the seed crop produced therefrom is, and is to remain, the property of D. H. Gilbert, except as hereinafter provided." Other pertinent parts of the contract were as follows:

"It is further mutually agreed that D. H. Gilbert, or his agent, may at any time enter the field and at his own expense make such examinations, selections, or rejections as he deems desirable for the betterment of the crop for seed purposes, and he is not to pay for any necessary damage, if any, to the general crop, resulting from such work. * * * Any necessary remilling to be done by D. H. Gilbert at his own expense. Payment is to be made only for such seed as he considers sufficiently clean, bright and vital for seedsmen's use, test to be not less than eighty per cent germination; no credit being given for dirt, damaged or poor seed, which has to be removed. In all cases, all screenings and culls are to remain the property of the party who separates them from the crop."

After a provision that, in case the crop should prove to be unfit for seedsmen's use, title to the same should vest in Bell, the contract concluded with an agreement that plaintiff would pay Bell 10 cents per pound for all satisfactory seed delivered under the contract in excess of the stock seed furnished, payment to be made upon receipt of the seed and on its being ascertained that the same "is vital and fit for seed purposes."

Breach of Contract.

Bell produced 625 pounds of seed under this contract and placed it in sacks furnished by plaintiff; but, instead of making delivery to plaintiff,

Greenhouse Tomato IDEAL

Ideal is a new Tomato, the result of a cross of Bonny Best and Comet, and has the productiveness of Bonny Best with the keeping qualities of Comet, making it a perfect shipper.

This Tomato has one quality which no other Tomato we have ever seen has shown; the fruit has set in large clusters every two leaves on nearly all the plants. This makes it very desirable for the grower with low houses or the Carnation grower who wishes to set them among his Carnations and thus add another source to his income during the summer. Seed is saved from the choicest greenhouse-grown fruit.

RED COB BANTAM, the sweetest corn known, previously sold only in packets. Price, by express, pint, 60c; qt., $1.00; pk., $6.00. Large ears, $1.50 doz.

Special attention is called to our Soldier Bean and to our two varieties of Sweet Corn. No garden, large or small, should be without these good things. Cash must accompany all orders. When desired will ship by parcel post and C. O. D. the postage.

Every florist should have a vegetable garden. By using good seed success is assured, and by using the varieties here offered you will have the finest there is. Order early and have your supply of seed in hand.

sold the seed to defendant at 15 cents per pound. The seed being still in defendant's possession, plaintiff brought suit to recover it or its value.

Title of Dealer.

The trial judge ruled that the suit could not be maintained, holding that the contract showed an agreement for a sale of seed to be grown, for breach of which Bell could be sued for damages, but that the plaintiff had no such title to the seed as entitled him to follow it into the hands of the defendant, a third person. Reversing this decision on appeal, the Court of Appeals holds that the plaintiff can maintain the suit, saying:

Intent of Instrument Vital.

"The question is: Did Bell, under his contract with Gilbert, agree to sell his labor, or did the product of his labor constitute the subject-matter of the contract? In other words, did Bell, under the terms of that writing, obligate himself to work as a laborer, in accordance with stipulated rules and restrictions, in the production for Gilbert and under the latter's direction, of a certain commodity, at a wage to be determined by the amount of the output produced and delivered; or must the intent and purport of the writing be taken as constituting an executory contract for the sale of a commodity, whereby Bell obligated himself to produce for himself, and then to sell and deliver to Gilbert, a certain described product of his labor?

"It is plain that, by the explicit terms of the instrument itself, the first construction is declared to have been the intent of the parties to the agreement. Must the law set up a contrary construction? * * *

"In the instant case, a particular stock of seed was furnished to Bell from which he agreed to 'raise for and deliver to D. H. Gilbert' the increase therefrom. The method and manner of cultivation was prescribed by the terms of the contract, under which Gilbert was given the right, either for himself or through an agent, to 'at any time enter the field and at his own expense make such examinations, selections or rejections as he deems desirable for the betterment of the crop for seed purposes, and he is not to pay for any necessary damage, if any, to the general crop, resulting from such work.' Had this contract not been in writing, but had Bell taken the seed thus furnished him and faithfully complied with the terms of the agreement as to how the seed should be grown and prepared, and had recognized all the rights and privileges given Gilbert under the agreement, could it be said that Bell could not have enforced a compliance on the part of Gilbert? We think that he could have done so. That the product of the culture in point of fact appears to have had a value to at least one person other than the seedsman for whom it was grown is shown by the actual sale to the defendant, and for an increased price. However, this cannot negative the fact that the commodity was nevertheless of a 'peculiar character,' and was not only a particular seed stock, grown for a particular person, but under certain particularly prescribed stipulations and under Gilbert's right of direction; and since the contract itself says that the seed was to be raised for Gilbert, and that the compensation provided for by the agreement was for 'his services in the growing and delivering' of the seed, which was 'to remain the property of Gilbert,' we see no sufficient reason why a different construction must be enforced as a matter of law." S.

OPEN WINTER IN CONNECTICUT.

S. D. Woodruff & Sons, of Orange, Conn., report the most open winter in the history of the weather bureau. Plows are still going, with not a bit of frost in the ground nor a bit of snow on the ground, an unheard-of condition at this date, December 26. Many acres have been plowed in December and the condition gives promise of first-class crops with one exception, namely, the ice crop. Not over one-fourth of an inch of ice has formed on the coldest morning of this year so far.

All 1918 crops were secured in the best condition, especially the sweet corn crops, being the driest, soundest, brightest and of the strongest germination for many years.

logue of bulbs, plants and seeds; including such stock as gladioli, petunias, pansies, delphiniums, geraniums, etc., with a few specialties in vegetables, such as tomatoes, cucumbers and corn. A large proportion of the varieties were originated by Mr. Diener; the gladioli, he states, are all of his own production.

Holmes-Letherman Seed Co., Canton, O.—"Holco Quality Seeds," an illustrated 96-page catalogue, in a colored cover. Besides large stocks of seeds, in which farm and vegetable crops are especially well represented, the book offers extensive lists of implements and supplies, also bulbs, roots, roses and some of the favorite shrubs. The cental system of quoting seed prices has been adopted, as "it is exact and fair to all, and permits quicker and more accurate parcel post rating."

Carnation Support Co., Connersville, Ind.—A neat little circular, called by the company its "latest orange and black folder," and telling succinctly about the "self-tying flower supports for roses, carnations and chrysanthemums," with the "never-slip loop."

Richard Lohrmann, San Rafael, Cal.—Illustrated catalogue of dahlias, with cultural directions; sixteen pages and cover. The stock offered comprises, first, varieties originated by Mr. Lohrmann; second, the "best of recent introductions of other growers," and, third, a general collection.

J. Bolgiano & Son, Baltimore, Md.—An interesting, freely illustrated 88-page catalogue of seeds, bulbs, roots, plants, tools, fertilizers and miscellaneous supplies. The cultural directions for each crop are brief and explicit. The colored pictures on the cover represent a pleasing combination of patriotic and horticultural ideals. This is especially true of the central view on the back of the cover, which is a clever modernization of "The Spirit of '76."

OMAHA, NEB.

Without doubt this has been the biggest December and Christmas trade ever known here. The growers have been getting good prices for their flowers, double the prices of previous years. Roses have been more plentiful than carnations. Ferns and blooming plants and made-up baskets have sold well also. The public seemed to realize that azaleas could not be had and the florists look forward to the same appreciation of conditions for the Easter trade in respect to Easter lilies, as none will be grown in Omaha for Easter.

Holly and mistletoe were good, but double the price of former years. Christmas morning brought a fine snow, with zero weather. We have had fine weather throughout the month, in fact. Funeral work is still in strong demand, but we are hoping for relief soon.

All the annual state meetings at Lincoln, including that of the State Florists' Society, which was to have been held January 21, with a flower show, have been called off or postponed by the State Board of Health on account of the epidemic of influenza. L. H.

Sterling, Ill.—Roy E. Shelly, who grows vegetables for the market, intends to embark in the seed trade. He also plans to grow gladioli and other tuberous plants next season.

Christmas Sales Break Record.

The history of another Chistmas in the florists' business has been written, but this year it was not a case of "history repeating itself," because business broke all past records. December 24, the principal day, dawned with a cold, drizzling rain, which increased as the day advanced until it became a regular downpour. At noon the writer paid a visit to all of the principal retail stores, and the experience was much the same as getting on the street cars during the rush home. In all of my experiences I have never seen the public so eager and determined to buy flowers—it seemed as though what they wanted was flowers and nothing else would do. Of course, it may have been the general shortage of stock which made the rush so apparent, yet I was assured that even if the stores had had more stock it would have been impossible to handle any more business. All blooming plants were cleaned up early in the day. Then it became a matter of taking or refusing orders for cut flowers for Christmas delivery. Many of the stores had so many such orders on their books that the stock available and the labor at hand simply made the taking of more orders impossible.

The flowers mainly depended on were roses and carnations. These two staples were not far short of normal supply. Sweet peas and violets were not so plentiful, while all miscellaneous stock, such as Paper Whites, Romans, mignonette, etc., was decidedly scarce. Yet everywhere I inquired I was assured they had as much stock on hand as it was possible to handle. To my question as to what was the cause of the rush to buy flowers, the only answer I could get was that it was due to the increased demands. Never in the history of the trade in Baltimore has there been such a demand for flowers, and one of the features of this demand was the fact that the public was not so particular as usual, but was willing to take what it could get. I mean by this that where a customer had decided to purchase a blooming plant and it could not be had, he would compromise on a fern, a palm, or some other foliage plant. The same was true of cut flowers. If violets could not be had, roses or carnations had to do. Made-up baskets of foliage plants, such blooming ones in them as cyclamens and poinsettias, sold well and everyone had a good supply.

I have written this far without alluding to prices. But why talk of prices in an article of this kind, as long before this reaches the readers of The Review they will know what they received and had to pay for stock? With roses ranging from 15 to 40 cents, and as high as 60 cents for select; Beauties from $15 to $18 per dozen; carnations $12 to $15 per hundred; poinsettias $4 to $6 per dozen, wholesale, and the commission men not able to fill all orders, it would seem as if flowers are a luxury, but they are a luxury the public will not do without.

Among the Retailers.

At the Samuel Feast & Sons store, with the rain falling in torrents, it was impossible to get in. This was the only store that had any blooming plants left at noon December 24, and these were being sold as fast as the salespeople could tag and send them to the shipping department. It was impossible to interview any of the firm, but I did manage to get Mrs. Fannie Hill's ear for a minute. She said, "I am too busy to talk, but in all of my experience I have never seen anything to equal it."

Over at John Cook's store the only flowers left were five daisies, and they were not good plants or they would not have been there. Some idea of the business this firm had done could be gleaned from the great mass of plants that were wrapped and being delivered as fast as the trucks could be loaded. Miss Cook told me their cut flower orders broke all records.

At W. J. Halliday's place they had a window of orchids, which was the main attraction on Charles street. These are brought from the Halliday range in their regular containers and cut as they are required. One good feature about this is that most of them were used on Christmas morning, so this insures an attractive window until the last minute. Miss Gross was up to her eyes in work and too busy to bother with a reporter, but she did manage to say that business surpassed anything she ever had experienced.

At the Edwin A. Seidewitz store they had a fine lot of made-up baskets and window boxes, which were going like the proverbial hot cakes. "Better than ever" was the reply to "How is business?"

Telegraph or mail orders receive my personal attention.

Mary Johnston's main anxiety was to get the door locked. Her store was cleaned up on plants, but the salespeople still were taking orders for cut flowers and Mrs. Johnston was becoming alarmed for fear they would not have sufficient stock to fill them. The telegraph orders, as usual, were heavy.

Robert L. Graham's answer to the question, "How does it compare with former years?" was "Much better."

I could go on like this until I mentioned every store in Baltimore if space would permit. One thing that struck me forcibly was the fact that those stores in the poorer sections of the city wanted nothing but the best stock and were willing to pay as high as $5 per dozen for poinsettias, the only stipulation being they must be fine stock. By noon Christmas it would have been al-

Various Notes.

The sympathy of everyone in the trade will go out to Fred Burger in the loss of his only son. It would be sad at any time, but coming, as it did, just before the great rush, it certainly unfitted Fred for his work. Mr. Burger was a member of the Aviation Corps and died of disease at an aviation field in Texas. His mother was with him at the end. His body was brought to Baltimore for burial. Tate.

BRIDGEPORT, CONN.

Christmas Business.

All of the local florists report that Christmas business was better than that of any previous year, in spite of the fact that Bridgeport had a rainy Christmas eve. If the day had been pleasant, everyone probably would have been completely cleaned out. Cut flowers sold well, but people complained of the high prices, which were, in many cases, about double those asked last year. However, the retailers could not avoid this, as those who depend on the wholesalers were obliged to pay exorbitant prices for everything. Carnations brought from $2.50 to $5 per dozen and some red ones sold for $6 per dozen. Violets were high and scarce, bringing $5 per hundred. Roses were from $5 per dozen up. Orchids sold for $2.50 and $3 apiece.

On account of the scarcity and high prices of cut flowers, many people preferred to purchase potted plants, baskets, etc. These were attractive and most of the stores had a pleasing variety of them. They brought good prices.

Greens, holly, roping, wreaths, etc., sold well. Most of the stores and churches, as well as many private residences, were attractively decorated and this called for large amounts of all kinds of Christmas greens. In honor of the return of a number of the soldier boys, some people decorated their homes as they have never decorated them before. The city was overstocked with Christmas trees and quite a few of them are left over. A number of vacant stores were filled with Christmas trees, but, although people bought heavily, the supply was greater than the demand.

The Spanish influenza has again struck Bridgeport, and although there are not as many cases as there were in the previous epidemic and fewer deaths, still it keeps the florists busy supplying the sick with flowers, while funeral work also keeps all hands rushing. It has been a problem with some to obtain enough cut flowers to fill both funeral and Christmas orders. This has been especially true of roses and violets.

Various Notes.

The writer wishes the local trade and the trade in general a happy and prosperous New Year.

The Park Garden and Flower Shop report a splendid Christmas business. They made a blanket of orchids and violets recently, but had a great deal of trouble to obtain enough violets to fill the order. They had a splendid cut of carnations for Christmas, in fact, all kinds of cut flowers are more plentiful in their greenhouses than they have been for some time. Wreaths and greens went well, although the weather curtailed sales to some extent on Chrismast eve.

Robert H. Hawkins had an attractive window Christmas week. It contained a miniature house, painted white, with a red tile roof. Early in the week its windows were decorated with poinsettias; later these were removed and baskets and made-up plants were substituted. It was illuminated at night. This store had an excellent Christmas trade. Plants moved rapidly. Cut flowers sold well and brought double the prices of last year.

James Horan & Son say that Christmas business was satisfactory. They were about cleaned out. Carnations were plentiful, but roses were scarce. Trees did not go well, but this firm does not handle many of them. Funeral work keeps all hands rushing.

John Reck & Son are running both of their stores and will continue to do so until the old building in which they have been located for a number of years is demolished. Then all the business will be carried on at the new stand until they can return to their new store, which is to be erected on the old site. This store had a great demand for baskets and potted plants. However, there was little demand for corsage flowers. Mr. Reck says that the ex-

They supplied several of the large churches with roping, cut and potted poinsettias, palms, etc. This firm designed a number of pieces for the Seeley funeral, but had hard work getting roses to fill the orders. They could find no short-stemmed flowers, but had to take the specials.

Once again Christmas has come and gone and, as previously predicted, the holiday season was one of the busiest ever experienced. The business this year was augmented by an enormous quantity of funeral work, partially the result of the influenza epidemic, which is still raging in this city and vicinity. More business would have been done the day before Christmas, had it not been for a rain storm which started at noon and continued throughout the day. However, the greater part of the stock had already been sold. The weather, which was mild and clear, made delivery work easy, with far less work in the shipping rooms.

Christmas prices prevailed on certain which are of good quality and include all grades of Russell, Columbia, the Wards, Sunburst, Ophelia, Hoosier, Beauty, Scott Key, Prima Donna, September Morn and the Killarneys. Choice sprays of pussy willows are seen and sell at good prices. A fair supply of orchids is on hand and the demand during the holiday has improved. Few carnations reach the market and prices hold up well. They are only a trifle lower than at Christmas. The supply of violets, while not large, is sufficient to meet present demands. Calendulas are not much in demand, but the supply is small. Fine stevia is on the market and sells readily. Sweet peas are seen, but not in quantity. Mignonette is good and sells well. Snapdragons are much sought for. Paper Whites are used largely for funeral work, owing to the light supply of other small flowers. Easter lilies, though not plentiful, sell readily, as also do callas. The market is well supplied with all kinds of greens, including boxwood, leucothoe, asparagus, smilax and fern leaves. There is, however, a slight shortage of brown galax, for which there is a heavy demand.

Various Notes.

George B. Hart was a recent visitor to the wholesale markets of New York city. He reports excellent business during the holidays.

The retail stores report good business during the Christmas rush. J. B. Keller Sons did a mammoth business, fully as large as in former years. George T. Boucher also reports brisk business, in excess of any previous season. The Rochester Floral Co. also did a fine business, with a large quantity of funeral work. Salter Bros. report a satisfactory business in both stores. The amount of trade done by H. E. Wilson at both greenhouse and uptown stores was heavy. E. R. Foy and H. P. Neun also exceeded any former Christmas and cleared most all of their stock.

Hugo Tente, of West Brighton, disposed of an immense quantity of cyclamens, primroses and poinsettias for the Christmas trade. The latter were potted up with small ferns and sold rapidly. His cut of carnations is not large at present.

Charles Suhr had a fine bench of poinsettias, in the best condition for the holidays, which sold well. He reports good business for the fall and early winter.

Private Murphy, who formerly was a florist on Plymouth avenue, writing to friends recently from France, says he is enjoying the best of health and is hoping soon to return to the U. S. A.

Cohen & Bloom handled an enormous quantity of holly this season, which they report was of excellent quality. Many thousands of wreaths were made by this firm and everything was cleaned up before Christmas to good advantage.

CLEVELAND, O.

The Market.

Carnations and roses in the Christmas market were of good quality, but the prices asked were too high for the people and considerable stock was left on the florists' hands as a consequence. However, funeral work soon cleaned this up and the market now is back to its ordinary pace again. Plants sold well; in fact, most of those offered were taken. Artificial baskets and wreaths also sold well. Easter lilies are arriving in quantities, with a fair demand to meet them. The holiday cleaned up practically all the stevia. Carnations and roses are in good demand. There is not much call for violets and valley. Calendulas clear well. The scarcity of boxwood created a good demand for magnolia leaves, of which a large amount has been disposed of. W. F. B.

BUSINESS EMBARRASSMENTS.

The meeting will be held at the referee's office in Binghamton. The property consists of eight parcels of land.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

Capitola, Cal.—James A. Brown says that orders for gladiolus bulbs and also for Calla Elliottiana have been coming rapidly. He considers trade conditions excellent.

LOS ANGELES.

The Market.

There never was a time in the history of the business in this city when the legitimate supply and demand were so out of proportion for the Christmas holiday as this year. Two years ago, when a frost killed off everything locally, there was a dearth of certain kinds of local stock, but we were helped out by shipments from other markets. The indoor stock was good and the demand was not so great. This year other towns were short, likewise other sources of supply, while the demand for moderate-priced flowers and plants was never so great. The result was foretold and the prophecy was verified. Cut flowers were at a premium long before half the orders were filled and in some cases outdoor carnations of inferior quality were sold as high as 10 cents each. Plants of all kinds with the exception of poinsettias and cyclamens were scarce and nothing was left even of these two. There was little of any quality left and these could probably have been sold, had not the prices been too high for late comers. The demand for greens for wreath-making, holly and Christmas stock generally was brisk throughout. Days and even weeks before the holiday, large shipments were made and retailers reported big sales. Christmas trees were among the short items, and the supply of medium-sized tubs was exhausted long before closing time. A week of beautiful, crisp weather, with cold mornings and bright days, gave a Christmas feeling and opened the purses of the people, so that altogether this will go down as one of the best holidays ever enjoyed by the trade.

In order to get these notes on time, it was impossible to visit the individual retailers after the holiday, but the appearance of the stores was sufficient index of the business done. The delivery cars Christmas eve were going until long after midnight and again Christmas day everyone was busy until late in the day.

Various Notes.

Albert Beverley, of Santa Barbara, was in town late last week and was last seen leaving Los Angeles with his car loaded to the gunwales with stock.

S. Murata & Co. sold completely out of everything perishable and report the finest shipping business ever handled.

Fred Sperry, manager of the L. A. Floral Co., is congratulating himself on the Christmas business of his firm, as he was singularly fortunate in getting hold of a quantity of fine stock. The force was working day and night to get the shipments off and the motto of "Quality and Service" was well kept up.

W. Armacost & Co. had a wonderful holiday business, the quality of the roses and plants coming in from the Sawtelle range being better than ever before. H. R. Richards.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

At this writing, Christmas eve, local wholesalers and nurserymen in this vicinity are in a position to state that they have had a banner holiday business, and the retailers are in the midst of a rush which promises to clean up their stocks closely. The only disappointing feature is that there was not enough stock to fill shipping orders in full. In this regard the situation did not turn out so badly, however, as was anticipated a week or two ago, especially where carnations and violets were concerned. It seems the growers were holding back stock for holiday trade and brought in heavy offerings at the last minute. On cut flowers generally prices ruled higher than ever before in this market. Roses brought double last year's holiday prices, good stock cleaning up at the following quotations wholesale: American Beauties, $10 per dozen; Russell, $6 per dozen; Ophelia, $4 per dozen. Some of the finest Ophelia brought $5 per dozen. Red roses generally were strong, keeping pace with Russell. The quality of the stock left nothing to be desired, so the above prices for first-class stock mean that a high proportion of the offerings moved at those figures.

While higher prices were realized for flowering plants than in former years, the advances over the prices on holiday stock in 1917 were not so pronounced as in the case of roses and other cut flowers. There were few azaleas grown for this market this year, but other seasonable plants were in good supply, particularly poinsettias and cyclamens. Fancy combination plant and fern baskets made a fine showing and sold well. There were plenty of fine ferns for all requirements. Other greens were scarce, however, as well as California red berries and Oregon holly. Redwood garlands and red berries brought top-notch prices and cleaned up early.

The return of a good many florists from army service in time to help with the holiday rush, helped out to a considerable extent.

Various Notes.

Pelicano, Rossi & Co. secured the store adjoining their place in Kearny street for displaying their large stock of flowering plants. There they showed a fine assortment of poinsettias, cyclamens, begonias, heather and other Christmas plants. Christmas eve there was every indication of a close clean-up.

The MacRorie-McLaren Co. did a rushing business in flowering plants, both wholesale and retail, the nursery being sold out several days before Christmas on everything except stock reserved for the retail trade of this firm. Mr. Stelling, manager of the store, said December 23 and 24 were banner days in the sale of cut flowers as well as plants, notwithstanding the high prices of the former.

The Western Evergreen Co. reports the heaviest holiday business it ever had, the only difficulty being to get stock to fill orders.

J. A. Axell, manager for the E. W. McLellan Co., is wearing the smile that will not come off, as a result of the best Christmas business in the history of his firm. This concern had a big cut of roses, but not enough to fill the demand, so the entire stock cleaned up early at comparatively high prices.

C. Kooyman is well satisfied with holiday trade. He reports there was no effort in disposing of all the flowers he could get.

The force of the United Flower & Supply Co. had hands full caring for the holiday trade and had to disappoint some of its customers on account of inability to get stock to fill orders.

Mr. Enomoto, of Enomoto & Co., was swamped with violet orders, but succeeded in getting enough stock to do a banner shipping business on this flower. He also had a fine cut of roses, which proved a profitable source of supply for holiday trade.

B. M. Joseph made a specialty of fancy basket arrangements and ready customers were at hand to take all he had to offer.

The Art Floral Co. put on several extra salesmen for the holiday rush, but, even so, the force had all it could do to handle the customers December 23 and 24.

"Rushed to death," was the greeting received at Albert O. Stein's place, in Sutter street, December 23. He made a special feature of fruit baskets, which proved popular among discriminating customers. On account of the scarcity and high price of cut flowers, this store pushed flowering plants, giving them the greatest sale in the history of the business. A large Christmas tree, laden with ornaments and presents gave the store a Christmas atmosphere. It may be mentioned that this establishment has the largest frontage of any florists' shop in San Francisco and full advantage is taken of the wide expanse of plate glass for effective display work.

Steve D. Fazio, a partner in the California Floral Co., California, near Hyde street, is back on duty after spending several months in a training camp. He has his discharge from the army and was pleased to help out with the holiday rush in business.

Mr. Francis, of the Francis Floral Co., has no complaints to make about holiday business, except that he was unable to supply the demand for his new line of pottery specially treated to harmonize with the principal Christmas flowers and plants, thus doing away with the necessity for using crepe paper and mats. Next year, by preparing further ahead, he hopes to be able to meet requirements more fully.

Mrs. R. E. Darbee succeeded in filling practically all her holiday orders for violets, which was a great satisfaction to her, as it was extremely hard to do and was only made possible at the last minute by the arrival of a supply of the flowers from another grower. She holds the unusually cold weather largely responsible for the backwardness of the violets this winter, and the scarcity is accentuated by lack of help to pick them, owing to many of the gardeners and their families being down with influenza.

Frank Smith, a florist of Modesto, Cal., was a recent visitor.

Miss Recardie Lee Murray made preparations for an unusually heavy holiday trade and she did not miss the mark. Her stands at the Whitcomb and Clift hotels were rushed and so was her store in Geary street near Larkin.

BUFFALO, N. Y.

The Market.

Christmas is over. The volume of business done was great in all the stores. However, it was not nearly what it would have reached if the weather had been favorable. December 24 it rained all day and December 25 it rained up to 3 p. m. The early shopping helped a great deal. A large part of the orders received were in before December 24. Plants had been selected and cut flowers booked. There is no doubt that most shops would have been unable to supply the great demand had the weather favored us, but as it was everything went along smoothly and stock in most cases sufficed. The only thing left was white carnations. Of course the supply of plants was adequate, with the exception of cherries, poinsettias and begonias, and there was no fear of running short no matter what the demand would have been. Stock that really sold well was in plants priced below $5. These were within reach of the working classes and sold more easily than cut flowers.

Some of the shipments of cut flowers showed the effects of the practice of some growers of holding stock back for the holiday. Some of the roses from nearby points, as soon as exposed to air and light, opened up with a sickly blue color instead of a vigorous pink or red. Also a few shipments of carnations showed plainly that they had been in some dark cellar. The cut flower market has been high for some time and this practice was hardly expected.

In visiting the growers one often hears from some of them that his stock is not favored at the wholesale house or that he does not get the prices some others do. Is it any wonder that the retailer passes by the goods of a shipper whose stock cannot be depended on for keeping qualities? How often one hears at the wholesale houses the question: "Whose stock is that?"

F. P. A.

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

Christmas, 1918, will be written into the history of the florists' business of Providence as one of the biggest holiday seasons ever experienced. Potted plants and cut flowers of all kinds were scarce; greens of all kinds were limited and prices were correspondingly high, but this made no difference. People wanted flowers and plants and had the money to pay for them and as long as the supply lasted they bought regardless. And then the imitation stuff had its innings and made the most of the opportunity. More artificial goods were disposed of than have been sold in several previous seasons combined.

Evidences of the shortage of Christmas stock became apparent more than a fortnight before the holiday and there was a general scurrying around on the part of the wise ones to fortify themselves against the onslaught that was to come. But there was no reserve to draw from and many of the florists closed their books against orders several days before the yuletide and only the most tempting offers were potent to secure coveted plants and blooms during the final hours.

Prices were abnormally high, in many cases establishing new records for this market. Carnations were quoted at $15 to $25 per hundred wholesale; roses $18 to $50 and lilies $20 to $35, while poinsettias were $35 to $75. Aside from these, there was nothing in the market and nothing asked for. But no matter what the price, everything sold.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

President, J. R. Mayhew, Waxahachie, Tex.; vice-president, J. Edward Moon, Morrisville, Pa.; secretary, Charles Sizemore, Louisiana, Mo.; counsel, Curtis Nye Smith, 19 Congress St., Boston, Mass.; treasurer, J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Ia.

THE death of E. Y. Teas is recorded in this week's obituary column.

THE Denver Nursery Co., Denver, Colo., reports a thirty-five per cent increase over last year's business.

HERETOFORE selling fruit stock has been the retail nursery salesman's daytime job. Ornamentals provided him with after-supper work. Judging from reports as to the supply of fruit stock, the salesmen now will have to reverse the usual order of things.

"OUR fall business this year has been better than ever before," says O. A. D. Baldwin, small fruit specialist, of Bridgman, Mich. "We have cleaned up our surplus in good shape and look for a large retail business in the spring," he adds. Mr. Baldwin is introducing this year a new red raspberry, which he calls the Victory.

ORNAMENTALS MOVE FAST

Business Good in Mississippi.

"While somehow we have been growing and selling normal quantities of various kinds of stock, as compared with prewar times, our offerings of roses this season will be twenty-five per cent less than a year ago," says S. W. Crowell, general manager of the United States Nursery Co., Roseacres, Miss., in discussing the year's business. "There is an apparent shortage of the better varieties of roses and our supply is limited, with the exception of the Wichuraiana type, and we do not expect these to last through the season. Shrubs have sold well, especially the good commercial sorts. There has been an excellent demand for peonies, especially the cheaper named varieties, and phloxes and Japanese irises have sold readily. There is a strong demand for cannas, with a considerable shortage in supply.

"Orders booked to December 15 were normal, with a continual increase. We have not pushed sales, feeling that the limited supplies would be taken by the end of the season. This may not be the proper method to pursue, but we wanted our customers to feel that there is a shortage of stock and that there would be no bargain prices this season.

Prices Are Higher.

"Every order booked this year brought the full price. We have decided to get full value for our stock and buyers seem to feel we are right in our demands. This is indicative of a healthier future for the nursery business, a condition devoutly to be wished.

"The labor situation is acute. It is likely we will increase our force later, but not in time to affect the planting for the coming season, as each year we try to finish by March 1.

"To sum up: We have held our own during the times of stress and we believe the outlook for the nurserymen never was brighter. We are sure the trade will come into its own if the nurserymen will only use a little commonsense and sit steady in the boat."

much as can be handled in good shape. The help question will be the most serious one, perhaps, though this may be better than we think by the time the season opens. We do not think, however, that the price of help and the cost of handling our goods in general will be materially less and, considering the lively demand as reported in other sections, the nurserymen should be wise enough now to ask a good price for their goods, a price that will enable them to give good service and good stock to our customers. That is what we are striving for, even at the expense of the volume of our output."

THE FRUIT TREE SITUATION.

"Fall sales have been satisfactory as a whole and orders are coming along even at this late date," says W. C. Reed, proprietor of the Vincennes Nurseries, Vincennes, Ind. "We are still shipping. The demand for cherry and peach has been heavy and we have turned down more orders for the latter than we have filled, especially in light grades. We still have, however, a fair assortment of first-grade stock, and extra-heavy 11/16-inch stock and up. Out of a planting of 450,000 stocks of No. 1 Montmorency and Richmond, there are only a limited number left. Year-old cherry has been in fair demand. The 1-year-old stock we have not been digging, preferring to hold it for another season.

"Apple trees have been in good demand and our sales at retail show a marked increase over a year ago. Spring deliveries will take about all the apple trees in the leading commercial sorts there are. Japanese plums are entirely out of the market; also American, with only a moderate supply of European stock for spring. Kieffer pears are scarce and other varieties only in moderate supply, with a fair demand.

"From present indications we think there will be the greatest shortage of fruit trees we have seen in many years before the spring season is over.

"Ornamentals are in good demand and sales are steadily increasing.

"Prices are likely to remain firm for the next year or two and on some items will advance. It will pay nurserymen to care well for their stock and produce the best, instead of trying to increase plantings. Give good quality and ask good prices."

SMALL FRUITS SCARCE.

"Our business up to this time has been satisfactory; our wholesale business has been good, and we have found a lively demand for fruit trees of all kinds, with the exception, possibly, of standard pear and cherry; everything else is moving well," says Roy M. Sperry, secretary of the Greening Nursery Co., Monroe, Mich.

"There is a great scarcity of small fruits of all kinds, they being almost impossible to secure at any price. We have found our retail business about on a par with last year, but business for spring delivery so far is better than last year. We should say that should the epidemic of influenza abate so that agents may be able to get in a normal amount of work, the prospects for spring business are good."

Christmas Business.

Christmas is over once more, and it has been a great relief to the growers to have come through the busy season with the finest weather conditions that have been known for years. During the entire week preceding Christmas the thermometer hardly went below the freezing point and little extra wrapping was necessary. Shipments went out in the pink of condition and received exceptionally good treatment at the hands of the express companies.

Prices were higher than ever have been known, but there does not seem to be any difficulty on the part of the retailers in disposing of stock. There were some fine Hoosier Beauty roses, which brought 60 cents each, but Columbia, Ophelia and the other varieties were wholesaled at $30 per hundred. Instances were known where Paper Whites were charged wholesale at $6 per hundred, and were retailed at $2.40 per dozen, but we trust that cases such as these were the exception rather than the rule. Soleil d'Or brought $8 per hundred by reason of the scarcity of all bulbous stock, but the good quality warranted the price on this particular occasion. Generally speaking, it is felt that the high-water mark has been reached in the matter of prices this Christmas.

Various Notes.

Apart from the hurry and bustle of business, the week has been rather a sad one. E. H. Dale, the only son of the late Henry Dale, founder of the greenhouses here, was a victim of influenza, followed by pneumonia, passing away December 22. "Ted," as he was familiarly known to all, was in his thirty-fourth year, but had never been actively engaged in the business of the Dale estate. His sister, Fanny, who was married to W. A. Beatty, of the shipping-room staff, also passed away, December 24, after an attack of pneumonia. W. G. P.

Battle Creek, Mich.—T. H. Fuller has found business exceptionally brisk this season and has sold out his own crop of gladiolus bulbs. He has taken over the stock of Earl Edgerton, of Lansing, Mich., consisting of about five acres of bulbs, and hopes, "with the assistance of The Review, to be able to dispose of this stock before planting time." "The large orders this year," says Mr. Fuller, "certainly are not due to a shortage in the bulb crop, nor the higher prices, but are due to the fact that the florists realize the merits of the gladiolus as a cut flower and many seem to be growing this flower this year in their cool houses."

THE COAL SUPPLY.

Present and Future.

The United States Fuel Administration has announced that it will relinquish its control of the fuel situation at the beginning of the new coal year, which is April 1, and possibly before that date. However, there will be no change in the maximum prices of coal until April 1, nor will the zone system be abolished.

There has been much speculation in the trade as to what effect the retirement of the Fuel Administration will have on the prices and supply of coal for the growers. Some growers, a majority of them, in fact, undoubtedly believe that prices will come down at once and that something near the conditions of three years ago will prevail—that the days of Pocahontas at around $1.25 per ton at the mine will return.

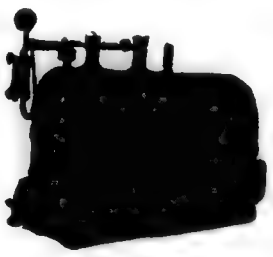
A man who is in close touch with the coal trade, mine operators and jobbers, is the authority for the following assertions:

The price of coal will not be reduced, at least for several years.

There will be little if any Pocahontas coal in the Chicago or other markets outside of the immediate vicinity of the mines. What there is will command prices that will be several times the old price.

Here Are the Reasons.

In support of these assertions, this coal authority sums up the situation as follows:



The United States Fuel Administration never has fixed a minimum price; its prices were maximum. There was nothing about government control that stopped the coal dealers from charging less than the fixed prices. Consequently, the retirement of the Fuel Administration will merely remove the restrictions as to how much the mine operator can charge for his product.

Eighty per cent of the cost of coal at the mine mouth is the labor cost. Coal miners never before have been paid such wages as during the last two years. The amounts they have received for the miners' week, which ordinarily is five days of six hours each, are so large that to name them would create a doubt as to the truth of the statement, but it is sufficient to say that the pay per ton is high enough to lure such men as division superintendents of railroads at $200 per month into the mines as common miners. Three 6-hour days a week fill the miners' pay envelopes full enough so that there is no incentive to work longer unless there is a shortage of coal. Under these conditions it is apparent that the supply will be large enough for the demand, and no larger. A glut of coal would will put high temperatures into your heating lines.

Kroeschell Tubeless Boilers

It will pay you to consider the advantages of KROESCHELL BOILERS for Hot Water or Steam, no matter how large or small the size of your establishment.

The superiority of our boilers has resulted in the removal and abolishment of hundreds of cast iron sectional boilers—in every instance KROESCHELL BOILERS give more heat with the same piping with less fuel.

KROESCHELL BOILERS have no bulky, soot accumulating surfaces—you avoid the disagreeable work and trouble indispensable to cleaning boilers with complicated and tortuous back and forth fire passages.

The high safety factor of KROESCHELL BOILERS eliminates the danger of cracking and break-down risks.

Successful greenhouse owners everywhere insist upon KROESCHELL BOILERS because they are dependable and economical—you get better and longer service—you can reduce your heating costs by burning the cheapest grades of soft coal.

It is a sign of scientific management to own a KROESCHELL—a business management that insures a responsive, efficient and profitable heating system.

The supremacy of KROESCHELL BOILERS is proven by their country-wide adoption.

mean lower prices; lower prices would eventually mean lower wages.

And on top of this, it is said, the miners will ask for an increase as soon as the present contract expires, which is on the day that the peace treaty is signed.

No Pocahontas Available.

The abolition of the zone system established by the Fuel Administration, which does not allow coal from one section to be shipped to another in order to save overburdening the railroads and other transportation systems, will not have the effect of getting Pocahontas, or smokeless coal, into the markets where it was formerly sold, because it is an ideal export, or bunker coal. Every grower knows that there is little danger of spontaneous combustion in Pocahontas coal, while the lower grades of bituminous coal have to be watched carefully for internal fires. The demand for coal for export during the next few years is going to be great; it is large now, and will continue so until the mines of France that were destroyed by the Germans have been restored and are producing again.

Taking these assertions of the coal authority into consideration, it appears unlikely that there will be much relief for the growers for several years to come. The only satisfying thing about the situation seems to be that there will be no trouble to get a supply of the coal that the trade has been using during the last year or more. It will come high, but we have to have it.

"Tell your florist friends that if they are wise they will connect up with a coal producer and contract for their supplies," this coal man told The Review. "Then," he added, "they will be assured of their supply, and there will not be the chance to 'pass the buck' for failure to deliver, as there is when coal is bought of a jobber, when the demand is great and prices are high."

HOW TO REMOVE SOOT.

The United States Fuel Administration, through Harold Almert, director of conservation, has issued the following advice to the owners of hot-air, hot-water and steam plants on how to remove soot and tar from the heating surfaces, smoke-pipes and chimneys:

"Get the fire into good condition, so that the fuel bed is bright or incandescent, and on the hottest part of the fire spread several handfuls of salt; then close the door and open the drafts. Common salt, either of the table variety or fine grain rock salt, such as is used in making ice cream, has been found effective.

"When the salt is applied the heating plant immediately will become filled with dense white fumes, which will penetrate to every part of the furnace, smoke flues and chimney and in less than an hour the effects of the salt will disappear. Then brighten up the fire again and repeat the operation two or more times until all heating surfaces have been entirely cleaned.

"Later, one application of the salt treatment once or twice a week will keep the heating surfaces in a clean and efficient condition. The chemical action will not attack iron or be in any way detrimental to the heating plant."

CYCLAMEN.

Cyclamen. Now I am talking about a subject that I know interests you all. I have planted many hundreds of thousands of cyclamen seeds and sold plants in every state in the union and this is a subject on which I will try to interest you more than ever for several reasons; you will see this season again that every available plant that is salable will be disposed of and you could have sold more; again, owing to certain laws that are about to be put in operation (if I am informed correctly) will prohibit importation of azaleas, thus we will have to depend on domestic grown stock, and what is better adapted for Christmas sales than cyclamen?

If you have not seeded cyclamen for next season for your Xmas needs, then it would be wise for you to buy transplanted seedlings if you want to grow them yourself, or three or four-inch stock for May, June or July delivery. In either case it will be wise for you to place your order at once, for I am certain the same condition will prevail as last season, when we turned down orders for thousands and thousands of plants. Seed sown now will make good plants for later sales. Seed advertised in classified section for seeds.

Can offer you the cream of several hundred thousand seedlings for delivery as you desire as follows:

Seedlings, transplanted, separate colors, grown from the very best of seed obtainable, $8.00 per 100, $75.00 per 1000.

Seedlings, transplanted, separate colors, grown from a very good commercial strain, but not as good as above, $6.00 per 100, $55.00 per 1000.

Cash. Money returned if sold out. Have booked many orders for 5000 and 10,000 lots.
A. M. Augspurger, 231 Gilbert Ave., Peoria, Ill.

125,000 Cyclamen seedlings, twice transplanted, 4 to 6 leaves, Wandsbek type, dark red, light red, white, salmon, also 3 shades of best pink. From home sown seed of the best cyclamen experts who sold 86,000 last year and not one complaint. No azaleas next Xmas. Be prepared, buy seedlings, $6.00 per 100, $50.00 per 1000.
G. M. REBURN & CO.,
172 No. Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

Ferns. With stocks lower than ever, demand unprecedented, business increasing by leaps and bounds, will create a shortage never known before. Prices will be higher. Stock I offer is as good as the best. Consider quality first.

Gladiolus: Mrs. Watt has been grown from Massachusetts to California, and has made good with every florist who has given it a trial. Resembling the American Beauty rose in color, but more brilliant, it will occupy the same place among gladioli as does the American Beauty among roses. Unexcelled for forcing, and because of its distinctive beautiful shade and strong upright growth, it meets the need of every florist.

Prince of Wales is destined to be the best florist's cut flower gladiolus ever known. Color a clear, gorgeous, glistening salmon, melting to throat of the sweetest yellow. The Ophelia Rose of the gladiolus world. Extremely early (just after Pink Beauty), large flowered on tall, strong spike and grand multiplier. Every spike a bouquet. Certificate of Merit at Haarlem, Holland. Excellent forcer, weeks ahead of America. I believe that I have the largest TRUE stock in America and offer strong, flowering bulbs for propagating (grown under Skinner irrigation and disbudded), 4 for 50c, $1.50 per doz., $10.00 per 100. Get stock of this great variety now. I doubt if there will be a bulb on the market in two months. Raymond M. Champe, Walled Lake, Oakland County, Mich.

STOCKS NOT FLOWERING.

I am sending you a plant to learn the name of it, when it will flower, etc. I sowed the seed for ten weeks' stocks, but the plants are almost a year old. H. H. M.—Mo.

The plant came to hand dried up and frozen, but it undoubtedly is a stock, though not the ten weeks' stocks type. Possibly there may be a fifty weeks' type that I have not heard of. I am afraid that you have been sold seed which was not the ten weeks' variety at all. The plant in its habit resembles a variety which was widely grown in my younger days, named East Lothian. We may expect many disappointments in both flower and vegetable seeds as a result of the war. The seed industry in Europe has been dependent on the labor of women, girls, boys and old men for several years, and years must elapse before conditions become normal again. C. W.

PROPAGATING MUMS NOW.

I grew mums in a cool house this season. Now the benches are full of nice cuttings, just right for rooting. Could they be cut now and grown for next season? If so, how should they be handled? L. N. B.—O.

While the cuttings that have appeared on old stock could be removed and planted for blooming next autumn, still if planted now they will grow too tall. I would suggest that L. N. B. take the cuttings off now and plant them for stock plants; that is, plant these cuttings now and allow them to grow along for a month or two and then take the cuttings that appear on them. Plant these in a bench after they are rooted and they will bloom satisfactorily next fall. In this way he will have better results than if he uses the cuttings now appearing for flowering plants for next autumn's crop. C. H. T.

PANSY FERTILIZER.

What would be the best fertilizer to apply as a top-dressing to my pansies as soon as the mulch is off in the spring? The bottom leaves have turned yellow, as though they needed fertilizer. I did not use as much stable manure as usual this season. C. A. P.—Me.

The safest and best fertilizer to apply to your pansies in the spring would be well rotted manure which has been kept under cover, dried somewhat and passed through a 1-inch screen. If this is not obtainable, procure some pulverized sheep manure and broadcast it, later working it in among the plants. I would prefer not to use bone or any chemical fertilizers for the plants. C. W.

After all's said and done, that's what you're working for—isn't it? And anything that will positively and permanently add to your profit is worthy of your most serious attention, isn't it?

Well then—

What about adding to your range of greenhouses? It is your primary source of profit—or it should be. If you are running your business in a business-like way—and we assume you are or you wouldn't be reading this paper—you are undoubtedly getting all the profit you can out of your present range. So—the only way to increase your profit is to increase your range. And the only way to increase your range profitably is to build the best houses, for in them you can grow the best stock at the least expense. That is, no money wasted on unnecessary labor—no money wasted on "patching up" poor houses.

AGMCO houses have proved the BEST for an army of satisfied and successful growers—they'll prove the best for YOU, too, if you'll give them a chance.

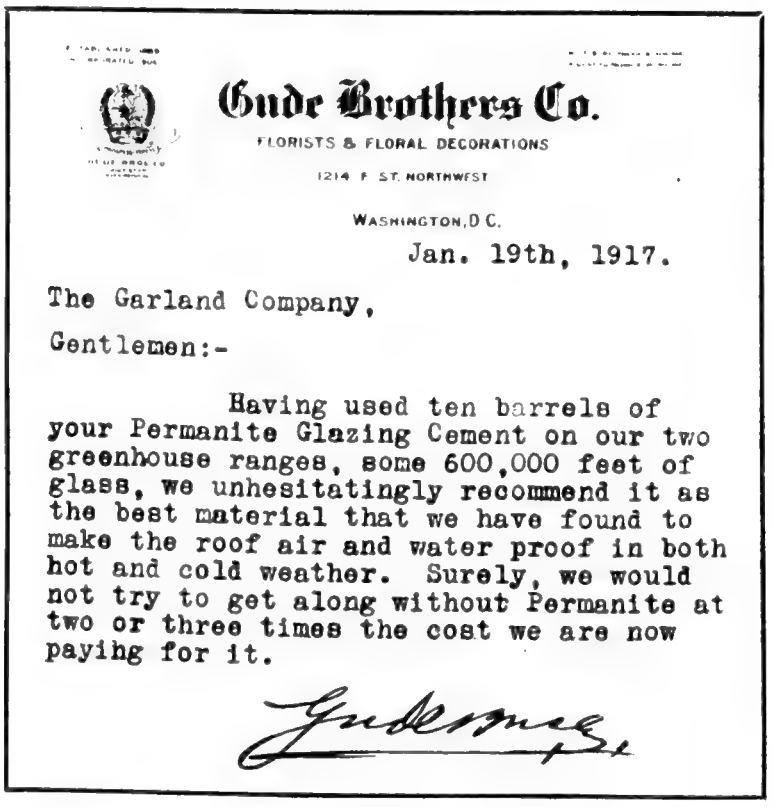
600,000 Feet of Glass PERMANENTLY Permanited with PERMANITE!

Gude Brothers of Washington, D. C., own over 600,000 feet of glass—and it's all glazed with PERMANITE!

As Postum says—THERE'S A REASON!

PERMANITE is there! It delivered the goods! Gude Brothers say it would be cheap at three times the cost—WHY? Because Permanite makes your greenhouses absolutely air-tight, cuts down your coal bill. Permanite is ELASTIC; it responds to the vibration of the Greenhouse—it NEVER HARDENS! You save money on cracked and broken glass. The glass can be removed without trouble—whenever desired; another saving on time and labor.



A year of service will prove to you, by your own coal bill, that Permanite makes your Greenhouses air-tight, that it keeps the cold out and the heat in. No more leaky sash for you if you use Permanite—that's sure.

In addition to glazing and repair work around your Greenhouses, Permanite can also be used for relining gutters, for waterproofing roofs; there are so many different ways in which you can use Permanite that, once you have tried it, you will NEVER want to be without it.

PERMANITE Lasts

THREE to FOUR TIMES AS Long as Putty!

Read what Gude Brothers have to say about Permanite; surely you can't go wrong acting on the tip of these nationally-known florists. Get in line now, give Permanite a trial and make it SAVE you MONEY, TIME and COAL. Drop us a line NOW—and our Service Department will gladly answer any question you may have.

The Garland Company,

Gentlemen:-

Having used ten barrels of your Permanite Glazing Cement on our two greenhouse ranges, some 600,000 feet of glass, we unhesitatingly recommend it as the best material that we have found to make the roof air and water proof in both hot and cold weather. Surely, we would not try to get along without Permanite at two or three times the cost we are now paying for it.

Less Flowers and More Ribbon

In these days of high priced flowers, it is real economy to use ribbon lavishly. Many designs with a few flowers tastefully arranged with a large bow of inexpensive ribbon will give greater satisfaction than when many expensive flowers are used in the design.

Progressive Florists realize that in these days of heavy retail overhead something must be done to counterbalance the high cost of flowers.

A large, attractive ribbon bow can be made up by you in a medium grade of ribbon at a cost not exceeding 75 cents. Width of the ribbon, 5 inches. Higher grade ribbon in proportion.

You Florists who still believe in economizing on ribbon, take notice. AT YOUR SERVICE.

A BIT ABOUT THIS AND THAT

Coöperation has succeeded competition in many lines of business, but it is doubtful if the florists' trade has progressed to the point where the good of all will be considered as outweighing supposed self-interest. Still, the ideas here set forth may be workable. Who knows?

BY ROBERT S. EDGAR.

THE florists' business is passing through what might be called a period of automatic reconstruction, and it will, as a result, emerge as a real business, conducted on real business principles. The ideas of yesteryear have gone into the discard and the trade is awake to the fact that its methods are in need of radical revision.

Florists in general have become greatly interested in finding out the cost of production, a phase of the business heretofore overlooked almost entirely. Gone forever, let us hope, are the days when flowers were peddled on the street. Especially do we hope we have seen the last of the faker who, on a Saturday night, shouts, "Roses 10 cents a bunch;" of the department store which advertises Boston ferns at 29 cents each, and the peddlers' wagons loaded with spring bedding plants, all of which have been factors in holding our business on a much lower plane than it should be. The public not unnaturally has taken the hawkers' prices as a basis and, when asked $2 or $3 per dozen for roses, 25 cents per bud and bloom for Easter lilies, $1 for a Boston fern at a legitimate flower store, had the impression of being "robbed in broad daylight."

War Changed Things.

Conditions brought about by the war will have had the effect of putting the business on its proper plane, and in many ways it will work out for the benefit of everyone in the trade.

Having no lilies this Easter will bring its reward, insofar as it will give the public the sensation of not having lilies aplenty, and people will be made to realize how necessary an Easter lily is.

The embargo on European plants, which goes into effect June 1, while on the face of it unwarranted and unnecessary, will work itself out satisfactorily if we have patience.

It means that all varieties of stock formerly imported from Europe will be grown in this country and sold at increased prices and, while such plants will not be handled in such large quantities as before, the net profit per plant will be larger. The increased selling price will take care of the increased cost.

Azaleas we shall have to do without, as there is only one place on this earth where they can be readily grown, and that is Belgium. The condition of plants received from California is conclusive evidence that we have not learned to grow them here.

We used to import Ardisia crenulata from Belgium in the spring, at 50 cents the other side, grow them till Christmas and sell them for $2. That 50-cent plant would cost $1.50 to grow here for three years, but if it is sold for $4 at Christmas there is an increase of $1 in the gross profit as compared to that on the imported plant. The increased cost of production will be taken care of, provided that florists are awake to the supply and demand.

There are many beautiful plants that we can grow ourselves which have always been considered cheap and common because they were sidetracked by imported goods.

While the demand for flowers and plants keeps steadily increasing, it is doubtful if there will be any material increase in production with the cost of greenhouse material where it is at present. Glass, for instance, is $8 per box, that years ago cost $2.12, and less than that at times. The recent autumn and Christmas have proved that flower lovers will pay a reasonable increase in price for our product, and it behooves florists to get together and consider supply and demand, thereby standardizing the business and regulating prices.

A "Soviet" Plan!

It is reasonable and feasible for florists to control every line of the business to avoid gluts, and a plan could be worked out by having a board of trade in various sections of the country, and it might be to considerable advantage to have such boards affiliated with the S. A. F. in such a way as to get the cooperation of all the local boards.

For example, let us take New England as a district, with the controlling board located in Boston. Every grower in that district should be asked to list the quantity and varieties of plants he has benched, or, with pot plants, that have received the final potting. The quantities submitted could be tabulated by the secretary of the board and a list could be sent to each grower, giving the total number being grown in that district. Anyone could ascertain at a glance how many roses, carnations, mums, begonias, ferns, cyclamens and all other varieties were being grown in that district.

—BUT WE HAVEN'T CAUGHT THE SQUIRREL

To illustrate, we will take roses: Suppose everyone growing roses in New England submits his list of varieties and quantities to the Board of Trade. The secretary tabulates them and the total shows that there are 300,000 Ward, 500,000 Ophelia, 100,000 Richmond and 100,000 Hadley planted in the district. At the end of the season, at a meeting of the board and by information gained by keeping tab on the market prices, we find that Ward was in oversupply, Ophelia was equal to the demand and Richmond and Hadley were not equal to the demand. With these facts and figures at hand, the board could approximate the percentage of each discrepancy and suggest that each grower cut down on Ward twenty per cent, grow the same amount of Ophelia and increase on Richmond and Hadley twenty per cent, or whatever conditions warranted for the coming season. The business has become large enough so that the demand is regular and it is up to the growers to steady the supply.

Applied to Pot Plants.

Let us take a look at the pot plant end of the game. Cut flowers have a more regular price than plants, on account of being sold in the open market. Growers are at variance with one another in selling pot plants; one does not know what the other is charging for a certain size, for growers seem to like to keep their prices a trade secret.

We will consider the cyclamen. Suppose the growers of cyclamens report the quantity they have on hand October 1, as at that time they can judge pretty well how many of each size they will have salable for the holidays. We will say that in this district there are 200,000 plants grown this year. The prices run: 3-inch, 50 cents; 4-inch, 75 cents; 5-inch, $1 and $1.50; 6-inch, $1.50 and $2, and so on, of course using a good plant correctly potted for a standard in each size. The variance would be settled between the grower and retailer. If it should so turn out, the report at the end of the season, sent to each grower, would be that plants in small sizes were scarce, medium sizes were equal to the demand and large sizes were in oversupply. The percentage would be approximated in the same way as in the case of roses, the secretary sending out the finding of the board to the effect that for the following year it advises increasing 3-inch, 4-inch and 5-inch sizes twenty per cent, growing the same quantity of 5-inch and 6-inch and cutting down twenty per cent on the larger sizes.

The board, with the results of the previous year before it, could ascertain the selling price of such a crop by getting a survey of the quantity and, after the mite had got through its season, could issue a statement that the supply in sight is less than the previous year and suggestions could be made as to the advisability of increasing the price twenty per cent or thirty per cent, or whatever conditions warranted.

Other varieties could be handled in the same way, to the advantage of the wholesaler and retailer, insofar as that it would steady the supply of each commodity.

Consider the Mums.

Such a condition of affairs would have the benefit of this psychological feature of the business in that the more people pay for plants and flowers, up to a certain point, the more plants and flowers are appreciated. The grower, no doubt, thinks that mums at $3 per dozen, wholesale, are much more beautiful than when they are bringing $1.50 per dozen.

One bad feature of the greenhouse business is described as follows: This year mums sold well; no serious gluts. The result can be expected to be that next year florists will increase the mum crops fifty per cent or more. Then will come the usual slump and the gluts, which are bad for retailers as well as wholesalers. When the midseason varieties are coming in they retail at $3 per dozen, but they are likely to be $6 the following week and the public no doubt wonders what excuse there can be for it. But, getting back to the grower who increased fifty per cent: He does not realize so much as he figured on, the mum growers have an impromptu meeting and curse the business and their luck. They cut down their supply the next year. Consequently the market is good again and the growers once more curse their luck and the business. But they individually decide to increase their planting next year, with the result that the disappointments never cease. Such conditions always have been akin to the business and it readily can be seen what advantage a controlling board would be, eliminating these conditions.

THE FLORISTS' REVIEW

As experience is the best teacher, so do we learn fastest by an exchange of experiences. Many valuable points are brought out by discussion.

Good penmanship, spelling and grammar, though desirable, are not necessary. Write as you would talk when doing your best.

A Leaf From Swift's Book.

Take a look at all the large industries of the country. As an example take the packing business. One of the world's largest packing concerns has been advertising quite extensively facts about its business, telling the public how many cattle there are in this country, how a reduced supply and increased demand is the cause of the high price of meat, how many animals it handled last year, the cost in detail of killing, dressing, freezing and, in fact, every item connected with marketing its product. Of course there is a wide difference in cattle and flowers, although one of the foremost rose growers in this country once said that a rose and the rear end of a cow were closely related, but both commodities are perishable and each is a necessity up to a certain point. These big firms know the cost of production, give little credit and have systematized their business to a high degree of efficiency. When florists know the cost of production and have more strict business methods they will make more headway and be more successful than ever before.

When we talk about luxuries and necessities, the American Indian showed us what real necessities are: Something to eat and drink, a place to sleep and plenty of fresh air. But as civilization has advanced society demands more and many former luxuries are looked upon as necessities. Meat at 80 cents per pound is a necessity; if it was $5 per pound it would be a luxury. It is the same with flowers and every other commodity; they are necessities at times and luxuries at others. It is up to the florists to devise a general plan to stiffen up the backbone of the business and then it will grow out of the infancy the sages have been talking about for the last twenty years.

Retailers Would Benefit.

By such a plan as set forth retailers would benefit as well as growers, as there is more profit in selling carnations that cost 6 cents at $1.50 per dozen than in paying 3 cents and getting 75 cents. Haphazard greenhouse building might be discouraged, for if, in the opinion of the Board of Trade, it was inadvisable to increase glass area, the growers should take heed and devote their surplus cash to getting what glass they have in good repair, working at full capacity and efficiency. It might be well to impress the fact on florists' minds that if they cannot make a profit on 50,000 feet of glass their chances are no better with double the amount.

The foregoing is submitted to the trade for what it is worth and in the hope that it may start something worth while.

VEGETABLE PRICES.

Growers of greenhouse vegetables are getting excellent prices for their crops this season. Prices in the Chicago market January 7 on the three principal greenhouse crops were as follows:

Cucumbers, box of two dozen	$3.50@$5.00
Lettuce, leaf, per box	.45@ .50
Radishes, doz. bunches	.75@ .85

Only outdoor crops of the other vegetables had made their appearance at Chicago on that date.

The report for the New York market on greenhouse vegetables January 4 was as follows:

Cucumbers, per dozen	@
Lettuce, eastern, per strap	@
Mushrooms—White, 3-lb basket	$1.40@$1.75
Brown, per 3-lb. basket	1.25@ 1.50
Buttons, per 3-lb. basket	1.00@ 1.25
Opens, per 3-lb. basket	@ .75
Radishes, per 100 bunches	3.00@ 5.00
Tomatoes—Fair to fancy, per lb	.20@ .30
No. 2, per lb	.12@ .15

No cucumbers or lettuce arriving. Mushrooms in larger supply today, but much of the stock coming in late and with demand less active, market is decidedly lower. Radishes in light supply, but tone easier. Tomatoes steady.

Oklahoma, Okla.—W. L. Dalgety is building a greenhouse and expects to grow flowers for the market.

HAPPY NEW YEAR!

It is an unwise florist who assumes the role of prophet. There probably is no business which fluctuates to the same extent that the flower business does. Therefore I have hesitated to prognosticate up to now. But I can foretell, without the aid of crystal gazing, to a certainty, that this is going to be the greatest year for corsages ever known in the history of the trade.

Samuel Seligman.

PRIMULA POISONING.

We have had so many good things from The Review that we will give one in return by way of a cure for poisoning from Primula obconica. It is a sure cure, too. If, after handling the plants, you feel a stinging sensation, wash the hands and wrists with warm water and soapsuds and only partly dry them. Then take common table salt and rub it well into the skin. This will be found a great relief. You may need to repeat the process several times.

J. C. Bigelow.

PLANTS SUBSTITUTE FLOWERS.

Referring to a paragraph in the letter of your correspondent for the cities of Davenport, Rock Island and Moline relative to the use of potted plants instead of cut flowers to the extent that a hospital patient received seventy-five plants for Christmas and no cut flowers, the reason for this was simply that cut flowers were so scarce that the retailers were all pushing plants whenever possible in order to conserve the cut flowers for funeral work. There were even instances where plants were used for funeral work, something which we have not heard of being done here before. It is preposterous to say that out of seventy-five people sending remembrances to the same patient, there would not be one who would send cut flowers if they had been obtainable, even though the prices were high. Potted plants were by no means cheap.

As to our Christmas business, we will say that by the evening of December 24 we were entirely sold out. Had the weather been favorable December 24 and 25, the shortage of cut flowers would have been decidedly more apparent, and there would have been no complaint about high prices. L. Stapp.

ALL SHARE THE VICTORY.

The biggest business we have ever had! So it goes, down the line. Everywhere we hear the same exclamation. The buying public has felt the spirit of the times and, elated by prosperity and the winning of the war, would let nothing stand in the way of its having whatever it desired. Among its wants, flowers played a part, if we may judge by the empty greenhouses and the demand for flowers this Christmas. It seemed as if the people had not had any plants and flowers for years, the way they bought them at prices far above anything in the history of the trade, at least during my time and that covers twenty-nine years.

Everybody, grower, wholesaler and retailer, shared in the biggest flower-Christmas we have ever seen.

Now, of course, the publicity campaign is not going to claim credit for this wonderful demand, but may we not claim that since the publicity campaign started, it has had the effect of making retailers spruce up more than ever with retail store advertising in all its phases? And this in turn caused the retailers to keep their stocks up to a higher standard than ever before, in order to live up to the claims of their advertising. So, while the wheels began to move slowly at first under our slogan, "Say It with Flowers," they were moving rapidly before the year ended.

Do you not think the campaign put pep into some men who were aware that a little money properly spent in national publicity would be the beginning of big things for the florists generally, if the work be continued? And continued it will be, for now that we have felt its punch, nothing can stop it until we ourselves say, "Enough." But that time will never come.

No less a personage than our friend Thomas Roland said to me today that he credited the florists' publicity campaign with having a great deal to do with making the year 1918 the flower-year it has been, in spite of all we have gone through. And now that we acknowledge with him the fact that the national publicity did help, may we not at the same time expect that the leading flower men will dig down this year of 1919 for the annual appropriation for this publicity campaign with such vigor as to cause those who hitherto have not contributed also to come forward? Thus we may make still greater progress possible for all connected with the craft.

Henry Penn, Chairman,
National Publicity Campaign.

THE RETAIL FLORIST

SCHLING'S TRANSFER ORDERS.

Following his policy of making the trade acquainted with the number of orders his store transfers to florists in other cities, so as to boost the F. T. D., Max Schling, New York city, has given out the figures on this business for the months of November and December. Mr. Schling already had made known the number of orders of this kind sent during October. The figures are as follows:

Month.	Orders	Amount
October	148	$1,179.00
November	163	1,405.59
December	667	5,482.50

It will be noted especially that the statements are only of the orders sent, no mention being made of those received.

While from these figures it will be seen that transfer-of-orders business at the Schling store was large during the holidays, it also will be noticed that November showed a healthy increase over October.

Mr. Schling is a consistent advertiser and is doing an excellent work in showing the retail florists of the country what can be accomplished by persistently familiarizing the public with the workings of the transfer system. The figures show that he is reaping the reward for his efforts.

POCHELON ON PRICES.

In a circular to members of the Telegraph Delivery Association, Secretary Pochelon recently said in part:

"Our profession has had a strenuous time for the last few years; let us all be thankful that we are almost over it. The future can bring nothing but the greatest benefit and never was there a better chance to elevate our profession in the eyes of the public. Our work is coming to the front, where it is compensated in the same measure as other professions, and, while perhaps a lot of us do some tall kicking at the high prices, I want to say that they are not at all out of proportion with other industries, when you think our production has been cut down fifty per cent by the fuel shortage and various other troubles that have come up during the last few years. We all have suffered, but not to a greater extent than some other people. Let us be fair and liberal."

WHEN PLUMOSUS BROWNS.

In one section of my greenhouses I am having some trouble with my Asparagus plumosus nanus, the cause of which baffles me. The young growth comes up and does nicely till just before or about the time it fully matures, when the tips of the fronds turn brown. I shall be greatly obliged to you if you can obtain any information for me as to its cause and the remedy. Am sending you a dozen sprays for inspection.

T. P. D.—Fla.

The specimens mentioned appeared to be perfectly healthy, except that many of the tips of the branches on the asparagus were browned and dead. The first thought would be that these plants had been allowed to get dry at the root while the growth was young and soft, but there are other possibilities for such an injury, and among them are certain fertilizing materials. Applications of nitrate of soda or sulphate of ammonia in excessive quantities may have caused such an injury to the growth, but if none of these conditions have prevailed, then we are at a loss to know the cause of the trouble, without further information as to soil and treatment. SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

CINERARIAS.

Most of the growers have sold cinerarias for Christmas, but this plant is not seen at its best until later in the winter, the finest specimens usually appearing at the large spring exhibitions, which, due to various causes, will not be held the coming season. If you want good cinerarias, it is necessary to grow them cool. They must never be forced, or they will soon present a drawn appearance and, furthermore, will be an easier prey to green aphis. If you can grow your plants in a night temperature of 40 to 45 degrees, better the lower than the higher figure, you will have heavy, leathery leaves, which should almost hide the pots, provided you elevate some of the larger plants and give each the necessary room. Scarlet was formerly unknown as a color among cinerarias, but for a couple of years now we have grown a large-flowered scarlet variety, originated, I think, with Sutton & Sons, in England, which makes a splendid holiday plant and its color is so striking as at once to attract attention. Feed the plants liberally until the flowers are expanding. Cinerarias are strong feeders and are greatly benefited by judicious stimulants, among which liquid cow or sheep manure is hard to beat.

PROPAGATION.

Keep the cutting bench filled. Plants of all kinds root better now than at any other season of the year, as the sand has a nice, steady heat and there are no extremes in atmospheric readings. Such plants as coleus, verbenas, heliotropes, fuchsias, ageratums, etc., propagate with a trifling loss at this season and big stocks of all these will be needed for the bedding out season in 1919. Small growers should root all they possibly can at home. Stock propagated at home is bound to give greater satisfaction than when purchased hundreds, or maybe thousands, of miles away. Parcel post special delivery is the safest means of shipping cuttings at this season. Express service is uncertain and far from satisfactory.

IRIS AND GLADIOLI.

The Spanish iris must be grown cool at all times, or you will never get nice, stocky spikes. Whether it is grown in flats, benches or beds, April is as early as this iris can be satisfactorily flowered and efforts to bloom it ahead of your neighbors will mean a lot of blind shoots. Iris tingitana and filifolia are naturally much earlier-blooming and can be flowered as early as January. These beautiful sorts cost much more than I. hispanica and, to be profitable, should realize treble the price of the latter variety. The small-flowered gladioli of the nanus section, such as Blushing Bride, The Bride and Peach Blossom, can be hurried a little more than the Spanish iris, but are also better if grown cool and I would not advise the grower to give any of them over 50 degrees at night. A batch of each should be coming along now and will prove exceedingly useful when they come in season.

ENGLISH IVIES.

Some time ago I mentioned the popular evergreen climber, English ivy, now used in so many ways commercially as well as on private estates, and advised getting in a good batch of cuttings. If you failed to do so at that time, January is a good month to put them in the sand. Keep them well watered and it will not take long for every cutting to root. Many of us are unable to do much with ivy outdoors, but we have many other uses for it and there is little danger of propagating it too extensively.

MARGUERITES.

For the coming Easter, when lilies will be scarce, there should be a good call for well-flowered marguerites. Some of these we had in fine shape for Christmas, but for Easter blooming a pinch should be given until the end of January, after which let the plants have plenty of space, water and feed, with a temperature of 48 to 50 degrees at night, and they should be a mass of flowers before April 20. The variety Mrs. Sander makes a less shapely plant than the old Chrysanthemum frutescens, but is a most satisfactory spring bloomer. While most of the flowers will come single, a fair proportion will come semi-double or double. The single ones are the more pleasing. Outdoors, C. frutescens makes a good bedder, and as the weather becomes warm all the flowers are double and come in useful for funeral work. Any of the marguerites, propagated now, can be grown into nice, bushy plants in 4-inch and 5-inch pots for spring sales. Why not put in a batch of them?

PRIMULA MALACOIDES.

Primula malacoides needs careful treatment at this season, especially where the plants are at all large. When it was first introduced we all made the natural blunder of sowing the seeds at the same time as those of chinensis, kewensis and obconica, and by fall we had plants large enough for tubs. As a consequence, no matter how carefully we watered them, more or less of the foliage rotted. We learned by experience that July 1 is early enough to sow this primula and we have at the present time excellent 6-inch and 8-inch pans in which the sowing was done at that time. In order to have malacoides at its best, give it, if possible, a shelf in full sun at this season. Water with great care and pour the water around the sides of the pot, never over the crown. It takes but little dampness to destroy a lot of foliage when we have several successive sunless days. Keep the plants a little on the dry side, have them well elevated and they will come through all right. Also, grow them in a cool temperature, not over 45 degrees at night; then you will have stockiness as well as color.

THE GLADIOLUS

A GOOD CATCH CROP.

If you have not bought and started a batch of the large-flowered gladioli yet, it will pay you to do so without delay. Almost any colors can be disposed of if you are growing for the retail trade, but at the wholesale markets such sorts as America, Mrs. Francis King, Panama, Augusta, Schwaben and Pink Beauty are in demand. Probably America and Mrs. King have a larger sale than any other two varieties. There are other desirable sorts of moderate price, such as Halley, Peace, Empress of India, the old brenchleyensis, still hard to beat as a scarlet, Lily Lehman and Niagara, well worthy of culture. Bulbs can be planted in beds from which late mums have been taken, giving the compost a good forking over first, but being careful not to use any fresh manure for them. Plantings for Memorial day must not go in for some weeks yet.

Perhaps you have no spare bench just at present and are anxious to start some bulbs. In such a case, pot them singly in 3-inch or 3½-inch pots and later transfer them to the beds or benches. Do not overlook the beautiful primulinus varieties. These reproduce so abundantly from both seed and bulblets that they are now within the reach of everyone. They will flower earlier than the gandavensis type, are much more graceful for any kind of floral work and come in a number of taking colors.

MRS. FRANK PENDLETON.

Under the caption, "Late Gladioli," in The Review of December 26, C. W., in reply to an inquiry from J. P. H.—Mo., gives a list of late-flowering gladioli which does not include the variety Mrs. Frank Pendleton. As this is one of the most magnificent gladioli ever introduced, no up-to-date grower can afford to overlook it. It is a late-blooming kind, later than some of those mentioned, and a splendid forcer, as well as a ready grower out of doors. It is a profuse multiplier and now generally available at a moderate price. The variety is of such gorgeous appearance that it is a center of attraction at all leading gladiolus shows. Growers who appreciate high-class stock cannot afford to overlook this popular type.

FLORISTS' RIGHTS IN CEMETERY

RESTRICTIONS IN REGULATIONS.

Their Validity Tested.

Florists will be interested in a decision handed down by the Pennsylvania Superior court recently in the case of Benson vs. the Laurel Hill Cemetery Co., bearing on the right of a cemetery to monopolize the work of planting flowers, cutting grass, etc., on private lots. The decision appears to be in accord with the trend of judicial authority to the effect that a cemetery association may adopt reasonable regulations to secure the carrying out of a scheme for uniform adornment of the burial grounds, where there is nothing in the wording of the lot deeds to show that the lot holders have acquired vested rights in conflict with such regulations. But where the deeds broadly reserve to the lot holders power to care for their own lots, they cannot, by any subsequent regulation to which they dissent, be deprived of the right to entrust to their favorite florists the work of decorating their graves.

It is possible that the logical view taken by the Pennsylvania court may serve to suggest to florists, who have been discriminated against by cemetery authorities, that a little coöperation on the part of lot owners may aid in removing this discrimination.

However, it is not to be overlooked that where cemetery lot deeds are so worded as to fail to confer clearly on the grantees the right, and the deeds are declared to be given subject to existing and future regulations of the association, the law seems to support the right of the association to adopt exclusive regulations having any legitimate tendency to promote the interests of the lot holders at large.

Rights Conferred by Deeds.

In the Pennsylvania case, it appeared that the cemetery was established in 1837 and that, continuously down to 1915, the right of lot owners to attend to their own flower planting, etc., personally or by their own employees, had been recognized. The deeds recited that they conferred "the full, free and absolute right of sepulture and the exclusive use, occupation and possession for that purpose and for all objects and purposes incident thereto," etc.

Late in 1914, the cemetery company claiming that disturbances had arisen between the employees of the company and those of lot owners, and that the latter had violated regulations against the burning of leaves in driveways, etc., a regulation was adopted purporting to forbid, after January 1, 1915, any person to enter the cemetery for hire for the purpose of planting flowers, cutting grass, sodding and grading.

Plaintiffs brought suit to enjoin enforcement of the rule and obtained a decree in the trial court. The cemetery company appealed to the Superior court, which affirmed the decision, except as to grading. It was decided that the company was entitled to exclusively control the matter of grading, in order that a uniform scheme might be carried into execution. The salient parts of the opinion on appeal read as follows:

Subject of the Grant.

"It is of the first importance that attention be given to the language of the grant already quoted. As will be seen, it conveyed not merely the right of sepulture, and the exclusive occupation and possession of the lot for that purpose, but such use and possession applied as well to 'all objects and purposes incident thereto.' The latter, then, were just as much the subject of the grant as the right of sepulture itself, and, for the accomplishment of those purposes and the exercise of those incidental rights or privileges, the possession of the grantee was exclusive. For what objects and purposes, apart from the right of sepulture itself, could the grantee of such a lot desire to have its exclusive possession? The universality and intensity of the feeling which requires of the living some effort to assuage the pangs caused by final separation from loved ones by visiting their last resting places and attempting to keep them free from the ravages of time, were beautifully portrayed by an eminent jurist many years ago in the following language: 'Among all tribes and nations, savage and civilized, the resting places of the dead are regarded as sacred. There memory loves to linger and plant the choicest flowers; there the sorrowing heart renews the past, rekindles into life the viewless forms of the dead, revives the scenes where once they moved and recalls the happy hours of love and friendship. There parent and child, husband and wife, relatives and friends, with broken spirits and crushed hopes, revisit often the spot where they deposited their dead. Who does not feel the fountains of his heart broken up and the warm gushings of emotion when standing over the green sod which covers the departed?' If it was not in response to this universally recognized sentiment that each lot owner was given the exclusive possession of his lot, we do not know to what we can refer the absolute grant of the exclusive possession of the lot 'for all objects and purposes incident' to the right of sepulture.

Owners' Rights Sustained.

"We concede it is well within the power of the cemetery company, and altogether in harmony with the nature of the grant and the purposes of the proviso we have quoted, to adopt such reasonable by-laws as might regulate the exercise of their rights by the lot holders so as to promote the general welfare of all concerned and to bring about a proper and harmonious development of the entire property for the good of all. We doubt not such regulation might reasonably embrace measures to preserve peace and good order among those working in the cemetery and to forbid entrance thereafter to any individual who refused obedience to such reasonable rule or regulation. But the power to regulate is one thing, the claim to deprive every lot holder of a part of his grant is quite another. To say that a lot owner, who, by reason of age, sickness or other cause, is unable, with his own hands, to cut the grass on his cemetery lot and plant the graves of his dead with the flowers he or she may in lifetime have loved, may not send a well-behaved representative to act for him, goes, we think, far beyond the right to regulate and is in derogation of the grant." BUCKEYE BULL'S-EYES

SUNDAY CLOSING.

When, several months ago, Cleveland wholesalers closed their places of business on Sunday, they most emphatically took a step in the direction of progress. The retailer has not been inconvenienced, wholesalers have increased their business and the morale of their sales forces has been inestimably raised. It is now up to the retail section to do its bit toward elevating a dignified profession to its proper plane. A number have long since discontinued their former practice of opening their places of business on the allotted day of rest and others are gradually falling into line. Conspicuous among the latter is the J. M. Gasser Co., which at the beginning of the new year notified its patrons that the store would not be open in the future for the transaction of business on Sunday. Undoubtedly many florists, by reason of their location near cemeteries, might find it difficult to put this plan into effect, but if approached in a tactful manner, it can be accomplished without any perceptible diminution of business. Much of the drudgery will thereby be removed from the work, time will be had for recreation—including, of course, the thorough perusal of the trade paper—and business life in general will assume a brighter aspect. Florists owe it to themselves, their families and assistants, to close their shops on the Sabbath. Mac.

PROGRESS.

The Cleveland Florists' Club now has representation on the directorate of the S. A. F. under affiliation. This means that out of its 200 odd members, 100 or more are enrolled upon the roster of the national society. It also indicates that the spirit of progress abides with the trade in the Sixth City. The name of another club member also is included in the list of directors, that of Robert Weeks, president of the National Association of Gardeners. Frank A. Friedley has been reappointed vice-president for the northern part of the state of Ohio and Herman P. Knoble has been retained upon the publicity finance committee. Charles J. Graham has the honor of being the first club president to sit as an S. A. F. director. Mac.

MORE ABOUT "IRONITE."

For several months The Review has been trying to locate the manufacturer of "Ironite," a "lawn dressing, not a fertilizer." A. Miller, the sales agent of this preparation, is as active as Josh Billings' flea—"he never stays put." Two months ago he was in the Pacific coast states. There he sold a considerable quantity of "Ironite" to the florists, but did not get out of one city in time to avoid returning the money. It was not more than two weeks after this experience that he was reported to be calling on the trade in Pennsylvania.

Now comes G. H. Hennessey, of the North Side Greenhouses, Springfield, Ill., who sends The Review one of the shipping labels that are attached to the bags of "Ironite" that Mr. Miller ships ahead of him. On the back of this label is written Mr. Miller's name. The label is in green and says:

Lawns made beautiful. Ironite, a lawn dressing, not a fertilizer. For trees, plants and lawns. National Tree & Remedy Co. Home office, Denver, Col. P. O. Box 1721, Los Angeles, Cal.

Mr. Hennessey says:

"Noticed a request for the address of 'Ironite.' Here is the label. Mr. Miller's handwriting is on the back. His method is to ship a number of sacks of this stuff ahead of him, get it and then hire a taxi and go out and sell it. It is worthless as a plant grower. It looks to me like dust from the emery wheels used in the finishing of iron castings."

WINANS' WATER WARMER.

How do you like to work for an hour or two every day with your thumb over the end of a hose spouting ice-cold water?

If you are like the average florist you find watering one of the most distasteful jobs in the greenhouse in the winter. Not alone is it unpleasant, but it is not conducive to the best of health to work with water at a temperature it now comes out of the city water mains, or out of the florist's own water tank. If a man has rheumatism he does not find that the daily use of water almost ice-cold is in the least beneficial. Nor do the plants in the greenhouse benefit by an icy bath.

Frank Winans, who appears in the accompanying illustration, is a temperance advocate, but not fond of cold water. He found he was apt to neglect the plants in his greenhouses at Petoskey, Mich., because it was so unpleasant to use the hose in winter. After thinking about it for a while he rigged up the apparatus shown in the illustration. It consists of nothing more than some short lengths of pipe put together with elbows. The center loop is as long as the firebox in his boiler. The two ends project through the fire door and to each of them he attaches his hose, one line running from the faucet and the other into his greenhouses. By simply throwing the "heater" into the fire he raises the temperature of the city water in winter from something like 45 degrees to around 70 degrees, just the temperature one likes for a summer swim.

With his heater Mr. Winans finds the winter wielding of the hose has lost its unpleasant features. It takes him about an hour each day to go through his greenhouses and he can do it without freezing his hands; nor does he mind the mischance which frequently wets the florist in other portions of his anatomy. The plants, too, like the mild temperature. He has found that all the stock does better since he has used the warmed water. Previously the morning's watering reduced the temperature of the house about 8 degrees; now it runs it up nearly as much.

Mr. Winans has no patent on the device and offers it in this fashion to the free use of any florist who wants to make one like it.

BRIEF ANSWERS.

MICHIGAN FLORISTS TO MEET.

The next regular meeting of the Saginaw-Bay City Floricultural Society will be held Monday, January 13, at 7:30 p. m., at the store of Charles Frueh & Sons, Saginaw. All members are urged to attend, as there is plenty of business of importance to be transacted at this meeting. The "flu" epidemic was the cause of the loss of the recent meetings.

BUSINESS EMBARRASSMENTS.

Eureka, Cal.—A committee chosen at a meeting of creditors of the Cottage Gardens Nurseries, Inc., and (or) Charles W. Ward reports as follows: "This corporation and Mr. Ward individually were understood to have asked through their attorney, Pierce H. Ryan, an extension of ninety days, during which time local creditors would be requested to allow their accounts to remain in status quo, it being understood that this request does not comprehend those who have at present levied attachments to release such attachments, the purpose intended being that creditors are asked to refrain from starting additional proceedings and stay all pending suits until expiration of the time asked for. During this time it is the intention of the debtors to liquidate outstanding accounts by either selling a portion of their timber lands or negotiating a loan upon the property of sufficient size to pay off all claims. Attorney for debtors states that negotiations are now under way on both these propositions with what he considers good prospects for success."

The statement submitted to the creditors showed assets of $1,116,000 and liabilities of $297,106.47. The committee concedes assets which would, at forced sale, bring more than $437,000, which leaves an excess over liabilities of at least $157,000.

"From the above it will be seen," says the committee, "that a great deal of pruning has been done and after all of this is accomplished we are of the opinion, based on such statements as have been submitted to us, that Mr. Ward and his corporations are perfectly solvent and that if the business can be continued under the proper management all creditors will ultimately receive all moneys due them.

"It would seem to the committee that if Mr. Ward were willing to allow the creditors to choose a trustee for their benefit, such trustee to control the finances of the various corporations, etc., in question, and if in the meantime the creditors would work in harmony to the end that the nursery business would be conducted without hindrance by reason of numerous attachment suits and the like, the properties could be turned back to Mr. Ward free of floating indebtedness and in such shape that he could ultimately handle them to his own pleasure and profit.

"A second meeting of the creditors is called for 10 a. m. January 10, at the rooms of the Chamber of Commerce at Eureka, for the purpose of further considering this matter."

Mishawaka, Ind.—C. L. Powell has leased the store at 121 Main street and will establish a flower and seed business. His greenhouses are on the north side of the city.

Louisville, Ky.—Two sons of Simon Pontrich, who has a flower store on South Twenty-eighth street, were in an automobile accident December 30, when the car they were in was upset by a larger car. Raphael, the elder, 18 years old, suffered severe injuries and was taken to a hospital.

RETURNING GRADUALLY.

Many Back in the Harness.

Daily The Review gets reports of florists who have been in the training camps in the United States or in the service overseas returning to their former places. The demobilization is progressing slowly, but surely. Soon those who left their positions or businesses to help the United States win the war will be back in the trade and conditions, as to help, again will be normal.

Edwin L. Matthewson Back.

Martin Amling Reaches Home.

Martin Amling, youngest son of William H. Amling, whose death is reported in this issue, was in the training camp at Waco, Tex., where he had been sent from Camp Grant, until a few days ago. When the illness of his father became critical, telegrams were dispatched to Waco in the expectation of reaching him there, as his family did not know of his having been transferred. It so happened, however, that he was passing through Chicago January 4, on his way to Camp Grant for discharge, and the messages were delivered to him there. His release was granted at once to enable him to hasten to the bedside of his father.

Barton W. Elliott.

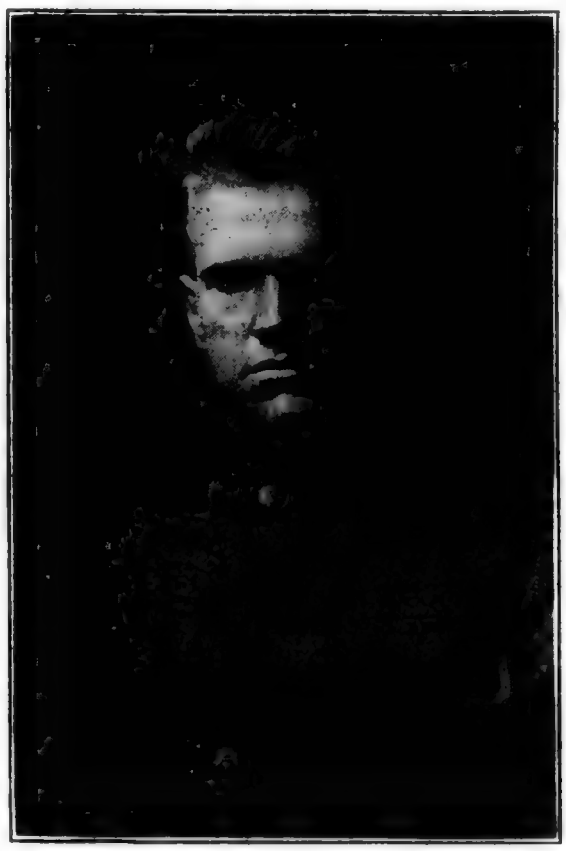
It is with regret that we chronicle the death November 4 of Barton W. Elliott, Pittsburgh and Springdale, Pa., who was reported in The Review several weeks ago as having been seriously wounded in action "somewhere in France." Only the notice of his death has been received from the war department, but the family suppose that it occurred in the hospital where he was taken after being injured. Private Elliott, who was between 19 and 20 years of age, was the youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Wilkinson Elliott, who survive him, together with their three sons and four daughters. Prior to going to France last August, he had preliminary training with Company C, Fourth Separate Battalion of the Marine Corps, at Paris Island, S. C., and Camp Quantico, Va. Prior to enlisting last spring, he was a student at the Lawrenceville Academy, Lawrenceville, N. J. E. E. S.

Lieut. Frank E. Grimes.

Private Lee Hull.

Before entering the service Private Lee Hull was grower for Greig's Greenhouses, at Anaconda, Mont. He went to France early in April, 1918, and was in the 32nd Division. A clipping from a Paris newspaper concerning this division says: "During the war the 32nd Division has fought on five points, Alsace, the Vesle, Soissons, Argonne and the Meuse, and has met twenty of Germany's crack divisions, among them the Prussian Guards. It never yielded a yard of ground to the enemy's counter attacks."

Private Hull was wounded in August, 1918, and was in a hospital until after the armistice was signed. In a recent letter to his brother, William Hull, of Bristol, Va., he says he has been discharged from the hospital with thirty-nine others selected to act as orderlies for the peace conference. He adds, "One has not seen France until he has seen Paris."



The Grimes Boys.

Persistency won for Malcolm A. Grimes, of the Grimes Floral Co., Ticonderoga, N. Y., what many thousands of young Americans longed for during the war—a chance to get into the fighting in France. Soon after the United States entered the war, the young man, following the lead of his older brother, Frank E. Grimes, applied for enlistment. He was rejected for physical causes, but they were so slight that he treated with a physician and again applied. He was turned down a second time, but when he applied a third time he was accepted. He trained at Madison Barracks and then graduated from the School of Aerial Photography, at Rochester, N. Y. Then he went to the flying field at Hempstead, L. I., and was sent overseas. When the war ended he was Corporal Grimes, of the 20th Photographic Section, U. S. Air Service, in France. Lieutenant Frank E. Grimes was one of the first to graduate from an officers' training school and received a commission as second lieutenant. Both young soldiers were associated with their father, F. H. Grimes, before they enlisted and, undoubtedly, soon will get back into the florists' business.

Captain George E. Kirk.

News has just reached Mr. and Mrs. Edward Kirk, of Bar Harbor, Me., of the death of their son, Captain George E. Kirk, of pneumonia, in a base hospital at the edge of the Argonne forest in France. Captain Kirk had been ill in the hospital, but letters received by his parents stated that he had recovered. On the declaration of the armistice, he left the hospital against the urgent advice of his nurse, being naturally anxious to march at the head of his company into conquered Germany. The effort proved too great and he went back to the hospital in a delirious condition November 16 and died November 20, after a brave fight for life.

Captain Kirk entered the officers' training camp at Fort Niagara and graduated as second lieutenant in the autumn of 1917. He received further training with a machine gun company at Gettysburg, Pa. He visited his Bar Harbor home early last winter and shortly after sailed overseas. He took an active and heroic part in the severe fighting last summer and early fall in the battles of Chateau Thierry, St. Mihiel and other desperate encounters and for gallantry was promoted first to be a full lieutenant and later captain. He was a member of the 4th Machine Gun Battalion, Company A, of the regular army. In all the desperate battles in which he was engaged he never received a scratch and it seems particularly sad that, when fighting had ceased, pneumonia should claim him. He was only 24 years of age. Captain Kirk was educated at the Bar Harbor school and later attended the University of Maine at Orono, and the University of Susquehanna. He was a noted athlete and a member of the football team at both colleges. Edward Kirk, his father, was for many years superintendent of the George W. Vanderbilt estate, Bar Harbor, and now owns and operates the North East Harbor Nurseries, on Mount Desert Island. Besides his parents, Captain Kirk is survived by two sisters, a brother in the U. S. Navy and a brother in New York city, for all of whom much sympathy is felt. W. N. C.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The New Year's holiday market was practically identical with that of Christmas, conditions being precisely the same. Stock was woefully short, and prices, as a consequence, at high levels. A retailer thus described the situation: "Of ten people who came in to buy, eight left without doing business, owing to the tall prices we had to ask." This experience was general, yet it has not been learned that retailers have any stock left over. If all sales prospects had bought, orders could not have been filled. Wholesalers cleaned up as fast as shipments came in. It was a matter of equitable distribution rather than salesmanship.

The market continues on the short side, and, so far as can be seen, there is little chance for relief in the near future. The business being done is not really heavy, in point of the number of transactions; in fact, it is a long way from normal.

A good deal of shipping business has been done of late. In the last few years this has been an unimportant feature of the New York market, and its resumption at this time is evidence of the great curtailment of production practiced in consequence of fuel restrictions.

Bulbous stock is late this year. Usually a heavy unloading of narcissi and other items is looked for to check advances in more staple lines, but even Paper Whites are in evidence only in small quantities.

Roses are coming in even supply, hardly more one day than another, and in quantity barely sufficient to meet the call. All grades move quickly, the short grades especially so, as, if they are not secured at the opening of the market, they must be eliminated from the day's prospects.

Carnations are in good demand, and 12 cents appears to be the top price, except for good Benora and one or two other varieties, for which 15 cents is asked and frequently obtained.

The supply of orchids has lessened, but there is plenty to go around. Oncidium splendidum is bringing as high as 10 cents per flower for the best, but held-over stock is closed out at as low as 6 cents. The same is true of Phalænopsis amabilis, which is now coming in freely. Cattleyas have now a range of 25 cents to 75 cents, the latter figure including the comparatively new Brasso-cattleyas and some of the hybrids.

Sweet peas are not in good supply, the warm, muggy weather lately experienced having caused a general dropping of buds.

Lilies are plentiful, but the prices remain high, on account of the demand for these flowers for funeral work. Freesias have made an appearance and bring from 75 cents to $1 per bunch; and there is a small showing of tulips, at $1 to $2 per bunch.

The supply of violets has increased and prices have fallen to figures nearer normal. There is a good supply of stevia, which moves readily at three bunches for $1, for the best. Daisies, calendulas, snapdragon, pansies, forget-me-nots and bouvardias all clean up well at good prices.

Various Notes.

The case of the park department, looking to the ousting of the International Garden Club from its occupancy of the old Barbour mansion, Pelham Bay park, was dismissed when called up for trial. It is understood that the club is to stay in possession of the building and grounds without further molestation.

The new rose, Columbia, was prominent among the holiday offerings, and was a worthy addition to the supply of "big" roses.

G. Ruff and Grover Asmus are to put into operation next spring the old Ernst Asmus greenhouse range, at West Hoboken, N. J., which has been closed since last November.

Treasurer E. Davey, of the Stamford, Conn., Horticultural Society, died January 1. He was gardener for G. G. Dominick, of Stamford. His wife died a few days previously.

The firm of Goldstein & Futterman, 102 West Twenty-eighth street, has been dissolved, and the business is being continued by Futterman Bros. I. Goldstein, of the old firm, has started in the wholesale business at 114 West Twenty-eighth street.

Lieutenant Commander A. M. Henshaw, of the Naval Reserves, was a visitor in the market January 4. He has reached the top of the ladder in his branch of the service, and expects shortly to be retired to civilian life. During his naval career he had many experiences, but says that his view, at short range, of the grand fleet in the Firth of Forth was worth all of them.

The sympathy of the trade is extended to J. K. Allen, the veteran wholesaler at 118 West Twenty-eighth street, in the death of his son, George James Allen, which is reported in another column of this issue.

Edward Eccles, son-in-law of Thomas Jones, the well known orchid grower, of Short Hills, N. J., died suddenly Christmas day. The account of his death will be found in another column of this issue.

The next meeting of the New York Florists' Club will be held January 13, at the club's quarters in the Grand Opera House building, Twenty-third street and Eighth avenue. At this meeting the new officers will be inducted into office.

Henry Weston, of Hempstead, L. I., has been experimenting with a new oil-burning device, and is so well satisfied with it that he will install an equipment of it under his greenhouse boilers. He is satisfied that its great service in heating his houses in the late spring and early fall, or at any time when quick heat for a short period is desired, would justify the installation.

Jasper R. Lewis, of Ralph M. Ward & Co., received a Christmas present in the shape of a little daughter, who has been named Carol, in honor of the season of her birth.

Steamer business for retail florists is resumed. Considerable business was done in connection with recent sailings. It is expected that it will not be long before steamer trade will reach pre-war volumes.

Emil Schloss, of Schloss Bros., Ribbons, Inc., has entered upon his duties as state vice-president of the S. A. F. for eastern New York. With his lovable personality and wide acquaintance, especially in retail circles, there should be a notable increase in the membership of the society in his territory.

The National League for Woman's Service has a project well under way for the erection of a number of electrically-lighted signs along our water fronts, in which the trade slogan, "Say It with Flowers," is to predominate.

Sergeant Coon, son of Elmer Coon, the violet grower of Rhinebeck, N. Y., who, as a member of a surgical unit, has just returned from overseas, was in town last week, calling upon the trade.

Courtland C. Earle and Robert M. Lamont, of the Quidnick Greenhouses, Quidnick, R. I., were visitors during the holidays.

Other visitors were J. N. Champion, of New Haven, and Carl Reck, of Bridgeport, Conn. J. H. P.

Wertheimer Bros., in order to accommodate their increasing business, have erected a building adjoining their premises, which will be connected with their present quarters by archways. When completed, the additional quarters will afford more than double the floor space now occupied.

NEWPORT, R. I.

Samuel Preston, for many years a gardener on various estates in this city, died December 30 at his home, 42 Edgar court, after a long illness. He was born in the south, but removed to Newport a number of years ago, while still a young man, secured employment on one of the summer estates as gardener and followed that occupation until his death. An injury to his left hand several months ago made it necessary to amputate the member, and since that time Mr. Preston had been in poor health. He is survived by his wife and daughter. He was reliable and well thought of.

Daniel Murphy has returned from New York, where he witnessed the big naval review.

John H. Allan, son of John T. Allan, who is a gunner's mate in the navy, has returned to duty following a holiday visit at home.

Oscar Schultz donated palms and ferns for the decoration of the rooms of the Army and Navy Y. M. C. A. for the New Year's celebration. Gibson Bros. also gave palms and ferns and Stewart Ritchie furnished cut flowers.

Andrew Ramsay is moving his greenhouse to a new site on Harrison avenue.

Mrs. Fred P. Webber was pianist for the evening at the recent installation ceremonies at the meeting of Aquidneck Grange, P. of H., at Middletown.

Hugh S. Meikle, gardener for Dr. Roderick Terry, was elected Tanist of Clan MacLeod, Order of Scottish Clans, last week. W. H. M.

Anderson, S. C.—J. K. Postma, who came here from Evans City, Tenn., has completely recovered from an attack of the "flu" and has entered the employment of the Anderson Floral Co. Mr. Postma formerly was in business for himself in the central west and is well known in the trade. He has been a reader of The Review for twenty years.

PITTSBURGH.

High Prices for Flowers.

Following the holidays, prices in all varieties of stock have come down from thirty to fifty per cent. Never in the history of the local trade has there been so much discussion regarding the unparalleled high prices of flowers as during the last few months. Samuel McClements, of Randolph & McClements, says: "Owing to the exorbitant charges necessitated for cut flowers, the plantsman is coming into his own. Recognizing this fact from our experiences last year during both the Christmas and Easter seasons, and in a measure during the holidays just past, we kept away from the cut flower business, handling plants instead, with the result that we disposed of twice as many plants as a year ago, five baskets only remaining of our entire stock. Another factor which has discouraged us with the cut flower end is the condition in which some of our shipments have arrived this season, owing, undoubtedly, to their having been held back too long." Randolph & McClements have the most fashionable clientele of the east end section of Pittsburgh.

Mr. Weaklen, representing G. P. Weaklen & Co., says: "Considering every phase of the present cost of production, the high prices of floral products are more or less justified, the shortage of home products and the tardy receipts of lilies and other bulbous importations all militating against low prices."

De Forest W. Ludwig, of the E. C. Ludwig Floral Co., is one of the most radical opponents of the current high prices. "The high prices counteract all the results of judicious advertising and, unless they come down, people are going to substitute candy for flowers," Mr. Ludwig says, and, as a counter measure, urges the coöperation of the grower, middleman and retailer.

"Reasonable increases in the prices of cut blooms and plants are just and necessary," says Edward L. McGrath, of McGrath & Langhans, downtown florists.

Theodore P. Langhans believes that the florists would be only too glad to reduce wholesale prices if fuel, labor and other incidental growing expenses would decrease in proportion. He adds: "We are now paying $4.50 a ton for coal, which previously was $1.05, while the cost of labor has increased more than fifty per cent, as men who were formerly drawing $12 per week, now get $25, and all other expenses are proportionately increased."

Edward J. McCallum considers that if cut flower prices had increased gradually in the same proportion and at the same time as other commodities, the higher prices would have been accepted without comment. However, during the season of 1916-17, when the prices of everything went up in other lines of business, often carrying huge profits, the cut flower growers sold their products at the old prices, and instead of making big profits, did not make a cent above running expenses, which jumped higher than those of any other business, owing to coal going up three or four hundred per cent. Apropos of this fact, the fuel administration is authority for the statement that in estimating the value of greenhouse products, coal is the largest item of expense. It took the influenza epidemic to create a demand large enough to lead the growers to ask prices which would enable them to make even their former profit. We are the only industry, moreover, for which the fuel restriction of fifty per cent is practically in effect until summer, owing to the fact that the ban was lifted too late to do the majority of us any good until planting time. Thus the unwritten law of supply and demand would entitle us to ask 100 per cent more for what we produce to recompense us for our sacrifice; instead, we are not asking more than fifty to 100 per cent more than in the old days.

Various Notes.

The death of Barton W. Elliott, of which his family has just been notified, is recorded on another page of this issue.

James J. Higgins returned to Pittsburgh January 4, having spent Christmas with Mrs. Higgins's sister, Mrs. Hine, of the Winona hotel, Winona, Minn. He also attended in Chicago the annual convention of the traveling salesmen of the A. L. Randall Co. Ray J. Daschbach, formerly of this city, now of Los Angeles, Cal., also attended the Randall convention.

Mrs. Victor Bergman and her son, Victor Bergman, Jr., have returned to their home in Chicago following a ten weeks' visit with Mr. and Mrs. Gustav Ludwig, the parents of Mrs. Bergman.

Gustave Reising is scheduled to be in the city tomorrow representing L. Baumann & Co., Chicago, Ill.

Walter Bopp has temporarily severed his relations as bookkeeper for the Harris Bros., expecting to return some time later. Mr. Bopp has been in the service of this firm for the last two years.

Theodore P. Langhans has been spending the last week on a business trip to Columbus, O., and a visit with his son, Sergeant Oliver H. Langhans, who is now at Camp Sherman, Chillicothe, O., following a year or more with the Aero Construction Service Squadron, A. S. S. C., at Vancouver Barracks, Vancouver, Wash., and Clatsop, Ore.

Randolph & McClements have inaugurated a card system for Christmas and Easter deliveries. The flowers or plants are sent a few days before the holiday, accompanied by a card which states that "card with duplicate number will be mailed Good Friday" (if the holiday happens to be Easter). The second card states who the purchaser was and to whom delivered. E. E. S.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

The Market.

The market has broken! This, however, was no surprise, as such unusual prices could not continue long. Then, too, the supply has increased, while the demand has decreased. Some of the growers just missed the Christmas market, their crops coming in too late. Thus a crowded condition has arisen. From $12.50 and $15, the price has fallen to from $4 to $8. It is predicted, however, that within two weeks the supply will be normal again and prices stiffen.

Roses are more plentiful, but are in good demand and clear readily. Short stock continues rare. Prices on this class of stock also have dropped, the range being from $5 to $25.

Any and all lilies clear immediately. Easter and rubrum varieties are limited. Callas are in fair supply at $2.50 and $3 per dozen. Poinsettias are gone. Narcissi are adequate at $6 per hundred. All small flowers are hard to procure. Stevia is over, while violets, peas, calendulas, pansies and valley are short. White buddleia is an addition to the market.

New Year's business was poor. Practically the only demand was that made for corsage work and, owing to the scarcity of all small flowers, it was difficult to do business along this line. Social functions were not so numerous as on former New Year's eves, owing, perhaps, to the fact that the state has gone dry.

Various Notes.

Notice: Do not forget the meeting of the State Florists' Association of Indiana to be held January 14, at 2 p. m., at the Claypool hotel. Competition will be held at this time for the carnation and rose trophies. Novelties in all lines will be displayed. J. F. Ammann, president of the S. A. F., will be a guest on this occasion.

O. E. Steinkamp will go to Pittsburgh to exhibit the new carnation, Ruth Baur, before the Pittsburgh Florists' Club.

Hartje & Elder are cutting excellent Purity freesias.

Albert Warner is assisting at the Circle Flower Store during the absence of C. C. Thomas, who is in Chicago on his vacation.

Word has been received from Corporal Oscar Carlsteadt that he has returned from overseas and is at Newport News. He expects to be home shortly.

Corporal Morris Mayer has been mustered out of service.

Baur & Steinkamp are cutting fine white buddleia. They are beginning now to ship out carnation cuttings.

A new commission house will be opened in Indianapolis January 10 at 105 East Ohio street. S. T. Hitz will be sole owner and Fred Kiel manager. The business will be known as the Florists' Supply House. Messrs. Hitz and Kiel have just returned from a stock-buying trip and state that they will have a full line of florists' supplies. Mr. Hitz is well known throughout the state and Mr. Kiel was formerly with Smith & Young, commission merchants. Both will be glad to meet their friends in their new place of business.

Mr. Fachman, the wire worker, has broken his leg. Always a hard worker, seldom laying off, he is now forced to do so and is receiving much attention at St. Vincent's hospital. His place of business on Massachusetts avenue is closed, as his assistant, Miss Tillie, is taking her vacation. Notwithstanding his needed vacation, the local tradesmen will all be glad to see Mr. Fachman back on the job again.

Harry Miesse, secretary of the local war garden board, has purchased a 90-acre tract of land east of the city, where he intends to engage in growing herbaceous plants.

John Elsner has been reappointed a member of the war garden staff.

T. D. Heplar recently went to Chicago to investigate a manufacturing proposition. E. E. T.

Albany, N. Y.—The annual dinner of the Albany Florists' Club is to be held the evening of January 9. Fred Danker is chairman of a special committee on place and attendance. The entertainment features will be in charge of Thomas F. Tracey.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

The first cold wave of the season struck Milwaukee January 2 and put a crimp in business generally. Stock has been none too plentiful up to now and a shortage exists on roses. The stock is in good shape, but it takes sunshine to produce anything in quantity. The official weather report for December shows one day clear and nine days partly cloudy; this is the best explanation that can be given for the shortage of roses. Carnations, which had been scarce up to Christmas, began at that date to increase in numbers and this, coupled with the cessation of the "flu" epidemic, has had a tendency to make the supply balance the demand. So far this year the florists' business has gone through an unusual era of prosperity, with indications that conditions will not change much until late spring, at any rate. We can see how the reduction of the areas devoted to the production of flowers has affected the market.

Violets are extremely scarce, orders for them being refused daily. Sweet peas are coming in larger numbers, but the supply is still far from adequate and the quality is not so good as it should be. There are practically no lilies or valley on the market. Cattleyas were in good supply for the New Year's trade and there was also a goodly crop of oncidiums; these, with short roses, helped to fill the shortage of flowers for New Year's eve corsages caused by the lack of sweet peas and violets. There are practically no Paper Whites in the market and only a few freesias have been seen so far. Stevia was plentiful during the holidays and still is, for that matter. The demand, however, has kept up nicely, clearing the cut daily at $3 per hundred. The outlook for January business is good and, even with a decrease in funeral work, should be far better than the previous year.

Various Notes.

The Wisconsin State Florists' Association, organized last fall, still has a number of florists in the state to hear from, but its membership is increasing nicely. In view of the value of its activities as a trade association, every florist in the state should become affiliated with it. Any wholesaler in Milwaukee will be glad to take care of applications.

The local Florists' Advertising Club did not reduce its activities during the late shortage of stock and the scope of its campaign has broadened so that real results are to be anticipated. Florists in general in this community are enthusiastic over its achievements to date. The annual meeting will be held sometime in February, which will be the close of the first year's work of the association.

H. W. Koerner, the well known dahlia, gladiolus and peony specialist, has sold his entire business to E. F. Stabelfeldt, his nephew, who will follow Mr. Koerner's motto, "Quick service, good goods and light packing." Mr. Koerner has retired and his home is at 5405 Washington boulevard. He started in the florists' business in 1896 in a small way. He worked up a good retail business in a short time and the second year began to grow gladioli. He soon came to believe that this was a flower of great possibilities. In 1902 he purchased fifteen acres of the best soil he could find and began to specialize in the three flowers mentioned. He worked up a good trade and always produced high-grade cut flowers and bulbs. H. J. S.

FORT WAYNE, IND.

The Market.

Although we had favorable weather for several weeks before Christmas, the heavy demand for flowers throughout the three months preceding the holiday absorbed every flower and it was a question of the florist either substituting something for cut flowers or closing his doors to the public. Hence the use of artificial flowers was general, especially for funeral work, which was more in evidence this holiday than in any previous year, and the general advertising and display of fine blooming plants, the exceptional sales of which made this a plant Christmas.

However, considering all conditions, this was by far the greatest Christmas business ever experienced by the local trade, both as to the amount of flowers and plants sold, and also as to the high prices obtained for them. The fact that the high prices did not deter the general public from purchasing flowers is of much significance to the florist, as, of course, he can no longer do business at the old prices and break even, to say nothing of making a fair margin of profit.

Carnations sold at prices 100 per cent higher than other years, wholesaling for $10 and $12 per hundred. Roses sold at an advance of from fifty to 100 per cent over previous years. Cattleyas were in fine supply at 75 cents and $1 each and violets sold at $2 per hundred. Sweet peas brought $2 to $4 per hundred. All other flowers showed an advance of fifty to 100 per cent over other years.

There was an exceptionally fine variety of blooming plants, with cyclamens heading the list, at $3 to $5 each. Fine specimens of azaleas and Cincinnati begonias were priced seventy-five per cent higher than at other holidays. Jerusalem cherries, freesias, primroses, narcissi, spiræas, Scotch heather, celestial peppers and poinsettias made up the variety offered. In Christmas greens the demand was unusually heavy. Holly sold for $8 a case and was decidedly scarce. Ruscus, boxwood, California redwood and other greens were entirely cleaned up.

The New Year's demand centered chiefly in blooming plants, although there was a brisk call for cut flowers. The bright weather, coupled with the slow demand for cut flowers after the Christmas trade, filled up the market so that the supply was more satisfactory for the New Year's trade. The demand has been below normal since New Year's, with only an occasional wedding. Funeral work, however, keeps stock on the move.

Various Notes.

Clem Lanternier and Roy Brown, of A. J. Lanternier & Sons, are suffering from influenza. Mr. Lanternier was taken ill Christmas afternoon and Mr. Brown December 28. Both are reported to be recovering. This firm reports this year's business the largest in its history. It has sold more high-priced roses than in previous years.

Word has been received here that Private George Pandell, of the Fort Wayne Flower Shop, suffered the loss of an arm while fighting on the French front the day before the armistice was signed.

Miss Martha Knecht, of the F. J. Knecht Co., is slowly recovering from a severe attack of influenza.

CLEVELAND, O.

The Market.

New Year's business was good. Violets and sweet peas were cleaned up quickly and all cut flowers seemed to move well. Carnations are arriving in heavier supply, but roses continue on the short side. Narcissi are plentiful. Calendulas clear well, but freesias are not in demand. Valley moves slowly. American Beauties of all grades are to be had. Greens are in good supply.

Various Notes.

A. Wilhelmy has been ill, but is at work again.

A. Barber had the New Year's decorations at the Cleveland hotel.

Thomas Lisy has been ill.

The Daisy Hill Farms are sending fine carnations to the market.

The Friedley Co. is cutting good Easter lilies.

TOLEDO, O.

Mrs. J. B. Freeman reports December as the best month in the history of her business. There were fewer charge accounts, but much cash business.

Hundreds of baskets of artificial flowers prepared by H. E. Klunder, designer for the Patten Flower Store, for the war mothers during the holiday season created an immense demand for this class of work.

Schramm Bros. have been having a siege with influenza, five of their force being absent from this cause during the holiday season, including Frank Schramm, whose illness developed into pneumonia. Friends in the trade helped out during the rush and did much to retrieve the situation, for which the members of this firm are most grateful.

Miss Marie Rex, of the Bowling Green Floral Co., Bowling Green, Ky., who bought stock for the holiday trade here, reports an excellent business for the season.

J. A. Lambert, who visited different points in search of stock for the holidays, found such a shortage everywhere that it looks as though it might take several weeks of favorable weather to get back to normal conditions. Mr. Lambert believes the prices of flowers during the holidays drove many people who ordinarily were patrons of the flower shops to turn to other lines for gifts and that if the wholesalers had not charged such high prices for stock, the retailers might have made many more sales and thereby retained their clientele of moderate spenders.

Columbus, O.—The Ohio State Vegetable Growers' Association will hold its meeting here January 28 to 30.

William H. Amling.

A well known figure in trade circles, one whom the local trade was pleased to honor, will be seen no more. William H. Amling, of Maywood, Ill., prominent in the wholesale trade in the Chicago cut flower market, passed away at his home in Maywood January 4, at the age of 52 years.

Mr. Amling took up the florists' vocation after twenty-one years of teaching school in Milwaukee, Wis. His success from the first was marked, a fact which he attributed to the kindly aid and wise counsels of his brothers, Albert F. Amling, also well known to the Chicago wholesale trade, whose rose ranges at Maywood are widely known, and E. C. Amling, president of the E. C. Amling Co., Chicago. It was in the summer of 1907 that W. H. Amling purchased, at the age of 40 years, two acres of land on which were three greenhouses comprising 10,000 feet of glass, in Maywood. Here he embarked in the business of growing flowers for the wholesale market, specializing at first in carnations. He continued to add to his glass until the establishment consisted of ten acres of land and two separate ranges of glass aggregating 75,000 feet, where roses, carnations, chrysanthemums, freesias and his specialty, sweet peas, were grown. Mr. Amling had been known to the trade as one of the most expert growers of sweet peas and chrysanthemums shipping to the Chicago wholesale cut flower market. His three sons, Walter, Herbert and Martin, have assisted their father in the growing end of the work and all are members of the Chicago Florists' Club. Walter, the eldest, took over the rose range a few years ago and has operated it successfully for his own account. Martin Amling, the youngest son of W. H. Amling, is in the service of Uncle Sam, leaving Herbert in charge of the business conducted until recently by his father. Since the initiation into the trade of his sons, Mr. Amling had enjoyed more leisure for home and social life and for the rest of which he stood in need, for his health had been failing for the last two years, since the disease from which he suffered, anæmia, became more advanced. It was due to the state of his health, in fact, that he was unable to discharge the duties of the office of president of the Chicago Florists' Club, to which he was elected in December, 1916. Mr. Amling desired to decline this appreciated honor, feeling unequal to the requirements of the position, in view of his physical condition, but his fellow members would take no refusal. He had been prominently identified with the activities of the club from his entrance into the trade and also was a member of the S. A. F.

Mr. Amling was a man of the highest principles and possessed a personality which attracted to him the strongest sentiments of friendship and esteem. Besides his brothers and his sons, he is survived by his widow and two daughters, Elsa and Irma. Funeral services were held January 7 at St. Paul's church, Melrose Park, Ill., with interment at Concordia cemetery, Forest Park.

William H. Amling.

Edward Eccles.

A member of the trade who will be missed by many friends passed away in the person of Edward Eccles, whose sudden death occurred Christmas day. Mr. Eccles was the son-in-law of Thomas Jones, the well known orchid grower, of Short Hills, N. J., whose daughter, Elizabeth, widow of Mr. Eccles, survives. Mr. Eccles had been associated in business for thirty years with Mr. Jones and was well known to the wholesale trade of New York city and other eastern markets, where his pleasing personality won him many friends. He is survived also by three daughters and a son. He was 58 years of age and was born in Farmby, England, where his mother, three brothers and a sister still reside. J. H. P.

George James Allen.

The death of George James Allen, who conducted a retail flower store at 561 West Twenty-eighth street, New York city, occurred the evening of December 30, after an illness of but a few hours. He had remained at his post in the store, in fact, until an hour before the end came. He had complained of chills during the day, his illness being lobar pneumonia. Mr. Allen was the son of J. K. Allen, well known wholesale florist, of West Twenty-eighth street, New York. He was 36 years of age and leaves a wife and 11-year-old daughter, besides his parents and a brother and sister. J. H. P.

Thomas M. Howard.

Thomas M. Howard, owner of the Howard Greenhouses and Flower Shop, Scottsbluff, Neb., died at his home in that city December 4, 1918, the cause of his death being heart failure.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard established a small greenhouse business in Scottsbluff in 1908 and it has grown up with the country. Mr. Howard retired several years ago and his business has been managed by his sons. At the outbreak of the war, two of his sons enlisted in the military service, since which time the business has been managed by the youngest son, Richard L. Howard.

The older boys have now returned from military to civil life and it is the intention of the Howard brothers to continue the management of their mother's business and to greatly enlarge it the coming year.

The Flower Shop, at 1415 Broadway, is as attractive as any in the middle west and is managed by Mrs. Howard's two daughters, the Misses Marianna and Lydia Howard.

Ellwood Cooper.

Ellwood Cooper, of Santa Barbara, Cal., known as the father of the olive industry in southern California, died December 29 at the Arlington hotel in that city. Mr. Cooper was 89 years of age and came to California in 1870, since when he has been connected with agriculture and horticulture in many and varied ways. He was formerly president of the California Board of Horticulture and introduced many fine varieties of eucalyptus. He was the author of several books on the subjects in which he was interested and was widely read and well informed. He had lived at the Arlington for several years. H. R. R.

John E. Williams.

John E. Williams, who died January 2 at his home in Streator, Ill., was known to the trade through his work as fuel administrator for the state of Illinois, in which capacity he proved a friend in need in the exigencies arising out of the fuel restrictions last winter.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

The first cold wave of the season struck Milwaukee January 2 and put a crimp in business generally. Stock has been none too plentiful up to now and a shortage exists on roses. The stock is in good shape, but it takes sunshine to produce anything in quantity. The official weather report for December shows one day clear and nine days partly cloudy; this is the best explanation that can be given for the shortage of roses. Carnations, which had been scarce up to Christmas, began at that date to increase in numbers and this, coupled with the cessation of the "flu" epidemic, has had a tendency to make the supply balance the demand. So far this year the florists' business has gone through an unusual era of prosperity, with indications that conditions will not change much until late spring, at any rate. We can see how the reduction of the areas devoted to the production of flowers has affected the market.

Violets are extremely scarce, orders for them being refused daily. Sweet peas are coming in larger numbers, but the supply is still far from adequate and the quality is not so good as it should be. There are practically no lilies or valley on the market. Cattleyas were in good supply for the New Year's trade and there was also a goodly crop of oncidiums; these, with short roses, helped to fill the shortage of flowers for New Year's eve corsages caused by the lack of sweet peas and violets. There are practically no Paper Whites in the market and only a few freesias have been seen so far. Stevia was plentiful during the holidays and still is, for that matter. The demand, however, has kept up nicely, clearing the cut daily at $3 per hundred. The outlook for January business is good and, even with a decrease in funeral work, should be far better than the previous year.

Various Notes.

The Wisconsin State Florists' Association, organized last fall, still has a number of florists in the state to hear from, but its membership is increasing nicely. In view of the value of its activities as a trade association, every florist in the state should become affiliated with it. Any wholesaler in Milwaukee will be glad to take care of applications.

The local Florists' Advertising Club did not reduce its activities during the late shortage of stock and the scope of its campaign has broadened so that real results are to be anticipated. Florists in general in this community are enthusiastic over its achievements to date. The annual meeting will be held sometime in February, which will be the close of the first year's work of the association.

H. W. Koerner, the well known dahlia, gladiolus and peony specialist, has sold his entire business to E. F. Stabelfeldt, his nephew, who will follow Mr. Koerner's motto, "Quick service, good goods and light packing." Mr. Koerner has retired and his home is at 5405 Washington boulevard. He started in the florists' business in 1896 in a small way. He worked up a good retail business in a short time and the second year began to grow gladioli. He soon came to believe that this was a flower of great possibilities. In 1902 he purchased fifteen acres of the best soil he could find and began to specialize in the three flowers mentioned. He worked up a good trade and always produced high-grade cut flowers and bulbs. H. J. S.

FORT WAYNE, IND.

The Market.

Although we had favorable weather for several weeks before Christmas, the heavy demand for flowers throughout the three months preceding the holiday absorbed every flower and it was a question of the florist either substituting something for cut flowers or closing his doors to the public. Hence the use of artificial flowers was general, especially for funeral work, which was more in evidence this holiday than in any previous year, and the general advertising and display of fine blooming plants, the exceptional sales of which made this a plant Christmas.

However, considering all conditions, this was by far the greatest Christmas business ever experienced by the local trade, both as to the amount of flowers and plants sold, and also as to the high prices obtained for them. The fact that the high prices did not deter the general public from purchasing flowers is of much significance to the florist, as, of course, he can no longer do business at the old prices and break even, to say nothing of making a fair margin of profit.

Carnations sold at prices 100 per cent higher than other years, wholesaling for $10 and $12 per hundred. Roses sold at an advance of from fifty to 100 per cent over previous years. Cattleyas were in fine supply at 75 cents and $1 each and violets sold at $2 per hundred. Sweet peas brought $2 to $4 per hundred. All other flowers showed an advance of fifty to 100 per cent over other years.

There was an exceptionally fine variety of blooming plants, with cyclamens heading the list, at $3 to $5 each. Fine specimens of azaleas and Cincinnati begonias were priced seventy-five per cent higher than at other holidays. Jerusalem cherries, freesias, primroses, narcissi, spiræas, Scotch heather, celestial peppers and poinsettias made up the variety offered. In Christmas greens the demand was unusually heavy. Holly sold for $8 a case and was decidedly scarce. Ruscus, boxwood, California redwood and other greens were entirely cleaned up.

The New Year's demand centered chiefly in blooming plants, although there was a brisk call for cut flowers. The bright weather, coupled with the slow demand for cut flowers after the Christmas trade, filled up the market so that the supply was more satisfactory for the New Year's trade. The demand has been below normal since New Year's, with only an occasional wedding. Funeral work, however, keeps stock on the move.

Various Notes.

Clem Lanternier and Roy Brown, of A. J. Lanternier & Sons, are suffering from influenza. Mr. Lanternier was taken ill Christmas afternoon and Mr. Brown December 28. Both are reported to be recovering. This firm reports this year's business the largest in its history. It has sold more high-priced roses than in previous years.

Word has been received here that Private George Pandell, of the Fort Wayne Flower Shop, suffered the loss of an arm while fighting on the French front the day before the armistice was signed.

Miss Martha Knecht, of the F. J. Knecht Co., is slowly recovering from a severe attack of influenza.

CLEVELAND, O.

The Market.

New Year's business was good. Violets and sweet peas were cleaned up quickly and all cut flowers seemed to move well. Carnations are arriving in heavier supply, but roses continue on the short side. Narcissi are plentiful. Calendulas clear well, but freesias are not in demand. Valley moves slowly. American Beauties of all grades are to be had. Greens are in good supply.

Various Notes.

A. Wilhelmy has been ill, but is at work again.

A. Barber had the New Year's decorations at the Cleveland hotel.

Thomas Lisy has been ill.

The Daisy Hill Farms are sending fine carnations to the market.

The Friedley Co. is cutting good Easter lilies.

TOLEDO, O.

Mrs. J. B. Freeman reports December as the best month in the history of her business. There were fewer charge accounts, but much cash business.

Hundreds of baskets of artificial flowers prepared by H. E. Klunder, designer for the Patten Flower Store, for the war mothers during the holiday season created an immense demand for this class of work.

Schramm Bros. have been having a siege with influenza, five of their force being absent from this cause during the holiday season, including Frank Schramm, whose illness developed into pneumonia. Friends in the trade helped out during the rush and did much to retrieve the situation, for which the members of this firm are most grateful.

Miss Marie Rex, of the Bowling Green Floral Co., Bowling Green, Ky., who bought stock for the holiday trade here, reports an excellent business for the season.

J. A. Lambert, who visited different points in search of stock for the holidays, found such a shortage everywhere that it looks as though it might take several weeks of favorable weather to get back to normal conditions. Mr. Lambert believes the prices of flowers during the holidays drove many people who ordinarily were patrons of the flower shops to turn to other lines for gifts and that if the wholesalers had not charged such high prices for stock, the retailers might have made many more sales and thereby retained their clientele of moderate spenders.

Columbus, O.—The Ohio State Vegetable Growers' Association will hold its meeting here January 28 to 30.

William H. Amling.

A well known figure in trade circles, one whom the local trade was pleased to honor, will be seen no more. William H. Amling, of Maywood, Ill., prominent in the wholesale trade in the Chicago cut flower market, passed away at his home in Maywood January 4, at the age of 52 years.

Mr. Amling took up the florists' vocation after twenty-one years of teaching school in Milwaukee, Wis. His success from the first was marked, a fact which he attributed to the kindly aid and wise counsels of his brothers, Albert F. Amling, also well known to the Chicago wholesale trade, whose rose ranges at Maywood are widely known, and E. C. Amling, president of the E. C. Amling Co., Chicago. It was in the summer of 1907 that W. H. Amling purchased, at the age of 40 years, two acres of land on which were three greenhouses comprising 10,000 feet of glass, in Maywood. Here he embarked in the business of growing flowers for the wholesale market, specializing at first in carnations. He continued to add to his glass until the establishment consisted of ten acres of land and two separate ranges of glass aggregating 75,000 feet, where roses, carnations, chrysanthemums, freesias and his specialty, sweet peas, were grown. Mr. Amling had been known to the trade as one of the most expert growers of sweet peas and chrysanthemums shipping to the Chicago wholesale cut flower market. His three sons, Walter, Herbert and Martin, have assisted their father in the growing end of the work and all are members of the Chicago Florists' Club. Walter, the eldest, took over the rose range a few years ago and has operated it successfully for his own account. Martin Amling, the youngest son of W. H. Amling, is in the service of Uncle Sam, leaving Herbert in charge of the business conducted until recently by his father. ROSES fetched $2 apiece in good stores in Paris at Christmas.

EASTER this year comes April 20, three weeks later than in 1918.

IN what other line do retail merchants make such effort to depress the market on which they buy?

THE governments are releasing raffia, which has been considered an essential of warfare for nearly four years.

THE florist who does unto others as he would be done by never lacks for any of the things that make business good.

IF you are sure your stock and your service are the best in your section, send word to the public. Hire an ad.

SOME florists can not get it through their heads that times have changed, that bills now must be paid according to the seller's terms rather than according to the buyer's convenience.

IN order to stimulate confidence and further increase the transfer-order department, two things are necessary: The florist who receives such an order must fill it, even if it entails great effort or little profit, and the florist who sends the order must pay the bill, not sometime but p. d. q.

TRANSPORTATION did not break down during the holiday rush as it did in 1917, greatly to the relief of all florists, many of whom had feared another sad experience. Train service and wagon service are curtailed, but weather conditions were much more favorable than in December, 1917, and everyone being forewarned, serious congestion was avoided.

IT seems quite likely that members of the trade are themselves responsible for the public's idea that flower shortage and price altitudes were worse than really was the case at Christmas. A lot of us are like the parrot of anecdotal fame in that we talk too much, but we are unlike that bird in that we have not discovered it is what is the matter with us.

GROW good stock; no other kind pays except at intervals.

THE men who could keep their greenhouses going probably did about as well in 1918 as in 1917.

INSTEAD of trying to undersell your competitor, encourage him to ask as much as you. Think it over and talk it over.

EXPRESS rates went up again January 1. The first thing the government does on taking control of a utility is to raise wages and increase rates, then it repeats, and curtails service.

THE larger retailers as a class are charging in proportion to the cost of stock purchased; it is the man who grows his own flowers who most needs education on cost-finding and price-making.

AN accounting expert who recently has had occasion to audit the books of several florists says that in no other trade of his acquaintance is so little attention paid to breakage and waste. These losses, he says, account in large measure for the absence of satisfactory profits.

TAKING the trade as a whole, florists start 1919 in better financial condition than ever before. During 1918 none of us was allowed to pile up liabilities—it was a case of pay as you go—and the good prices of the last quarter of the year made it possible to clear up a lot of old matters, to the great advantage of the debtor as well as of the creditor.

THE cost of living and of doing business continues to rise and, when it stops rising, will come down slowly because of the cost of labor. Labor complains of the cost of living and is itself the principal factor in that of which it complains. But florists share the general view; we do not wish to see wages fall faster than commodity prices do, because labor has become our best patron.

THERE are three big reasons why America will not soon produce the plants which will not be permitted to come from Europe after June 1. In the first place, we have too few skilled growers and no cheap labor that can be trained. In the second place, not many who have the necessary capital will be willing to invest it under conditions which can be changed by the stroke of a pen. And, finally, neither men nor money could overcome the necessary element of time for plant growth.

IT WILL NOT DOWN.

The Federal Horticultural Board finds itself under fire for practically the first time since it was created; the board's previous acts have been with sufficient reason to pass without much protest, but its general quarantine contains so many points open to criticism that Washington is not likely to hear the last of it so long as the quarantine stands unmodified.

At present it is only interested Americans, whose business is hurt, who are carrying the matter to higher powers, but soon European governments are likely to be heard from and in the course of time the American public will want to know.

The Federal Horticultural Board completely disregarded the trade, after inviting an expression of its opinion. The thing for the trade to do now is to educate members of Congress and United States senators.

PROFITEERS! OH! MY!

The following is an editorial paragraph from a nationally circulated Boston newspaper:

Never, since greenhouses were introduced into America, have flowers been so scarce and so high as at the present time. Many people are remarking this fact, some with a disposition to criticize the producers and the florists as profiteers. The true explanation goes back to the supposed coal shortage a few months ago, when the greenhouse men had their normal fuel supply cut one-half. This meant shutting down fifty per cent of the houses, with a corresponding loss in production. It is safe to say that the flower growers are feeling as uncomfortable over the situation as are their customers, for they are making less profit than when flowers sold for about half as much as now. Nor are they made happier by being told that there is plenty of coal.

Profiteers! Those who call us that don't know. Every retail florist has been doing his best to keep prices down, many of those who grow their own stock even selling below the cost of production!

THE REVIEW'S POSITION.

The Review is the forum for the discussion of trade problems, but it is not to be considered that it endorses the ideas of its correspondents any more than it passes an opinion on the success of a project by recording the news of its inception.

THIS IS NO FABLE.

There was once a boy in a florist's store who made believe to himself he was the "boss." Whenever he made a sale he treated the customer as though he owned the store. Whenever he did any work around the store he did it as if he owned the place. Eventually he owned the place.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

Conditions throughout the market from New Year's day to the end of last week can be likened to the calm that follows the storm. Business was somewhat slow and there was plenty of everything to go around. Shipping business was badly handicapped by the extreme cold. In spite of all precautions a great deal of stock arrived in the market frozen and the same thing happened to a great many outgoing shipments. January 6 conditions were better. Business picked up wonderfully and the wholesalers were well satisfied, especially when they looked back to a year ago this week, when Chicago experienced its worst blizzard and shipping was tied up for an entire week.

New Year's business, as a whole, was far above that of last year, both with the wholesalers and city retailers. The retailers reported a large volume of decorations for tables, etc., for New Year's eve, and most of them were swamped with corsage orders. Extra hands were necessary to handle the rush.

The stock coming in is good and continues to bring a satisfactory price, but, considering the fine quality of some of the stock, the prices are none too high. Rose prices vary little from those of last week. All varieties of roses, with the exception of Russell and Columbia, are arriving in good supply, there being just enough to meet the present demand. Russell and Columbia in all lengths are on the short side. Carnations in some of the houses are equal to the call and in others are overplentiful.

Prices have dropped. Good splits bring 2 and 3 cents, while good choice stock brings 4 to 6 cents. A quantity of extra fancy stock arrives and brings 8 cents.

A good quantity of orchids comes in and just equals the demand. These bring a good price for this time of the year. There is just about enough valley. Violets are plentiful, a large supply arriving, with prices on the down grade. There are enough Easter lilies to go around, while callas are on the short side. Calendulas are in considerable demand, putting them on the short side. Sweet peas are not equal to the orders. Paper Whites are in limited supply, as are yellow narcissi. There is plenty of stevia. All other seasonable cut flowers are in fair supply, there being enough for immediate needs.

Green goods are plentiful.

Government Operation.

Not all florists are enthusiastic over government operation of public utilities. For instance:

When the cold wave arrived, January 3, the government-operated express company discontinued pickup service in the Chicago market. High and dry it left the wholesalers and their customers throughout the middle west. A few of the houses have motor trucks at command, but the majority were getting shipments to the depots as best they could, by messenger or even by taxicab, the cost being added to the "P. & D." Arrived at the depot express offices, shipments were accepted only subject to owner's risk.

Under private, competitive management the express companies maintained service as long as the railroads could.

Four Millions of Money.

According to one of the financial authorities publishing an annual summary of business in Chicago, the wholesale value of cut flowers sold in this market in 1918 was $3,790,050, being an increase of five per cent over 1917. It is a fair estimate, and it gives an idea of the importance of Chicago as a cut flower market.

The first part of 1918 was the worst the Chicago market has known, because of the fuel shortage and the severe weather, there being several periods during which business practically ceased for two or three days at a time. Sales showed a sharp decrease. The summer business was good; stock was in only moderate supply and prices were better than usual. In late September business began to increase. In October a boom came on, continuing through the final quarter of the year. Leading growers who were able to maintain production have stated that their sales during the last three months of the year were as large as for the first nine months. An estimate of five per cent increase in sales for the year, taking the market as a whole, is conservative. Some houses made splendid increases.

It is difficult to estimate the sales in dollars, due to the disinclination of most of the wholesale houses to reveal the exact size of their business, and because of a considerable element of duplication, sales to other wholesalers which would appear twice in the total. There are about twenty exclusively wholesale cut flower houses in this market, with half a dozen others which do both wholesale and retail business. At the head of the list are four with annual sales of from $400,000 to $600,000. Unless these four largest wholesalers do more business than all the others put together, which seems unlikely, an estimate of $3,790,050 for the whole market is conservative.

December Weather.

December was an easy month on the coal pile, but a hard one on the stock. The mean temperature of 37.8 degrees made it the warmest December since 1889, but it also was the darkest, there being only three-quarters of the usual number of hours of sunshine. In percentage the possible number of hours of sun were only thirty per cent, whereas an average December gives forty per cent. The mild temperature made it possible to save coal and to produce a greater quantity of stock, but the absence of sun made it difficult to supply nice, crisp flowers of good, clear, bright color.

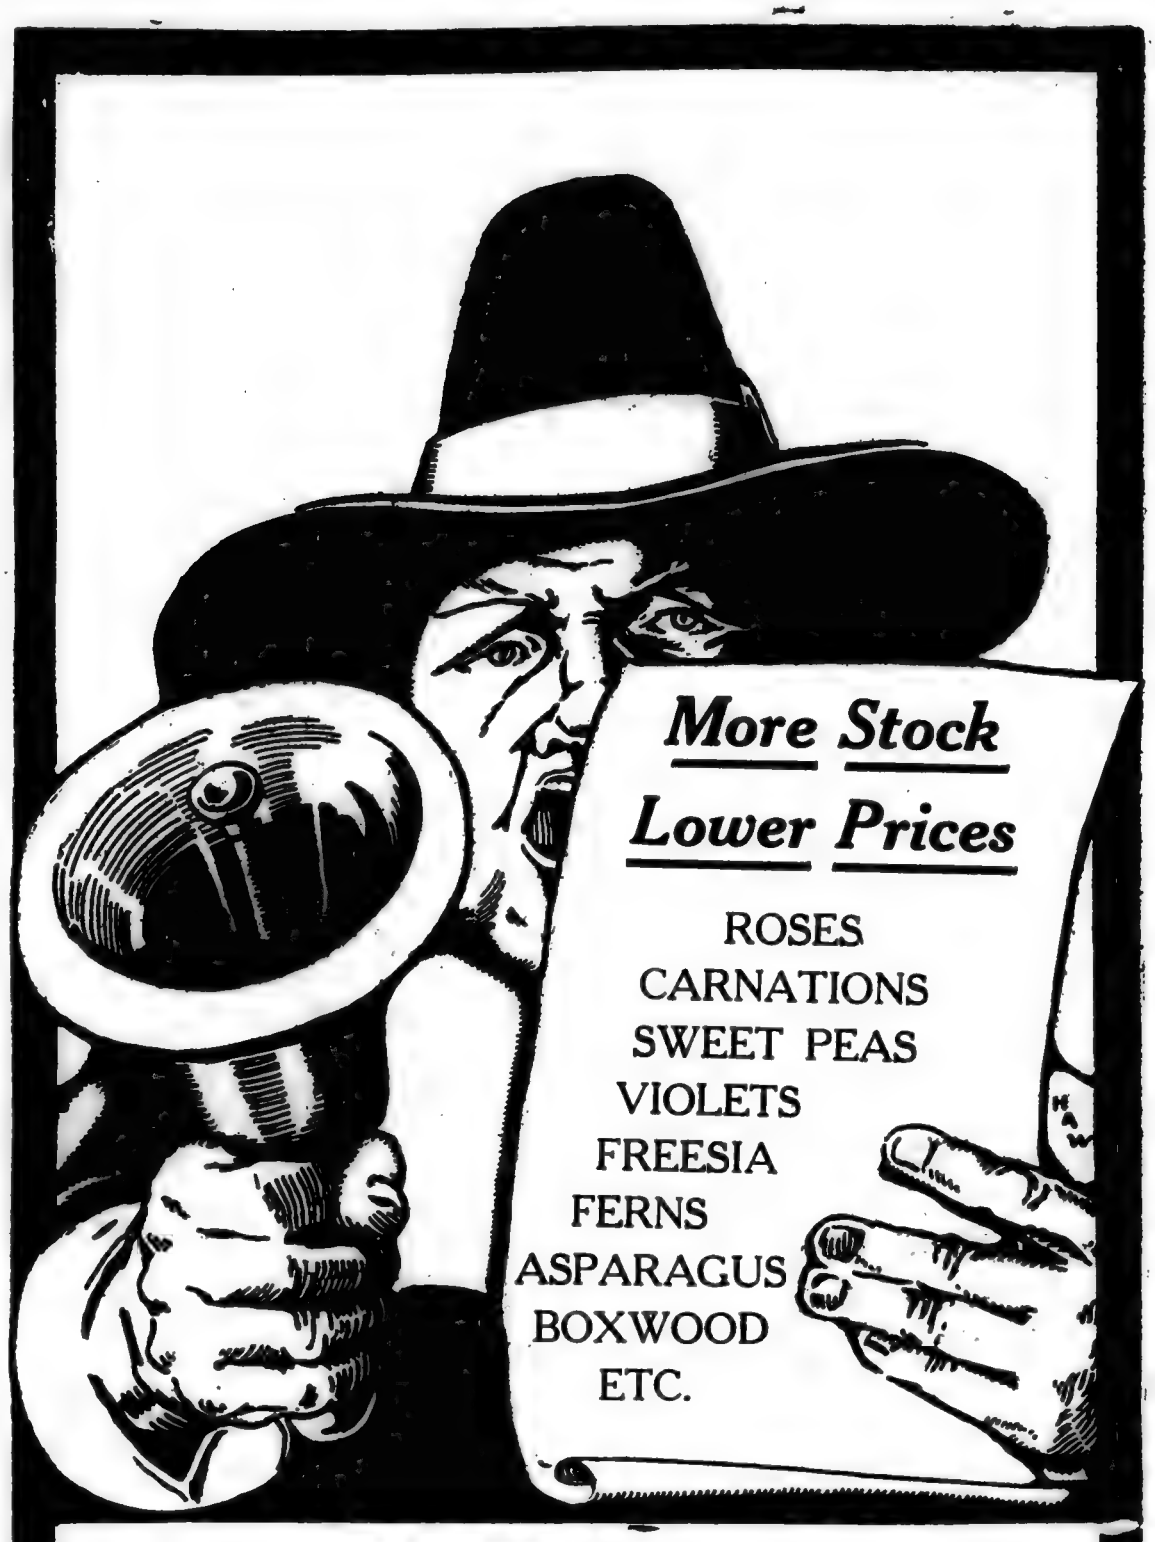
Various Notes.

Albert Marck, for twelve years with A. L. Miller, Jamaica, L. I., and later in business for himself, has assumed charge of the plant department of Poehlmann Bros. Co., at Morton Grove.

Kennicott Bros. Co. has the full force working again after many being away from work on account of influenza. This concern was badly handicapped on this account during the holiday rush.

During the war the Masonic lodges curtailed floral decorations at their special meetings and entertainments. The ban has lifted and many florists who catered to this trade before the war state that the fraternity is again ordering plants and cut flowers for decorative purposes in the old manner.

The Chicago Flower Growers' Association will hold its semiannual meeting of directors at the corporation's office January 14.



During the recent extreme cold spell and blizzard the fireman at George Reinberg's left without notice, but before any heavy damage was done Mr. Reinberg and some of his men started up the fires, which were slowly going down.

Nicholas Karthauser, proprietor of the restaurant and summer garden on the Ridge, died January 4. Mr. Karthauser, although not a florist, is well known in the trade, having entertained the Chicago Florists' Club, of which he was a member, for many years.

S. J. Pearce is doing well with his cold storage giganteums. They are giving two, three and occasionally four clean flowers to the bulb and are selling briskly.

W. W. Randall started January 7 on an extended trip west and north.

Among other things, the shipping of bulbs was suspended during the zero weather. The first shipments this year went out January 6, when A. Hender-the "flu." Mrs. Reburn has been in the American hospital for two weeks with double pneumonia.

John A. Michal intends to resume control of the greenhouses at 7045-47 Stony Island avenue, leased for the last two years to his brother, Joseph Michal. He will continue the retail business and grow for the wholesale market as well.

It was August Poehlmann's lot to spend the holidays in bed, with the "flu." He has not been dangerously ill, but it is the doctor's orders that he take things easily for a while.

That 1918 was the best year in the history of the Weiland and Risch interests, either partnership or corporate, is the report of John P. Risch. He says, however, that the first nine months were poor and that he attributes the profits of the last quarter to the disaster which overtook the country in the form of an epidemic. He figures that peace was only of secondary influence on the sale of flowers.

Mary Garden, whom we scarcely need designate as "of" or "the," has a pleasant little habit in line with our trade slogan, "Say It with Flowers." Each time she receives an invitation in society she sends a dozen Beauties. The store that enjoys her patronage was one of the biggest buyers of Beauties during the holidays.

WAX FLOWERS

Mr. Florist, we have spent a fortune in perfecting our wax flowers so that they will look like the natural ones. Many successful florists have written us of the great aid these flowers give them in these times when natural flowers are so high in price; and florists all over the country today are combining the natural flowers with our artificial ones. If you have not learned this combination, why don't you just try to work in a few artificial Roses, Carnations, Sweet Peas, Callas, Easter Lilies, etc., along with your natural flowers in your floral pieces? In many cases you are really making a satisfied customer. For your own sake just give us a trial order amounting to $25.00 or less and watch for results.

Then again you should have some of our Wax Designs, Pillows, Crosses, Anchors, Sprays, Magnolia Wreaths, etc., just to make a display in your shop. If you have no display you will have no call for goods. A good display means you are creating a demand for your goods.

We guarantee that our prices are the lowest.

COMPARE OUR PRICES WITH OTHERS AND SEE IF YOU CANNOT SAVE FROM 25 to 30%.

The chief obstacle in the path of the retailers at Christmas, as George Asmus tells it, was the slushy storm of December 24. He says this would not have been such a handicap had it not been for the great shortage of Christmas trees; the six Schiller telephones were so burdened with calls from people hopelessly hunting Christmas trees that others who wanted to order gifts had trouble getting the use of a line. Mr. Asmus declares there was no trouble getting all the cut flowers needed to fill the orders taken at the two Schiller stores.

Sixteen dollars is a mere trifle on a big month's business, but that is all the difference there was in the December sales of the E. Wienhoeber Co., Elm street, and the best month in the company's history, which was in 1916. The Christmas sales were less in number, but larger in average size, with the result that they were handled with greater ease.

The E. C. Amling Co., always a believer in display advertising, evidently feels that conditions have changed, because, after holding aloof from the S. A. F. publicity work during 1918, it has headed the 1919 list with a subscription of $100.

Says Fred Lautenschlager: "The cold wave brought Kroeschell Bros. Co.

several telephone and telegraph orders for boilers to be shipped same day.''

The changed business outlook has resulted in opening negotiations which may lead to several interesting changes among growers and wholesalers.

Many of the wholesalers and growers attended the funeral of W. H. Amling, at Melrose Park, January 7, or sent flowers. Mr. Amling was well liked and universally esteemed.

Indicating his belief in continued activity in the florists' trade, Joseph Foerster says conservative financial management will be the principal factor in determining the duration of each individual's present prosperity.

Visitors.

Fred Henoch, of the Ove Gnatt Co., La Porte, Ind., called on several of the large wholesale supply houses while in the market the early part of the week. Mr. Henoch has recovered from a recent illness, this being his first visit in many months.

E. A. Fetters, of Detroit, Mich., was in the market the early part of the week.

Henry M. Robinson, of the firm which bears his name at New York and Boston, was in the local market January 4, making large purchases which were sent to both his wholesale establishments.

Pick-up service was resumed when the cold wave left, January 6.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

From reports of the retailers, wholesalers and growers, New Year's business was satisfactory. While not so large as Christmas, the business done for this holiday was much better than last year.

Since New Year's a cold wave has hit the city. The temperature dropped below zero, which taxed the capacity of the growers' boilers and some shipments came in frozen. Stock has become scarce. Still, there is enough coming in for the demand, as business is not any too good with the retailers.

Roses are none too many, as the majority of local rose growers have gone off crop. Fancy grades in Russell, Columbia and Ophelia are in demand. Carnations are not so plentiful as they were a week ago. The best grades are held at $5 per hundred. Enchantress varieties have the call.

Bulbous stock is scarce this season, with Paper Whites holding at 8 cents and cleaning up daily at this price. Easter lilies, valley and freesias are in request and not enough are coming in for the demand. Violets have not been selling well this season and quite a good crop now is coming in. Sweet peas are limited to small lots and sell well.

In greens, smilax, asparagus, galax and ferns sell well.

Various Notes.

The Retail Florists' Association held an important and interesting meeting December 30, in the Knights of Columbus hall, Grand avenue and Olive street. There was a large attendance. President J. J. Windler was in the chair. There were discussions of Christmas business and the high prices of cut stock. It was decided to appoint a committee of three, with L. Jules Bourdet as chairman, to arrange with the St. Louis Wholesale Florists' Association and the County Growers' Association to also ap-

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

There was a small active market at New Year's, with prices lower than at Christmas. The amount of business was limited to the moderate production. The rose crops had passed. There was the light, everyday supply, with no reserve to draw upon. The New Year's business was larger than that of a year ago, but not nearly so large as that of several years back. There is a marked change in the complexion of the stock. The falling off in the receipts of roses has been partly made up by larger receipts of lilacs and snapdragons and by the early arrival of freesia, which promises to be plentiful soon, as well as by more Paper White narcissi and by a few Soleil d'Or. The surprise of the week has been the reappearance of valley, at a fifty per cent advance. There are a few more callas. Bud-dropping has marred the expected crop of sweet peas. Carnations are not more plentiful. Violets are scarce. Prices continue on a higher scale than usual. There is no appearance of the usual early January falling off in the demand. The arrival of severe weather has had a stimulating effect on business.

The Labor Situation.

There has been a marked change in the labor situation during the last two months. With the cessation of orders for war materials, the completion of orders now on hand and the return of men from the camps, there has been a steady increase in the number of men and women who are seeking employment in peaceful avocations. A prominent grower who has been running his place short-handed, like many others, for a long time, says that he is now able to get all the help he wants on his own terms, not on the applicant's terms, as in the past. When asked what these terms were, he replied that they were $15 a week. This is understood to be for unskilled labor. Discussing the question, one of the large growers said that, while salaries were high, those who held their positions during the war would not be asked to accept a reduction, but, should they wish to leave, new men would not be engaged at the same figures. In other words, he would stand by those who had stood by him. This seems sound business.

The Big Three.

There are three growers whose places are side by side on the Mount Airy turnpike, who have national reputations. The visitor to one place would naturally visit the other two, should time permit. All three places have grown so large that it is no easy matter to see or to describe all of them at one time, so we will take them one at a time, as there is friendly rivalry among them. The question of precedence is settled alphabetically.

Mr. Farenwald, of Roslyn.

Adolph Farenwald is one of the ablest rose growers in America today. He has built a large range of glass and successfully managed it for over a score of years. He has taken up and handled different varieties of roses with remarkable skill and he has shown skill in handling plants other than roses for cut flowers, in times of emergency when something had to be done. Left almost without help last summer and fall, Mr. Farenwald's place nevertheless does him credit. It is in fair shape today, a marvellous showing, considering that it has had less than one-third the usual amount of labor expended on it. Mr. Farenwald has been resourceful and he has worked hard. He has made his work tell, too.

Mrs. George Shawyer is Mr. Farenwald's best rose today. Next come Mrs. Charles Russell and American Beauty. There probably would not be any other varieties of roses or any other plants than roses but for the labor shortage, but there are some space fillers and they look well, too.

CARNATIONS - CALLAS - MIGNONETTE - SWEET PEAS

WM. J. BAKER, WHOLESALE FLORIST 12 South Mole Street Philadelphia, Pa.

The pride of the place today is the compressed air system for pumping water, and the manure tank, which supply great quantities of clear water and of liquid manure, respectively. The first was put in to avoid impure water and the second to conserve plant food.

The water system is complete. An artesian well has replaced the alum-tainted spring. The well water is lifted by compressed air, another pump forcing the water through the system. A pond is fed by the drain of water, or overflow from the greenhouses, giving a supply of manure water which can be strengthened or diluted as desired.

To illustrate how he got through, Mr. Farenwald said that he watered one large section in three hours by using many pieces of hose all on different spigots, turning each spigot on full force and moving them all as fast as the soil within reach got soaked. The success of this scheme was due to slopes downhill in the rose bed, the watering being commenced at the upper end and continued to the lower until all the plants had enjoyed a good drink.

No one can visit Mr. Farenwald's place without realizing that Mr. Farenwald himself is the magnet. The men who call him familiarly Fernwold, frankly admit that he thoroughly understands his business, although they are not always quite sure whether or not he is laughing at them. Whether in fun or in earnest, Mr. Farenwald is always worth hearing. His statements in the second case can be safely accepted in toto, while those in the first may be taken cum grano salis.

The Florists' Club.

The regular meeting of the Florists' Club was held in the Adelphia hotel Tuesday evening, January 7. It was publicity night, with a galaxy of distant stars to illuminate the occasion, including seven motor loads from Baltimore. An informal dinner was given in their honor before the meeting. It is proposed to make this dinner a feature of club nights. The idea is that any member may come to the Adelphia to dine with his fellow-members before the meeting.

Various Notes.

Recent visitors include J. A. Beck and W. B. Clinger, both of Milton, Pa.; Major P. F. O'Keefe, Boston; Charles H. Totty, Madison, N. J.; Wallace R. Pierson, Cromwell, Conn.; William F. Gude, Washington, D. C.; Henry Penn, Boston; John Young, New York city.

The embarkation of John R. Andre into his retail business in Doylestown is being watched with interest. Usually development is the other way, from retail to wholesale, but Mr. Andre feels that there is an outlet for flowers in Doylestown that should be improved.

E. Farenwald, of Roslyn, Pa., is in the Quartermaster's Department at Camp Lee, near Petersburg, Va.

J. M. Deutscher has reintroduced valley to this market.

The Market.

The extraordinary conditions which have prevailed in the cut flower market were intensified during the last week, which proved to be one of dark skies, fog, snow and drizzle, with only one clear day to relieve the gloom. Flowers opened slowly and boxes were hardly opened before their contents disappeared. It has not been a question of selling the flowers with growers and salesmen, but rather of doling them out to regular customers as impartially as possible. Not half the number of flowers wanted have arrived and both wholesalers and retailers have had to turn down many orders entirely, or send only a part of what customers ordered. Prices are naturally high and nearly everything is selling at higher figures than for Christmas. The return of the influenza epidemic is causing an increasing death roll and new cases in the city have jumped to 1,000 per day. Fortunately, it is less violent than the September and October wave.

Roses are not at all abundant and short-stemmed stock sells at from $15 to $20 per hundred, with other grades making up to $40. The demand is best for shorts. In the case of Hadley and Russell, specially fine flowers realize up to $60, while the best American Beauties are held at $18 per dozen. Killarney Brilliant is now popular. Carnations make $10 and $15, with $12 a fair price for good blooms. Violets continue scarce at $3 and $4, and sweet peas continue high. Bud-dropping, owing to the dark, damp weather, has decreased supplies.

Lilies are in good supply and make $25 to $30, with callas higher than a week ago. Freesias make from $8 to $12. Marguerites, calendulas, wallflowers, mignonette and Paper Whites clean up quickly. Small lots of valley are coming in and have sold as high as $16 to $20 per hundred, a record price here. Cattleya Trianæ and Percivaliana are in better supply and have dropped to $6 to $9 per dozen. Cypripediums hold their own. Asparagus goes only moderately well. This is always the case while good supplies of stevia continue to come in. There is a fair call for pot plants, with no great supply available.

Horticultural Society.

The annual inaugural meeting of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society will be held at noon January 11, when the new president's address and reports from the various committees will be heard. There will be a small exhibition of winter fruits and vegetables, for which money prizes are offered.

The program of lectures for the coming season is as follows:

January 11—"Varietal Adaptations of Culinary Vegetables to Local Conditions," by Dr. W. W. Tracy, Washington, D. C.

January 18—"The Culture of Conifers," by A. H. Hill, Dundee, Ill.

January 25—"Home Garden Fruits" (illustrated), by M. G. Kains, Columbia University, N. Y.

February 1—"Gardening After the War," by Leonard Barron, Garden City, N. Y.
February 8—"Land Drainage, Its History, Problems and Possibilities," by Arthur E. Horton, Lexington, Mass.
February 15—"Protecting American Crop Plants Against Alien Enemies," by Dr. B. T. Galloway, Washington, D. C.

William H. Elliott, of Brighton, has been selected as the lecturer on floriculture to represent the Gardeners' and Florists' Club and allied interests which are coöperating with a number of other bodies for a week of lectures and discussions in Horticultural hall during the week commencing February 9. Mr. Elliott's subject will prove of great interest to both agriculturists and horticulturists.

There will be no spring exhibition held in Boston the coming season. Lack of finances is given as the reason for not holding one, but whatever the reason, its omission is greatly to be regretted.

Various Notes.

December, 1918, proved a remarkable contrast to the same month a year earlier. In 1917 the maximum temperature of the month was 43 degrees, the minimum 16 degrees below zero and the mean for the month 20½ degrees. Last month the maximum was 61 degrees, the minimum 6 degrees and the mean 31½, showing the average daily temperature to have been no less than 11 degrees higher than in 1917. Rainfall was light and sunless days were numerous.

Fred J. Elder, until recently Boston manager for Lord & Burnham Co., now located at Cleveland, O., has been looking up old friends and customers the last few days. Mr. Elder states that a good many inquiries are coming in from prospective builders. His many friends here hope he may soon locate in Boston again.

Penn had the decorations for the governor's inaugural in Boston January 2 and made a state seal five feet high and other elaborate pieces, the former the gift of the adjutant general and staff. The large quantities of flowers were delivered later to mothers who had lost sons in the service.

Only necessary business will be transacted at the meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club January 21. It will be installation night and ladies' night and a pleasing entertainment, with a collation and dancing, will follow the regular meeting. Tickets will be on sale for the Victory banquet to be held February 26.

Alfred R. Hutson, head salesman for W. H. Elliott, has been sick with the influenza, but is much improved.

The Waban Rose Conservatories, Natick, Mass., are operating sixty-five per cent of their glass area this season. Except for two divisions of Killarney Brilliant, the only varieties grown are Russell and Hadley.

While the wholesale markets are bare of flowers, it is a revelation to look over the roomy ice chests of H. M. Robinson & Co., which are filled to repletion with the finest roses, carnations and other flowers to be had in New England. Much of their stock comes from their buyers in New York and Philadelphia. A big business is being done in artificial wreaths and loose flowers at present and the force employed in the wire frame department is rushed to keep up with the demand.

Mark Aitken, of Springfield, Mass., with Eber Holmes, his greenhouse manager, made a tour of growers, both pri-

The Arnold-Fisher Co., of Woburn, is sending in quantities of high-grade carnations this season, including Benora, Matchless, Alice and Red Cross, Peter Fisher's new seedling, of which this concern has 10,000 plants. This company also specializes in sweet peas.

At the store of Wax Bros., Tremont street, all hands are kept busy with funeral work, which is of heavy volume. The trouble is to secure sufficient flowers for the necessary designs. Christmas business here was well ahead of 1917.

In the woodlands of the Boston park department all chestnuts are being cut out, owing to bark disease. White oaks, many of them splendid specimens, are likewise being sacrificed on the assumption that, with them out of the way, the gypsy moth will be lessened. Some beautiful woodland is being spoiled with this idea in mind. It will be found that the gypsy is not at all a fastidious creature and, if white oaks are unavailable, red oaks, scarlet oaks, willows, elms, hemlocks and other trees will suffer the more severely.

Robert Montgomery, of Natick, had a splendid cut of Russell and Hadley for Christmas. His Ophelias were off crop. He is much enthused with Columbia.

December, 1918, was a remarkably mild month. December 27 and 28 plowing operations were going on, there being no frost in the ground. A year ago December 28 we recorded 16 degrees below zero and were cutting ice a foot thick. W. N. C.

With the return and discharge of the soldiers better business is expected, for young men are good customers of the florists. A marked decrease in sales was noted when young men were called to the service in large numbers. Prices are still high, though not so high as they were during the holidays. Carnations still are scarce. The growers are

FOR SALE

Greenhouses and Dwelling on 5-acre Tract

We offer for sale at an exceptionally low price, one of the most modern and profitable greenhouse plants in central Indiana—doing a wholesale and retail business of $30,000.00 a year in cut flowers, plants and lettuce, at a net profit for the last three years of more than 33⅓ per cent. No other wholesale cut flower plant within a radius of 70 miles—the demand is far greater than we can supply. Located in city of 70,000, three squares from street car line and railroad switch. Abundance of cheap coal—more than 50 coal mines within a radius of from 1 to 30 miles.

This greenhouse range consists of 14 greenhouses, with complete modern equipment and filled to capacity with growing stock having a market value of no less than $7500.00. Is located on a valuable 5 acre tract, with nice 7-room dwelling, with hot water heat.

This plant has been conservatively appraised at $60,000.00, but the owner, on account of personal and family affairs, will sacrifice. If sold to responsible persons will accept $10,000.00 to $20,000.00 cash, balance to be paid out of profits. Might consider trade for land or something which does not require personal attention.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

LOS ANGELES.

The Market.

The week following New Year's is usually a quiet one and stock is often plentiful, but this year was an exception, flowers of all kinds being scarce. We have had several severe frosts, more cold nights, in fact, than in any year since the winter of 1913, and this has kept everything back, even such hardy stock as cornflowers being affected. Outdoor Chinese lilies are usually plentiful by this season, but they are not in good supply yet. For some reason outdoor roses have held up better than other flowers and some excellent stock is seen. Indoor roses, owing to the bright days, are still coming in fine shape and the supply is equal to the demand as a rule. Violets are extremely scarce and the few that arrive bring double the prices of last year. Cecile Brunner roses and sweet peas also are high in price. Orchids are more plentiful and the demand for them is better.

As usual, there was some demand for flowers for the Tournament of Roses at Pasadena, but it was confined for the most part to the cheaper grades, carnations being too high in price to be used. Some of the contestants in the decorated auto classes used helichrysum with good effect. Over 10,000 blooms were used on one car.

Various Notes.

H. N. Gage, of Montebello, reports an unusually good crop of plumosus seed this year.

Mrs. Helmer, of the Haley Street Nursery, Santa Barbara, made a flying trip to Los Angeles last week, looking up stock for New Year's.

The death of Ellwood Cooper is reported in another column.

The congested condition of the mails has made it impossible to fill orders sent by mail to wholesalers of late, the letters arriving often several days behind time.

F. Lichtenberg reports a big demand for orchids in pots at high figures.

R. Overstreet, well known to the trade in Los Angeles, has opened an attractive store at 318 West Eighth street, under the title of the Marcell Flower Shop. It is in the new building put up by the Marcell cafe and is located in a part of the city which is developing rapidly into a high-class business section. Mr. Overstreet, it will be recalled, was manager for J. W. Wolters for two years and before that was for a year with the Freeman Flower Shop and three years with Darling's Flower Shop. He has always been known for his artistic taste and everyone who has had business relations with him will wish him the best of luck in his first venture in business on his own account. The appearance of his store shows his ability as a decorator already.

S. Murata returned from his trip to Japan December 30, having arrived in San Francisco December 26 and taken the road home by easy stages. He has been away since August and seems to be in much better health as a result of the change. His trip was saddened by the death of his father during the time of his visit to his old home, but outside of this he says he had an enjoyable time. Mrs. Murata and the two children will remain in Japan for a longer vacation.

K. B. Van Woert, of the Santa Barbara Seed Co., Santa Barbara, was in town this week.

C. Lewis, formerly of Freeman Lewis, and later manager of the Hamburger floral department, is now with the Redondo Floral Co. Every member of the staff here was presented with a substantial cash gift for New Year's. F. Borden says the firm has had decidedly the best business since 1912 and that the loyalty of the staff had conduced largely to this happy state of affairs.

H. R. Richards.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Florists of this city anticipated a big holiday business and made preparations accordingly, but they were not fully prepared for the actual rush which ensued. Even with all the extra help they could get, some of the downtown firms were forced to work all night Christmas eve to get out their orders. Judging from reports from various concerns, this was the best December in the history of the business here. Plenty of good flowering plants saved the situation as far as stock was concerned. Cut flowers were scarce in comparison with the demand and prices ruled higher than ever before. An urgent shipping demand tended to accentuate the shortage. It was estimated that all the flowers shipped to outside points could have been used locally, but the shippers did not feel they could disappoint their distant customers entirely, after spending so much time and effort in working up this shipping business in California flowers. On the whole, the flowering plants left nothing to be desired either in quality or quantity. It was noted at many of the stores that people spent liberally, the largest, finest and highest-priced cyclamens, poinsettias and other plants cleaning up first.

Cut flowers continue scarce and Christmas prices still prevail. For instance, roses which sold for $2 and $2.50 per dozen before the holiday rush cannot be had now for less than $5 and $6. In the case of roses the cut is not below normal for this season, but the scarcity of other flowers and the extra shipping demand makes the supply short of requirements. All varieties grown extensively in this vicinity show excellent quality, whether American Beauties, Russell, Ophelia, Columbia, Hadley or what not. The continued cold weather, without rain, has shortened up the violet crop to such an extent that the offerings fail to go around. Shippers report difficulty in filling their orders. A good-sized cut of indoor-grown freesias and a large crop of outdoor Paper Whites arriving constitute welcome additions to the daily receipts. As would be expected under the circumstances, they clean up easily. Carnations are notably on the short side of the market; the crop is late this season and heavy offerings are expected by the middle of January. Fine cut poinsettias arrived from southern California for the holiday trade. They sold exceedingly well for New Year's as well as Christmas. Heather has been well taken also. Orchids and gardenias are equal to the demand. With so many lines of stock short, it is gratifying to the trade to have plenty of greens.

Various Notes.

Checking up on Christmas business, N. F. Baldocchi, of Podesta & Baldocchi, was elated to find that all former records had been broken by a sustantial margin. His firm bought heavily to begin with, but found its stock of flowering plants practically cleaned up December 23. Getting in touch with nurseries all around the bay, Mr. Baldocchi succeeded in rounding up more stock, enough, in fact, to keep men on the job nearly all night December 23 and all night December 24. He himself went home at 9:30 Christmas morning, having worked all that night and all but three hours of the night before. No telephone orders were taken at this establishment either December 23 or 24. Business held up unusually well between Christmas and New Year's.

B. M. Joseph says his holiday business was "the best ever," and the outlook is so favorable in his estimation that he has decided to make permanent extra delivery facilities which he employed at Christmas time. Mr. Bianchini, a well known florist, who has been with Mr. Joseph for some time, is now buyer for this establishment, succeeding A. Cuneo, who has been in poor health of late. George Wagner is pleased to announce he is back on the job for good, having received his discharge from military service while on furlough in time to enable him to help with the holiday rush.

F. C. Jaeger, of F. C. Jaeger & Son, says his firm was taxed to capacity to fill its holiday orders. He has secured the services of Miss Regine Bartlett, an experienced florist from Los Angeles, Cal., and now has three ladies on his staff. In this connection it may be mentioned that more women now are identified with the florists' shops here than in pre-war times, but their numbers have never reached high proportions, so men formerly in the trade returning from the service probably will have little difficulty in finding employment.

A. J. Rossi, of Pelicano, Rossi & Co., says, "Christmas business was wonderful, beyond all expectations." He figures his firm handled from sixty to seventy-five per cent more business than it did a year ago. The store next door, used for the display and sale of flowering plants, proved a big convenience. In view of the considerable amount of sickness around, Mr. Rossi was gratified to have his entire force of experienced workers on hand. He noted that people seemed to have plenty of money to spend, there being little hunting about for small cyclamens or other small plants. Mixed plant baskets arranged by Frank Pelicano, of the firm, sold especially well.

Mrs. A. Roberts, who has conducted the J. B. Boland business on Kearny street since the death of her sister, Mrs. Boland, is well satisfied with holiday trade, as is also John Sievers, manager of the store. Not only did they supply a big demand for flowers and plants locally; they also shipped cut flowers on telegraphic orders as far as 3,000 miles and sent two large Scotch heather plants to New York, on which the express charges came to as much as the price of the plants.

Messrs. Shellgrain and Ritter, of the new firm of Shellgrain & Ritter, have no complaints to make over their first holiday business, sales running above calculations.

Manager Stelling, of the store of the MacRorie-McLaren Co., Powell street, says Christmas business was all that could be desired and that sales have held up well since.

J. A. Axell, manager of the E. W. McLellan Co., in closing December reports, finds that Christmas business doubled that of any previous year in the history of the firm. Shipping orders continue sufficiently large to cause difficulty in filling them, with the local demand strong also.

Mr. Enomoto, of Enomoto & Co., filled a great many Christmas orders for violets, but he could have shipped a great many more, had stock been available. Now he is sending out large consignments of freesias and Chinese lilies. He looks for plenty of carnations by January 15.

C. Kooyman has just completed planting two acres of bulbs in Alameda, including narcissi, Chinese lilies, etc. A large shipment of galax arriving this week fills a real need.

C. W. McGhee has a force of men digging and shipping nursery stock at his place near Loomis, Cal. His only complaint is that he has not enough stock to meet the demand. M. M.

ST. LOUIS NOTES.

American Carnation Society's meeting and exhibition at Cleveland, January 29 and 30. Anyone contemplating going should send his name to the trustees of the Florists' Club.

John J. Burke, formerly of St. Louis, now with A. C. Brown, at Springfield, Ill., spent a few days here buying supplies.

W. A. Rowe, of Kirkwood, took a few days off after Christmas for a hunting trip. He reports rabbits plentiful and the number he brought back speaks well for his marksmanship.

Fred G. Grossart's son, Gust G. Grossart, passed through here on his way to resume his duties as landscaper for the University of Nebraska, at Lincoln. Mr. Grossart has received an honorable discharge from the army.

John Barnard, of the Rosery; the Robinson Flower Shop and the A. Brix Floral Co,, all north side florists, say they had a most satisfactory holiday trade, better than last year.

Henry Emunds, A. G. Fehr and Gust Grossart, all Belleville florists, report they had a splendid trade, not only during the holidays, but for the whole month of December.

President J. F. Ammann, of the S. A. F., pleased the local members with his St. Louis appointments.

The County Growers' Association held its monthly meeting January 8, at the Eleven Mile House, as usual.

Richard Tubbesing, head of the Ayres Floral Co., has been honorably discharged from the navy and returned in time for the Christmas rush. He was congratulated on his healthful appearance.

Andre Bourdet, of the Bourdet Floral Co., and Harry Schlechter, of the Angermueller force, who still are in France, have sent home Christmas and New Year's greetings to their friends in the trade. Each came out of the big scrap without a scratch.

Otto Sander had quite a big order furnishing the desk flowers for the seating of the new St. Louis circuit judges January 6, on which he showed his ability as an artist.

Quite a number of suburban florists visited the wholesale district last week. Among them were W. J. Pilcher, A. S. Cerny, W. A. Rowe, Charles, William and Henry Meier, Hugo Gross, Gus and George Hartmann, Phil Goebel, Joseph Duestchmann, Edwin Denker, A. Jablonsky, Wm. Winter, A. G. Ahner and Thomas Kirkwood. J. J. B.

than ever before. It is not hard to get $10 per dozen for the best quality of Russell, Columbia, Hoosier Beauty, Hadley and Ophelia roses, while carnations and narcissi, both yellow and white, bring $2 per dozen. Ferns are in strong demand.

Various Notes.

The local florists have just received notice of the meeting of the Tennessee State Florists' Association, to be held in Nashville January 28.

It was with a great deal of pleasure that the local trade noted in the issue of The Review of January 2 the appointment of Karl P. Baum on the committee of American Products of the S. A. F. To be chosen to serve this important interest with such distinguished gentlemen as F. R. Pierson and E. G. Hill is indeed an honor.

Baum's Home of Flowers is showing choice baskets of cut flowers, including lilies, Columbia, Hoosier Beauty and Russell roses and Soleil d'Or narcissi. Fine ferns also are featured here.

A. H. Dailey has had a good deal of funeral work of late.

A. J. McNutt continues busy. He has plenty of stock.

Arthur S. Cohen was a visitor this week He reports business as good and is looking forward to a banner business in 1919. —— K. P. B.

Crouch the Florist had one of the biggest weeks he has ever had just before Christmas. He had to rent a store next to his salesroom in order to show off his large display of poinsettias and other plants, which were beautiful and plentiful. Some of the poinsettias sold for as much as $10 apiece. He also had some fine solanums, cyclamens, begonias, primroses and English daisies, which went quickly. Japanese fern dishes filled with small palms, heliotropes and begonias sold out the first two days. In cut flowers, he had orchids, violets, sweet peas, narcissi, fine carnations, which were plentiful; Russell, Radiance, Ophelia and Aaron Ward roses, and plenty of stevia. He is continuing to improve his establishment, and will be ready next year to have even more in the way of cut flowers and plants.

WE sold every pelargonium we had solely through the Classified ads we ran in The Review. It is mighty hard to beat as a business getter.—Percy C. Cowan, The Enid Floral Co., Enid, Okla.

I AM completely sold out. The little ad sold over 18,000 bulbs in four days. On the first insertion I received two orders from customers nearer Chicago before I received my own copy of The Review.—Squire Buster, Wilmington, O.

PLEASE stop my pansy ad in the next issue, as I am sold out. That ad sure brought results. I have sold 52,000 plants since that ad has been running, thanks to you and your Classified section.—John H. Griscel, Dayton, O.

FRAT-M

FRATERNAL ✻ EMBLEMS.

What are they?

They are 4-inch reproductions of Fraternal Emblems embossed in gold and the colors demanded by each Fraternal Order

How are they used?

They are attached to the ribbon or chiffon of any floral offering.

Why are they of such help to the Florist?

They save flowers, as the colors demanded by each Order are embossed on the Frat-M. They save wire designs; for instance, any plain spray with a Frat-M attached becomes a fraternal piece. Think of what this means, with a shortage of wire and flowers as scarce and high as theyare everywhere this winter. They save lettering. Think of that. If attached to door badges alone, they are worth many times their cost.

What do they cost?

They cost 20c each, or $2.00 a dozen cash, and should retail for 50c each, or $6.00 per dozen. An order of two dozen ($4.00 cash) gets the exclusive use of Frat-M's for one year in cities of 25,000 or less. They can be bought from your wholesale supply house, or the

NATIONAL PUBLICITY CAMPAIGN.

Scope Is Enlarged.

The publicity committees of the S. A. F. have been able to extend their plans as previously announced so that the January and February magazine advertisements are now to appear in thirty-three national magazines, instead of twenty-seven as previously arranged. The additions are Pictorial Review, McClure's, System, Christian Herald and Judge. Altogether our list will provide a circulation of 12,000,000 for some of the advertisements, and only a trifle less for others.

In all these advertisements our slogan, "Say It with Flowers," is paramount. Our promotion bureau has had ample demonstration of the efficacy of this slogan through the numerous requests received for its service in individual transactions, from Palestine, South Africa, France, Great Britain, Cuba, Brazil and other countries, the correspondents, without knowledge of us other than obtained through our advertising, sending their money with their requests, thus evidencing their pleasure in being able through us to make flowers their messengers in the transmission of sentiments from points most remote.

Connecting the Local Florist.

What such business has amounted to here at home, we are, of course, unable to state, although many contributors to our fund who have been on the lookout for evidence of results from the campaign work advise us of their complete satisfaction with results as brought to their knowledge and checks for their 1919 subscriptions are coming in accompanied by hearty endorsements of our plan of campaign.

Telegraph or mail orders receive my personal attention.

Our promotion bureau has just completed the mailing of many thousands of pamphlets describing its direct service aids to those who, through their local advertising, desire to connect their establishments with the national magazine advertising. Any florist who has not received a pamphlet should write at once to the secretary for one.

Are You With Us?

We have now entered upon the second year of the campaign and are starting under conditions which are much more favorable than those we had to contend with last year. Practically, the day for the suspension of any "nonessential" has passed and flowers need no longer be tabbed with a bugaboo term. The public has accepted our slogan, "Say It with Flowers," as forcefully suggestive and it is up to us to make it a thousand times more impressive, that our products may be always in mind and their peculiar fitness as mediums for the conveyance of sentiment readily recognized as occasions may arise.

To attain this, money is needed, and the money must be provided by the florists themselves. It is estimated that there are between 15,000 and 20,000 florists in the country, yet last year we were able to collect a fund of less than $50,000. It may have been because our project was more or less experimental. This year there is no experiment about our work. We know what we are doing and the amount of good we may expect.

To every florist who has his business at heart, but who has not booked himself for a subscription to the 1919 campaign, we are putting the question, "Are you with us? If not, why?"

The 1918 Campaign.

Here are figures of funds available for last year:

Business was quiet between the two holidays, but most of the florists sold a quantity of baskets filled with blooming plants, as well as baskets and bouquets, which were sent to the city officials entering office. It is gratifying to note that nearly everything was cleaned up for the Christmas business by practically all the stores, so completely, in fact, that hardly anything was left in some of the large greenhouses, the smaller ones having been sold out several days earlier. A large amount of business is still being done in funeral work, which constitutes the greater part of the business at the present time. It is true that several weddings and New Year's dances took place, but the call for that kind of work was light. Roses are the most prominent item just now and the demand for them is good. Prices continue as before Christmas. A good variety is received daily and the stock moves rapidly. Scott Key, Hoosier Beauty and other reds are in demand, while Prima Donna, Russell, Champ Weiland and other dark pinks are much sought for. Maryland, September Morn, Sunburst and the Wards also sell well. Some good sweet peas are seen, but the supply is limited. The demand for violets is better than it has been, the price having dropped since the holidays. Their quality continues good. Excellent freesia is seen and is selling well, being especially appropriate for design work. The supply of carnations appears to be as short as it was a month ago. Only small shipments arrive daily. Callas are good and sell nicely. Easter lilies, though not in large supply, fill the need. They are selling for $12.50 per hundred. The supply of mignonette is not large, but it is unusually fine. Calendulas are good, but the demand is small. A fair supply of Paper Whites is on hand and moves readily. Pussy willows of exceptional quality are available. Little valley is seen, but there is no special demand for it. Cattleyas and cypripediums are in the market, but they drag. A few fair chrysanthemums in the lavender shades are used for design work. Pink snapdragons are good, but the supply is small. The supply of greens is equal to present demands, but the shortage of brown galax is critical, since the demand is so heavy now. A good supply of potted plants is on hand.

Christmas day with pneumonia. For some time past he had assisted in the store and was well liked by all the employees.

Miss Lillian Wheeler, of the staff of H. E. Wilson, has been confined to her home for several days with a severe cold.

Mrs. William Ringwood, formerly bookkeeper for H. E. Wilson, and now of Pittsburgh, Pa., has been spending the holidays with her parents here.

Hugo Teute, of West Brighton, N. Y., cleaned up the greater part of his stock for Christmas. In fact, everything that was in bloom was sold out two or three days previously. He reports that he has an excellent crop of sweet peas coming on, which will be in flower for Easter, if conditions are favorable.

John Merrill has been kept so busy of late with funeral work and also with the greenhouse work that he was unable to do anything in the holly business this season. He is fortunate to be cutting a good quantity of Romans and Paper

President, F. W. Bolgiano, Washington, D. C.; secretary-treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

EVERY mail this week brings one or two new catalogues.

THE seed selling season has opened strong in the south.

DELIVERIES are being made much earlier than last season. It will simplify filling the early mail orders.

WALTER S. GIBNEY, Greenville, N. C., took out a trade license December 26 to sell garden and flower seeds.

THE Manitowoc Seed Co., Manitowoc, Wis., increased its capital stock December 26 from $150,000 to $300,000.

SEVERAL Holland growers have made, or are making, preparations to grow their gladiolus bulbs in the United States hereafter.

MOST of the 1919 seed catalogues show a smaller number of pages than last year, but it is not noticeable that the seed selling quality of the books is diminished thereby.

SEED prices are not likely to advance to any important extent beyond last season's levels, with lower values at spots in the list, but there seems no possibility of an oversupply in any line.

THE Sloan Seed Co., of Stockton, Cal., has leased 5,000 acres of land in the Natoma tract near Sacramento for seed growing purposes. Clean soil, natural fertility, control of the water supply and a favorable climate were some of the reasons given for selection of the site. Peas and flower seed crops are being planted. These seed crops will be followed by beans and milo maize.

THERE is some anxiety in the seed trade in Nashville, Tenn., on account of the apparent shortage of cow pea and soy bean seed. There was so much drought that the fields were late in maturing and did not set a heavy crop. Then, when the plants were in the shock and in the stack, there was so much rain that losses were heavy. Most of the seed stocks contain so large a proportion of spoiled seed that they are not marketable. As yet the market has not opened up, so it is impossible to tell just how heavy the shortage is, but it is reasonably sure that seeds will be higher in price than last season. As yet the prospect for a heavy crop of turnip and kale seed in this locality next spring is flattering. There is not much aphis and the fields are in excellent condition. The only thing that may make for a short crop is the fact that greens are selling at an unprecedentedly high price and many growers are cutting their fields for market.

THE NIEUW AMSTERDAM IS IN.

The Nieuw Amsterdam, of the Holland-America Line, from Rotterdam, arrived at New York Sunday, January 5, with troops and a cargo consisting largely of nursery stock and bulbs. The quantity of gladiolus bulbs arriving on the steamer indicates that the arrivals of blooming size bulbs will be less than expected.

PLANT PURE PEAS.

The Wisconsin farmers who grow peas for food purposes have used home-saved seed year after year until their seed stocks have deteriorated to the point where, according to the Wisconsin Seed Co., of Milwaukee, the product is so mixed as to have lost value. In a circular letter the seed company says:

Wisconsin dried peas have always brought a premium and found ready sale because of their superior quality. Year after year, however, their quality has been deteriorating, until at the present time we find the stock almost unsalable. Something must be done to remedy this condition. If the farmer does not grow peas suitable for human consumption, he will have a hard time disposing of his crop at any fair value.

We caution the farmer this coming season to sow pure seed, not to keep the seed he has on hand from his last crop, but to buy seed from another locality and hand-pick it, making sure of absolutely the finest stock, so that he will grow a crop of good quality, and that Wisconsin once more can boast of the best quality of dried peas.

Unless this is done and the farmers use care and precaution in growing their crops, the dried peas cannot be used to advantage, because even at the present time the green variety is badly

Burpee's Seeds Grow

Forty years of careful investigation and extensive operation in Seed Growing has giving us an experience as to the needs of the Commercial Grower that is equaled by few American Seedsmen.

Burpee Quality means that the Burpee Service is backed by the most extensive trial grounds in America. Every care is used in the selection of stock seeds and the product is surrounded by every safeguard known to science.

Burpee's Annual

Burpee's Annual is ready for distribution. It contains complete descriptions of all varieties listed, also 24 pages of color. This supplemented by our Market Growers Wholesale Blue List should be on the desk of every grower. If you are entitled to wholesale prices write to us for these books. They will be mailed free upon request. If we can serve you in any capacity write us.

W. ATLEE BURPEE CO.

SEED GROWERS PHILADELPHIA

sprinkled with white and bleached peas, and the white with green peas. This makes the stock unsalable.

This is a serious matter and the farmer should give due thought to it, and every country dealer and farmer should spare no effort to see that Wisconsin grows good quality peas again.

The western states, like Montana and Idaho, are growing large quantities of peas of good quality, and this competition will soon tell and stop the sale of our Wisconsin peas unless we grow proper stock. Let us grow good seed and boost Wisconsin.

Wisconsin seed peas, as marketed by the larger seed houses, continue to be standard for the world.

LONGEVITY OF SEEDS.

I would like to see a list of the different vegetable seeds and the life of each; that is, the length of time they would keep and still germinate, without giving them a test each year. Some seeds will keep for years, while others are of little use after the second year. Any information will be welcome.

C. L. F.—Ohio.

With regard to a printed list which would show the life of different varieties of garden seeds, or, in other words, the length of time they will show germination, careful seedsmen usually decline to furnish any lists of this sort to their customers, because they usually are misleading and apt to cause trouble.

We understand the U. S. Department of Agriculture has issued a pamphlet, showing the approximate time different varieties of garden seeds should germinate under proper conditions and anyone interested might write to the Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., and get this pamphlet. It may give him some information along that line, but there is only one way to know if seeds will germinate or not, and that is to test them.

The larger, careful seedsmen test each and every bag of seed which comes into the store, top, bottom and center, and if the seeds are kept in the store ninety days they test them again. They do not ship any seeds to their customers until they are carefully and thoroughly tested. Some seeds are supposed to retain a good germination for two or three years or more and usually do so, but the same variety under different harvest conditions, or if allowed to become moist or heated in any way, may lose germination rapidly and rules do not hold good, because there are so many atmospheric conditions to which seeds may be subjected that there is only one safe way, which is to test them frequently. Fresh-crop, new seeds sometimes will lose germination within ninety days after they are harvested, while the same variety, again, will hold germination or even show better germination, if they become thoroughly dry, in a year or two.

It is good advice to any seed dealer who wishes to establish a good reputation to tell him to test the seeds when he receives them and, if he keeps them sixty or ninety days, to test them again. Then he will know from time to time just what the germination is. It is the only safe way for either a dealer or planter.

VICTORY SEED FROM A VICTORY GARDEN

Last season we did our bit by increasing the supply of seed of some of the best vegetables that we know. We simply enlarged our home garden from feet to acres, and gave you the benefit of high-grade seed at small cost. From start to finish our personal attention was given to every detail and better seed can not be had. Following is our complete list:

JOHN BAER TOMATO, the finest and earliest tomato on earth. Clean, bright seed from selected fruit, postpaid, ¼ oz., 20c; ½ oz., 30c; oz., 50c; ¼ lb., $1.75; lb., $6.50.

KEENEY'S RUSTLESS WAX, and IMPROVED GOLDEN WAX BEANS, by express, qt., 40c; pk., $3.00.

IMPROVED SOLDIER BEAN, a new old variety, an all-rounder, and the best baking bean in the world. Sturdy, upright bush, very productive, yielding large pods filled with big, white, meaty beans. You will rejoice over a patch of our IMPROVED SOLDIER BEANS. Price, by express, qt., 60c; pk., $4.00.

IMPROVED GIANT GOLDEN BANTAM SWEET CORN, grown and reselected by us for years. Strong grower with heavy yield of big, luscious ears. Price, by express, qt., 40c; pk., $2.50. Large ears, $1.00 doz.

RED COB BANTAM, the sweetest corn known, previously sold only in packets. Price, by express, pint, 60c; qt., $1.00; pk., $6.00. Large ears, $1.50 doz.

Special attention is called to our Soldier Bean and to our two varieties of Sweet Corn. No garden, large or small, should be without these good things. Cash must accompany all orders. When desired will ship by parcel post and C. O. D. the postage.

Every florist should have a vegetable garden. By using good seed success is assured, and by using the varieties here offered you will have the finest there is. Order early and have your supply of seed in hand.

WOOLWORTH BUILDING, NEW YORK CITY

Arthur G. Lee, Fort Smith, Ark.—Twenty-first annual catalogue of seeds, bulbs, vegetable roots, plants, general nursery stock, implements, poultry supplies and other requisites; fifty-six pages, illustrated, and bound in a neat cover. Cotton seed and some other southern specialties are included.

Sonderegger Nurseries & Seed House, Beatrice, Neb.—Thirty-third annual catalogue, freely illustrated; 128 pages and colored cover. The stock offered is comprehensive in all departments—seeds, plants, roots, ornamental and fruit-bearing nursery stock, tools, insecticides and other supplies.

Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia, Pa.—Wholesale spring catalogue, accurately compiled and well illustrated, and offering seeds, bulbs, greenhouse and hardy plants, tools and other equipments for florists; sixty-four large pages and cover. The company "feels reasonably sure" of being able to fill orders "almost as usual," but advises customers to avoid possibility of disappointment by ordering early.

Fancher Creek Nurseries, Fresno, Cal.—"Illustrated Catalogue and Practical Planters' Guide Combined," ninety-six pages, in a tasteful cover. Some idea of the extensiveness of the stock may be gathered from the fact that the business comprises three separate departments—ornamental, general fruit and citrus nurseries—with grounds in three counties, one of them on the far southern coast of the state.

Burnett Bros., New York, N. Y.—A well illustrated, clearly printed catalogue of the various lines of stock usually carried by seedsmen; 100 pages, in a durable and tasteful cover. The department of tools and sundries is especially comprehensive and interesting. Prominence is given to grass seed mixtures for different purposes. Accompanying the catalogue is a large folder containing a list of "novelties for 1919, of interest to all up-to-date gardeners."

Conard & Jones Co., West Grove, Pa.—An attractive, accurate, well illustrated catalogue of roses and other ornamental plants, bulbs, roots, flower seeds, flowering shrubs and fruit-bearing stock. The first twenty-five pages, about half of the entire space, are devoted to the company's specialty, roses. Cannas, another specialty, also are conspicuous in the book. On the cover are pictures of many varieties of roses and cannas in their natural colors.

California Nursery Co., Niles, Cal.—A neat, accurately arranged, well illustrated catalogue of ornamental and fruit-bearing stock, roses and miscellaneous plants. The book provides an opportunity for wide and definite choice, as it not only contains carefully classified lists of such species as are peculiarly suited for California conditions, but also offers many varieties that are adapted for general cultivation. The stock of broad-leaved evergreens is especially comprehensive. Many varieties of nut trees are listed.

Saratoga Springs, N. Y.—Christian Dehn observed that he was "going it all alone," meaning that his good wife had fallen a victim to the "flu." But with her tenacity, it is hoped she will pull through to share the successes, rather than failures, of her genial spouse. "Lots of business and no help makes me feel wicked," observed our worthy confrere.

Greenhouse Tomato IDEAL

Ideal is a new Tomato, the result of a cross of Bonny Best and Comet, and has the productiveness of Bonny Best with the keeping qualities of Comet, making it a perfect shipper.

This Tomato has one quality which no other Tomato we have ever seen has shown; the fruit has set in large clusters every two leaves on nearly all the plants. This makes it very desirable for the grower with low houses or the Carnation grower who wishes to set them among his Carnations and thus add another source to his income during the summer. Seed is saved from the choicest greenhouse-grown fruit.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

THE embargo on the importation of burlap ends February 1.

O. JOE HOWARD, secretary and treasurer of the J. Van Lindley Nursery Co., Pomona, N. C., says, "We had the largest business in our history last year." Fruit stock is scarce with the company, while there is a big demand for it.

THE Holland nurserymen are doing their utmost to ship large quantities of stock to the United States this season, taking advantage of the reopening of navigation and getting in ahead of the quarantine. There are less than five months in which to do business.

THERE was less nursery stock grown in Tennessee this year than for a long time. This applies to ornamentals as well as to fruit trees. As a result prices are practically double, on some items more than double, those of a year ago. The demand has not been up to expectations, so far as we have been able to learn. The public has shown little disposition to plant fruit trees and, as there was little new building on account of the carpenters and builders having been employed in war work, the demand for ornamentals has fallen off correspondingly. The general feeling is that spring will see a reversal of these conditions. In fact, agents already are beginning to report heavy sales for spring delivery.

THE OUTLOOK FOR 1919.

"Business among the farmers has been brisk in this section. There is a shortage of fruit trees, which will, no doubt, become more serious later in the season, and even more serious in 1920," says the Pontiac Nursery Co., Detroit, Mich. "Due to war conditions, we have been unable to get our usual supply of French seedling fruits during the last two years, and we think that many other nurserymen in this section have experienced the same difficulty. For that reason fruit trees are going to be scarce. In addition to this, the labor shortage has caused the curtailment of the planting of large quantities of fruit stock, and this will affect the crop to be offered next season. All in all, it looks like quite a serious condition facing the nurserymen for the next two or three years, and it also looks as though there are going to be lots of buyers for the varieties that are scarce during the next few years.

"Ornamental stock seems to be plentiful on the market, and we are supplied with a complete assortment of ornamentals in large quantities. Our business in this line has been good during the last season, war conditions considered, and it looks as though we would experience a good business from now on, as it is getting better as the money stringency relaxes.

"It seems as though the nurserymen who have stock to sell are going to have good times ahead of them, but with the present shortage of fruit stock, wholesale prices are going to be high, and retail prices, of course, will advance accordingly. We hope that normal conditions are going to benefit the nurserymen in every material way."

Meeting for Retailers.

There will be a special meeting for those nurserymen who sell at retail through agents, in the evening, January 22.

As there will be another convention at the Coates House the same dates, every nurseryman who intends to be present is urged to reserve his room as quickly as possible, to avoid disappointment.

The officers of the association are: President, W. C. Reed, Vincennes, Ind.; vice-president, Earl D. Needham, Des Moines, Ia.; secretary-treasurer, George W. Holsinger, Rosedale, Kan.; executive committee, H. D. Simpson, Vincennes, Ind., P. C. Stark, Louisiana, Mo., A. E. Willis, Ottawa, Kan., Charles C. Sonderegger, Beatrice, Neb., and George H. Johnston, Kansas City, Mo.

THE SEASON IN NEBRASKA.

"Business has been good with us this fall; especially was this the case in our tree and plant department," reports the Sonderegger Nurseries & Seed House, Beatrice, Neb. "Fruit trees and berries were in better demand than ornamental stock. For the seed trade, the fall rains came a little late.

"We have no agents, but sell entirely by catalogue, so we have no way of judging how spring sales will open up until our catalogues are all out. We are mailing them as fast as we can now.

"During the last two months, good, heavy rains have fallen from Colorado to the gulf and this will be a great help in selling our products. With all nursery stock not so plentiful as in former years, we believe we will sell out pretty clear before the spring season closes."

PROTEST

Horticultural Import Prohibition

You are, of course, familiar with the recent ruling of the Federal Horticultural Board, at Washington, which prohibits, after June 1, 1919, the importation of all plants and bulbs, in which the nursery, seed and florists' trades are interested, excepting the following few items: Lily bulbs, lily of the valley, hyacinths, tulips, narcissi and crocus—absolutely nothing else in the line of bulbs can be imported from any foreign country.

In the line of plants you may bring in fruit-tree stocks, seedlings, cuttings and scions of fruit trees, and you may import Manetti, multiflora and rugosa rose stocks for budding or grafting, but absolutely nothing else in the way of plants.

Do you realize how radical and far-reaching this embargo is, and how seriously it will affect, not only every importer, but every individual in the trade who handles bulbs, plants or cut flowers; from the largest importer down to the smallest grower, florist or dealer?

There will be no azaleas, rhododendrons, spiræas, araucarias, dracænas or boxwoods. Orchids will only be a memory, and there will be missing in our stores and in our gardens hundreds of other varieties of plants and cut flowers for which, heretofore, we have depended upon European sources and which were profitable for the American grower to develop, and were a source of revenue to the retailer.

Many of these subjects will never be produced in this country and such that, after years of preparation, may become developed here will necessarily have to be sold at a price which will make them prohibitive to the average present purchaser of this class of stock.

One of the peculiar points in this ruling of the Federal Horticultural Board, which we are unable to harmonize with the board's effort to prevent the risk of importing dangerous pests, is the fact that they consider it safe to import Manetti, multiflora and rugosa roses for budding and grafting purposes, but do not consider it safe to let these same roses come in with named varieties, such as Killarney, Ophelia, Radiance or other sorts, grafted or budded upon them. The root of the Manetti, the multiflora or the rugosa remains the same, but the top will be that of the named variety, i. e., Killarney, Ophelia, Radiance or whatever the variety may be, and it is absolutely impossible for an insect to be imported on the one and not on the other. So, why should these rose stocks be permitted to come in (in which only a few growers who graft or bud roses are interested or benefited) and the named varieties, in which practically everyone who grows and sells plants is interested, be excluded?

Furthermore, if it is safe to import a lily bulb, a lily of the valley, a hyacinth, tulip, narcissus or crocus, what infestation affects the hundreds of other bulbs that are excluded which justifies the board to say: "You are not to bring in a dahlia, tuberous-rooted begonia, gloxinia, gladiolus, Spanish iris, oxalis, scilla, snowdrop, crown imperial or other equally harmless bulb?"

There have been two meetings of the Federal Horticultural Board, at Washington, D. C., during the last six months, one of them on May 28, the other on October 18, to which all interested in this subject were invited to be present and to offer protests, if any. At both meetings the Nurserymen's Association, as well as the legislative committee of the Society of American Florists, and a number of individual growers were present, all of whom gave valuable data for the proper enlightenment of said Federal Horticultural Board. They were most cordially received, attentively and patiently listened to—even thanked—for the information given, but that is all.

Why all this information which was given in good faith has been turned down, the Federal Horticultural Board does not tell us; they simply say: "After June 1, 1919, you cannot import anything but the few items in bulbs, fruit-tree stocks and roses for grafting purposes noted above."

Whether the action taken by the Federal Horticultural Board is in accordance with the law as enacted by Congress, which created their power, we do not feel competent to pass upon, but we are satisfied, however, and confident that it was not intended as the spirit of this act, that the policies and destinies of the entire horticultural trade, with its millions of dollars of investment, should be placed in the hands of five members of the Department of Agriculture.

Your congressman has the means of finding this out, and if you will appeal to him for aid in the matter we are certain that he will investigate and see to it that such power, if it exists, is changed so that the horticultural trade will be placed in the high position to which it is entitled.

Finally: For more than four years our country has cheerfully assisted and helped to keep a great portion of the Belgian population from starving; this embraces the great plant-growing districts around Ghent and Bruges, where, before the war, upwards of one thousand nurseries were operated, a large part of whose products was exported to the United States. We have sent our kin and friends to bleed on the battlefields of devastated Belgium to help to return these people to freedom, and, now that this has been accomplished and they are preparing to take up their customary vocations in anticipation of supporting themselves as they have always bountifully done before, and they come to us and offer us their horticultural specialties, as they did before the war, the majority of which we cannot procure elsewhere or which we cannot produce ourselves, we will have to hold our hands up in horror and say:

"While we have cheerfully helped to feed and clothe you, and while our soldiers have died on the battlefield to give you your freedom, we cannot buy your azaleas, bay trees, Norfolk Island pines, rhododendrons, palms, your begonias, gloxinias and other specialties (as badly as we need them) because there is a Federal Horticultural Board of five men in Washington who, while they have no record that you have in the past sent us any insect pests that have been dangerous to our country, fear that there may be such pests hidden away in your country and that these might, in leaf or soil, escape the rigid examination which your entomologists give them before you ship them, and that they might even escape the careful examination which our State and Federal Departments give them on their arrival here, and thus become a serious menace. While you continue to have our sympathy, we cannot think of purchasing your horticultural products!"

Think it over, and if you want to assist to place horticulture in its proper position, write to your congressman at once. He will stand by what is right if you submit the facts properly to him.

The Market.

New Year's business was better than last year, owing to the large number of social events and watch parties, for which many flowers were used. A large number of corsage bouquets were worn by the ladies. Funeral work is not so heavy as it was, owing to a decrease in the number of deaths from influenza.

The recent Soldiers' and Sailors' ball at the Colosseum was well attended and a large number of corsage bouquets were made for this event.

The weather is cold, with little snow and not much sunshine. The temperature fell to 5 degrees above zero January 3. Last month was the warmest December for more than twenty years. The rainfall was 5.83 inches.

Various Notes.

The William Blackman Floral Co. reports a large business for the holidays. This firm enjoyed a fine demand for corsage bouquets for New Year's and the Soldiers' and Sailors' ball.

George Blackman gave his annual banquet at the store to his employees, his family and relatives January 3, it being his fifty-sixth birthday. This is the fifteenth year that he has observed his birthday in this manner.

C. L. Niednagel is off crop on roses, as he had a full crop for Christmas. He is cutting some good sweet peas.

Julius Niednagel & Sons are having a great deal of funeral work. They are cutting quantities of carnations.

Karl Zeidler reports a good business in funeral work. He is preparing for a heavy spring business.

Mrs. J. C. Elspermann is using all the flowers she can get, as business is still heavy.

Royston & Fenton did four times the business in December that they did that month last year, while the first four days of January nearly equaled the volume of business for January, 1918. They already have received orders for coleus from florists who did not order till March and April last year.

The Florists' Club has not met since last June. It is time we should get together again. E. L. F.

Greenhouse Heating

Subscribers are invited to write the Editor of this Department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. But please do not ask The Review to make a choice of apparatus for you. The greenhouse heating equipment advertised in this paper is, we believe, the best for the trade to buy, and each article the best in the special field of its adaptation.

SLUGGISH CIRCULATION.

Please give me a little enlightenment on my heating system, as the circulation is far from satisfactory. The main boiler is a Moninger No. 927, rated for 9,000 square feet of glass at 50 degrees in zero weather. The fire pot is 32x51 inches and the grate surface is 27x51 inches. Only two of my greenhouses, one of them 25x125 and the other 20x70, are attached to this boiler. In both of these houses I want a temperature of 50 degrees, but I do not succeed in heating the returns sufficiently. The boiler carries a 14-inch smoke pipe. The chimney is of brick construction. It is nineteen inches square and thirty-five feet high, and there are no buildings within fifty feet except a small stable.

The lower three feet of the walls of both houses are concrete, with two and one-half feet of glass on the sides. The houses are even-span and are fourteen feet and twelve feet high to the ridge, respectively. They are well glazed. A hot water heating system is used, with an automatic expansion tank, five feet above the highest pipe. A Honeywell generator is attached. The house 20x70 has one 3-inch feed, directly from the boiler, with five 2-inch returns, ten 1¼-inch returns and a 2½-inch main return. Are the feed and return pipes large enough? The house 25x125 has two 2½-inch feeds, twelve 2-inch returns and two 2½-inch main returns. The boiler has four 4-inch outlets and four 4-inch openings for returns. A rough sketch is enclosed. A. T. V.—Pa.

So far as can be judged from the description given, the boiler, smoke pipe and stack are of ample size and the radiation should be ample to give the temperature desired without using the Honeywell generator, which, however, we are confident has nothing to do with the failure to secure a good return. On the other hand, it should be helpful.

The amount of radiation in the houses also appears to be ample; in fact, somewhat less should answer. We are not quite sure just how the radiation is arranged, but would prefer to have the return main from the smaller house of the same size as the flow pipe. While the returns, as indicated by the sketch, are well above the boiler, and the generator also should aid in securing a good circulation in the smaller house, we prefer to use pipes larger than 1¼-inch for houses more than fifty feet in length.

Our suggestion for the house 20x70 feet would be to use 3-inch pipes for the main flow and return. Then run a 2½-inch flow pipe along each plate or just below the purlins and connect each of these pipes with four 2-inch returns. In the house 25x125 feet we would use three 2½-inch flow pipes, placing one under the ridge and one on each plate,

Cast Iron Cannot Be Compared With Kroeschell.

We bought a No. 2 Boiler in 1904. It takes care of 5,000 sq. ft. of glass, and we could add 2,000 more. We are very well satisfied. We used a cast iron boiler before we had yours. It cannot be compared with the Kroeschell Boiler. Your boiler has certainly a great capacity for heating water.

—— ——, Canada.

Cast Iron Boiler Cracked in Two Years.

We have a No. 4 Kroeschell Boiler. It takes care of 7,000 sq. ft. of glass; it would take care of twice that amount.

I first had a new cast iron boiler, which lasted two years, when it cracked to pieces. The second was a second-hand boiler.

I consider your boiler the best paying investment ever made.

Kroeschell Versus Cast Iron.

The No. 7 Boiler I bought from you is heating 14,000 sq. ft. of glass; I think it can take care of 16,000 sq. ft. I do not have any trouble to keep up temperature of 50° in the coldest weather. I fire only once after 12 o'clock midnight. The boiler has given perfect satisfaction. I have four cast iron boilers—like the Kroeschell best of all. If anyone wishes to inquire about your boiler, let them write me, for I think your boilers are good ones.

MADISON, N. J.

The larger growers of this vicinity, including Louis Noe, Lincoln Pierson and L. B. Coddington, of New Providence, N. J., are all propagating the rose Columbia heavily and buying freely of Premier. Coal of good quality is arriving and there is plenty of No. 1 buckwheat. Labor conditions also are improving, so that altogether trade prospects are looking up.

Anthony Ruzicka, grower of roses and callas, has purchased the greenhouses of Samuel Lum, in Chatham, from the Madison Trust Co., which recently bid in at auction this property, which comprises sixteen acres of land and 50,000 feet of glass. Mr. Ruzicka already operates the large range known as Villa Lorraine Greenhouses, on the Stemmler estate, Central avenue, under a lease. He will conduct both ranges, starting activities in the Chatham houses in April. He will grow roses principally, which have been his specialty for twenty years. The Chatham range is admirably adapted to the growing of roses, Mr. Ruzicka believes. A. R.

BUFFALO, N. Y.

The market continues short of stock. Cut flowers of all kinds are bringing stiff prices. Some of the prices are actually unreasonable. For instance, carnations, splits with 4 to 6-inch stems, sell at $8 per hundred. Paper Whites are coming in and demand $6 per hundred, the supply being only sufficient to furnish a bunch or two to a buyer. Roses are off crop. Not nearly enough are coming in to satisfy the demand and most of the arrivals are classed as specials. One must indeed be resourceful to make anything on funeral work. Some sweet peas are to be had. They are of medium grade, but demand $3 per hundred. The retailers all have been praying for an early spring, so that they may stop worrying about stock.

S. A. Anderson took charge of the county treasurer's office January 1. Many of his friends sent flowers and congratulations. F. P. A.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

The Market.

Market conditions eased up immediately after Christmas and New Year's trade was much the same as in other years.

With the lessening of the influenza epidemic, the demand for flowers has so decreased that the supply is plentiful at fairly good prices. Carnations have taken the greatest drop in price. Plenty of good cyclamens are available, also primroses, which missed Christmas.

A few chrysanthemums are still arriving. Violets are scarce, but they are ample to meet the limited demand. Few sweet peas are seen and freesia is scarce. Narcissi and stevia are used largely for bouquets. There are practically no lilies to be had. Greens are scarce.

Various Notes.

The Hartnett Flower Shop was burned out again January 3, the second time in the last four years. When notified of the fire by Henry Smith, Miss Hartnett, the proprietor, was able to save only the books. The fixtures, etc., fell through to the basement when the floor gave way.

The Crescent Avenue Floral Co. reports a heavy crop of carnations of fine quality.

The Florists' Club meeting held at the store of Freyling & Mendel January 3 was poorly attended and only routine business was transacted. A full attendance was expected at the meeting January 7, at which a paper on "The Culture of Cyclamens" was read by F. Hoekstra, of the Wealthy Avenue Floral Co.

Mastica is elastic and tenacious, admits of expansion and contraction. Putty becomes hard and brittle. Broken glass more easily removed without breaking of other glass as occurs with hard putty.

What Is a Standard Section? Who Makes It Standard?

Ask any ten growers their opinion of the right width house and best arrangement of walks and benches, and six of them will come pretty close to agreeing. The other four will have very strong convictions that the other six are dead wrong.

Based on what the six think, we went to work to design Standard Houses combining in their manufacture stock sizes and shapes, and in a manner to eliminate all waste. Then we bought the material in large quantities, manufactured it and put it in our warehouses. Thus we have several widths of houses standardized; the length is only a question of more or less standard parts. Standard drawings, standard parts enable us to manufacture in quantities and sell these standard houses at lowest prices and insure a quick delivery.

These sections are in widths from 40 up to 79 feet. Each one works out to the greatest economy.

They are all shown in our Handy Hand Book. Each section is accompanied by a good big interior of a house built that way.

With this book before you, it's almost as good as seeing the actual houses. Mayhap it's even better, for you don't have to ask any questions, as each question is already answered before you ask it.

Send for this Handy Hand Book. Study out your house, then let us get together and talk it over.

A wise business man figures costs by the year, right down the line, and especially so if his business has to do with greenhouses. He knows, either by experience or from a close study of the subject, that the only businesslike method of determining material costs in greenhouse building is by the year—first cost and up-keep cost.

CYPRESS, "the wood eternal" for greenhouse construction, is positively the cheapest wood to use, figured by its years on the job, without repairs or replacements.

All good constructors in these days are insisting on genuine "Tide-Water" Cypress, "The Wood Eternal"—every board and bundle bearing the famous Cypress Trade-mark.

Vol. 3, CYPRESS Pocket Library, is a little book filled with a big bunch of facts and figures about greenhouse construction—profitable reading. There are 43 books in the "Library," all of which give useful facts and plans about HOW, WHEN and WHERE to use CYPRESS, "The Wood Eternal," AND WHY. Which one shall we send you?

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

A banner Christmas business was followed by an equally good trade for New Year's. The demand for funeral work has been so great as to set the law of supply and demand askew. Prices, which ruled abnormally high at Christmas, have maintained an inflation that gives slight indication of early reductions. The influenza epidemic has broken out again in Providence. While it is of a milder form than in September and October, the number of deaths is sufficiently above the normal rate to be materially felt in the flower market.

Various Notes.

Samuel Resnick, with J. E. Koppelman & Co., is convalescing from an attack of grip.

James Warren, Jr., superintendent of the North Burial Grounds, was elected a member of the executive committee of the Providence Central Club at the annual meeting January 4.

Fred C. Green, superintendent of parks of this city, is recovering from a recent severe attack of influenza.

The house of Charles C. Bliss, at Matunuck, was broken into a few days ago during the absence of the family and money and jewelry stolen.

Smith's Flower Shop, Westerly, made a specialty of narcissus boxes for the holidays, with much success.

Charles Hunt, Burnside street, has been confined to the house several days with influenza.

The greenhouses, contents and other property of the late Walter S. Sword, Clark's lane, Cumberland, have been sold to his son, Walter J. Sword, who will continue the business.

C. D. Potter is having an addition built to one of his greenhouses on Elmwood avenue, Cranston.

Daniel F. Nolan, son of Elizabeth and the late Michael Nolan, died at his home in Norwood December 31 of pneumonia, from which he had been ill ten days, at the age of twenty-six years. After graduating from the Norwood grammar school he engaged in the growing of garden plants for setting out and had recently added a number of benches of carnations, with the intention of developing that branch.

The Flower Growers' Association store, in the Crown hotel, had a big run on violets and American Beauty roses for New Year's. W. H. M.

PLEASE discontinue my verbena ad, as I am sold out. Could have sold thousands more if I had had them.—C. A. Anderson, Tionesta, Pa.

AMERICAN BULB CO.,

Prince of Wales is destined to be the best florist's cut flower gladiolus ever known. Color a clear, gorgeous, glistening salmon, melting to throat of the sweetest yellow. The Ophelia Rose of the gladiolus world. Extremely early (just after Pink Beauty), large flowered on tall, strong spike and grand multiplier. Every spike a bouquet. Certificate of Merit at Haarlem, Holland. Excellent forcer, weeks ahead of America. I believe that I have the largest TRUE stock in America and offer strong, flowering bulbs for propagating (grown under Skinner irrigation and disbudded), 4 for 50c, $1.50 per doz., $10.00 per 100. Get stock of this great variety now. I doubt if there will be a bulb on the market in two months. Raymond M. Champe, Walled Lake, Oakland County, Mich.

W. E. Kirchoff, Jr., wishes to announce that he has been discharged from the U. S. Army and is in a position to give all orders for gladioli his personal attention. Gladiolus: Mrs. Watt has been grown from Massachusetts to California, and has made good with every florist who has given it a trial. Resembling the American Beauty rose in color, but more brilliant, it will occupy the same place among gladioli as does the American Beauty among roses. Unexcelled for forcing, and because of its distinctive beautiful shade and strong upright growth, it meets the need of every florist.

Reconstruction!

—it's the word of the hour

All over Europe—all over America—in every field of activity—the real men, the big men, the twelve-cylinder DOERS of the commercial world have thrown their high-power think-gears into top speed and are concentrating their best energies on the work of reconstruction.

You'll want to build new houses, of course; that goes without saying, but—the chances are you'll find it profitable, on looking about, to reconstruct your present range—to replace those sagging roof bars—to put in some new side sash bars and gable bars—to install a new ventilating system and generally bring the place up to the highest point of efficiency possible, that it may kind o' match those new houses you're going to build.

But you won't wait until the last minute and then go at it blindly.

You'll profit by past experience and your own keen observations and —get your figures on what you need now.

—we have them ready—where'll we send them?

The Most For Your Money

Give the above cut a little more than a passing glance.

Notice how evenly balanced the supporting on the inside is.

Benches and walks come out nicely so that additional houses may be added without disturbing the first one.

Actual figures arrived at by calculating every item from glass to nails show that in this width house you get the most ground space covered for the money expended.

It is a strong, yet light and airy house. You can grow prize-winning stock with a minimum of care.

Now is the time to have us estimate the cost of such a house for you. Just drop us a line and we will send an estimate.

Less Flowers and More Ribbon

In these days of high priced flowers, it is real economy to use ribbon lavishly. Many designs with a few flowers tastefully arranged with a large bow of inexpensive ribbon will give greater satisfaction than when many expensive flowers are used in the design.

Progressive Florists realize that in these days of heavy retail overhead something must be done to counterbalance the high cost of flowers.

A large, attractive ribbon bow can be made up by you in a medium grade of ribbon at a cost not exceeding 75 cents. Width of the ribbon, 5 inches. Higher grade ribbon in proportion.

You Florists who still believe in economizing on ribbon, take notice. AT YOUR SERVICE.

EASTER LILIES FROM COLD STORAGE BULBS

Are any of your benches empty? Then why not fill some of the vacant space with cold storage giganteum bulbs? If you act promptly, a fair proportion of the lilies may be in bloom for Easter, since cold storage bulbs give quick results and Easter this year is late.

NOT NEARLY enough lilies to go around—that is the prospect for Easter. In fact, one shrewd observer has made the estimate, based on the ratio of the country's population to the probable number of bulbs available for Easter purposes, that there will not be as many as one lily plant for each hundred people. Considering, then, that almost every fairly intelligent and well-to-do family will wish to purchase at least one pot of Easter lilies, it seems reasonably certain that there will be an insistent demand for every lily that will reach the market. That is not prophecy—Heaven forbid!—but just a little application of hearsay figures. In spite of the adage to the contrary, figures often lie outrageously. In this case the figures do not lie, not intentionally at any rate, but they are far from infallible.

The Only Recourse.

The scarcity of the bulbs in question, as most florists know, is due principally to the action taken by the United States government last April, in placing an embargo on certain imports, including Japanese Lilium giganteum bulbs. The armistice which ended the war was signed November 11, but the government order removing the restrictions on imports did not take effect until the close of the year, as reported in The Review of December 26, and was too late, therefore, to permit the securing of the needed quantity of fresh giganteum bulbs for the Easter crop. Consequently, the limited supply of quick-acting cold storage bulbs was the only recourse. The stocks of large-sized storage bulbs, the 9 to 10's, were quickly exhausted, but several dealers recently have been offering the 7 to 9's. It is likely, however, that this size, too, will soon disappear from the market.

No one would claim, of course, that the cold storage bulbs possess every desirable quality. They lack the vigor of newly imported bulbs and do not produce so many flowers. But they are true "friends in need" when the fresh bulbs are unprocurable and are a veritable boon in such an emergency as exists at present, when quickness of growth is the chief desideratum. Lilies from cold storage bulbs will be much better than none.

As to starting the cold storage bulbs now and having the majority of the plants in flower for Easter, the present writer, like seedsmen and some others, wishes to display a conspicuous and positive non-warranty. The circumstances that determine the fate of the plants are largely under the control of the grower, but even the grower cannot regulate the weather. He cannot roll back the hovering clouds or govern the direction of the winds.

Facts in the Grower's Favor.

However, the facts and probabilities are mostly in the grower's favor and the chief fact in his favor is the lateness of this year's Easter; it does not arrive till April 20. And the added time in April is particularly helpful, on account of the increasing sunshine and warmth. "A week of March weather," says a noted grower, "is equal to a fortnight in February." If that is correct, what is the relative value of two or three weeks of April weather?

The cold storage bulbs may be placed in a temperature of 60 degrees immediately after being potted and may be grown continuously in such an atmosphere, or even in as high a temperature as 65 degrees at night, until the flowers have begun to open.

THANK YOU!

One of the most pleasant of the many interesting features of publishing The Review has to do with the invaluable assistance rendered by its readers. For many years the steady growth of the paper, particularly in circulation, has come principally through well-pleased readers recommending it to others to whom it should prove equally helpful. This assistance will be especially valuable now that the trade is about to enter another period of rapid expansion and will be thoroughly appreciated.

Giganteums Grown from Cold Storage Bulbs, by the Crescent Street Floral Co., Grand Rapids, Mich.

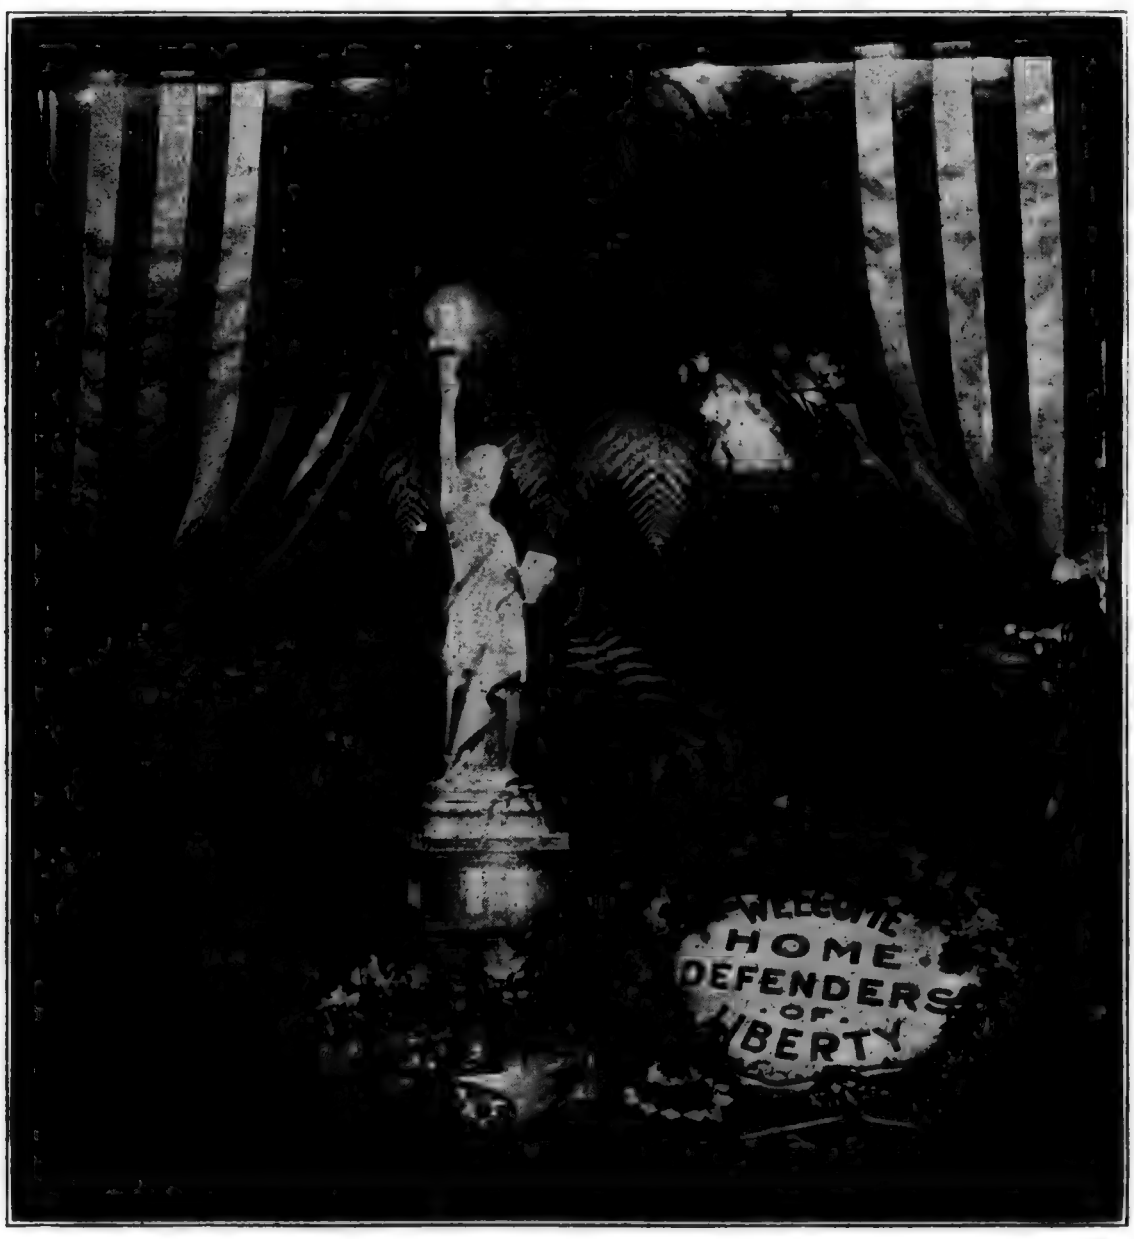
Do Your Own Figuring.

It is stated that under such treatment, in late winter and early spring, the bulbs can be flowered in twelve weeks or even in less time. Do your own figuring, then, and decide for yourself whether you wish to undertake the forcing of a lily crop for Easter.

Probably you will have to pay a little more than formerly for the bulbs; the increased cost is a logical and inevitable result of recent conditions. But you can charge proportionately for the finished product. Both the trade and the public are becoming accustomed to the soaring prices.

Of course, any lilies that are left unsold at Easter need not be numbered among the losses. They need not go to waste. They may be used in design work or disposed of in some other fairly profitable way, but are not likely to bring anything like the Easter prices.

A Grand Rapids Lily Grower.



The illustration on the preceding page shows a stock of giganteums that were grown for last Thanksgiving, from cold storage bulbs, by the Crescent Street Floral Co., of Grand Rapids, Mich. John Kunst, the proprietor, says that the bulbs, which were 9 to 10-inch, were planted August 15 and the photograph was taken the day before Thanksgiving. He prefers the 9 to 10-inch bulbs when he can get them, as they bear, he says, from three to five and occasionally even eight flowers, a record which the 7 to 9's could not be expected to equal, even at the same earlier date. "In preparing the compost," says Mr. Kunst, "I used two 4-inch potfuls of bone flour to a bushel of soil; also two 6-inch potfuls of rotted and pulverized cow manure to a bushel of soil, and mixed them well. I placed them in 6-inch pots and set them on a bench in a temperature of 60 degrees."

Mr. Kunst states that he also is growing 4,000 cold storage giganteums for Easter. As he started them early, there is no need of his hurrying them. He says he is "just growing them along easily" and will have plenty of time to harden them in a lower temperature after they begin to bloom.

Rules and Exceptions.

Growers are aware that the somewhat hurried forcing of crops, as in the present juncture, is not subject to the same rules as is the ordinary, more leisurely culture. The skillful grower will modify his usual methods to suit the special occasion. For instance, he has been accustomed to grow his lilies in shade, at least for a time, in order to lengthen the stalks. But in this case he may let rather less shade suffice, reasoning that short-stemmed flowers will be better than none. He may also be obliged to shorten or moderate the hardening process which immediately precedes the marketing of the stock.

All rules, especially cultural rules, have exceptions, and the exceptions sometimes are more important than the rules. The grower knows that in this instance he cannot produce his best grade of stock, his crackerjacks, but that he must be contented with passably good results.

THE RETAIL FLORIST

LINCOLN'S RECORD.

One of the most interesting subjects the trade has found in years is the exchange of orders between retail florists; the publication of figures has awakened many a florist to a realization that the transfer order department is of real importance, so important, indeed, that even the largest and busiest florists cannot afford to overlook it, and so important to the small man that he must consider it or see his competitor go far ahead.

In last week's Review it was reported that Max Schling sent out in December 667 orders, amounting to $5,482.50. This is the record of one of the largest retailers in the country's largest city and Frey & Frey, Lincoln, Neb., supply a report which will be of even greater interest to the rank and file of the trade in the smaller cities. Lincoln has a population of 60,000. Frey & Frey are only one of several florists who get the orders for delivery there. But in December Frey & Frey had incoming orders from other florists which amounted to $554.25. The orders came from fifty-two other cities!

This shows incoming business for this one store in a small inland city amounting to about $20 per day on the average.

HELP YOURSELF.

Each retail florist's 1919 St. Valentine's day business will be in proportion to the effort he makes, but there is another thought which justifies extra effort. It is this: While many flowers are used for valentines, the custom of sending flowers this day is not as general as it should be. Still, flowers are better suited than anything else to express the sentiments of the day and persons who once use flowers keep it up; they never find anything they like so well to send. Consequently, one builds permanent trade when one pushes St. Valentine's day.

The taking of St. Valentine's day orders need not be a matter of the last day or two only. It is especially a man's day. Suppose one begins now and asks every man customer: "Would you like to leave an order for some corsage bouquets or other flowers to be delivered on St. Valentine's day?" If that question is put to every man, or nearly every man, who enters a flower store anywhere in the United States during the three or four weeks before February 14, who can doubt what the result will be? Suppose we all keep it up three or four years; don't you think it will make

St. Valentine's day one of our most important flower days?

ST. VALENTINE'S STICKERS.

The Chicago Florists' Club offers for sale a limited quantity of heart-shaped stamps for advertising St. Valentine's day, the same as issued a year ago. Following are the special prices:

500 stamps.....$2.00
1,000 stamps..... 3.00

First come, first served. Send all orders and remittances to F. Lautenschlager, 444 West Erie street, Chicago. Make all checks payable to Otto H. Amling, treasurer, Chicago Florists' Club.

EASY ORDERS.

A great many florists, including some of the best, do absolutely nothing to create business; beyond filling each order to the best of their ability, they let further business take care of itself. But who ever received a parcel or a bill from a department store without finding in it some neatly printed little reminder of the store's other services?

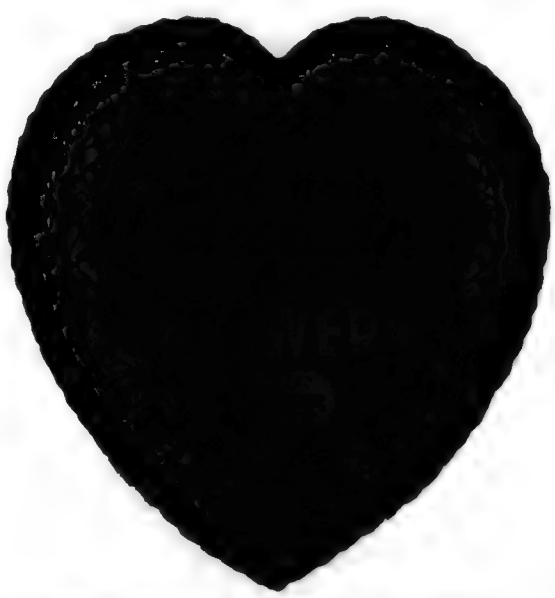
How many parcels, not counting funeral flowers, may be expected to go out of your store in the next three weeks? How many bills or statements go out February 1? Get that many cards, and a few extra, printed by your nearby printer. Use the following text, revised to suit:

VALENTINES.

Flowers have been well described as "messengers of sentiment." They convey in just the nicest way thoughts the average person finds it difficult to put in words.

By sending flowers grown-ups get the pleasure children find in "valentines."

[Your name and company] will deliver, February 14, a corsage bouquet, a box of flowers, or a pretty plant to any address you leave with them now—all at small cost.



By the system of correspondent florists throughout the United States it is easy to reach the old home or the friend who is traveling. Ask about it today.

"SAY IT WITH FLOWERS."

By beginning at once a nice lot of orders can be accumulated to be filled February 14.

A KANSAS FLOWER SHOP.

When the plan of remodeling Smith's Flower Shop, at Hutchinson, Kan., first was considered, it seemed to Harry L. Smith, proprietor, much like a gamble to take this step, in view of war conditions, the labor shortage, fuel restrictions and the thousand and one difficulties the trade was facing, with a problematic winter season not far off. But Mr. Smith is an optimist and the work was begun in the early fall and carried forward to a consummation which justifies the venture. The plans were executed under the personal supervision of the store manager, Glenn M. Felt, formerly of the Stuppy Floral Co., St. Joseph, Mo. Mr. Felt learned the trade on the Pacific coast and the treatment of the interior of the store is suggestive of the method of the Golden State, with its lattice partition, willow furniture and tapestry hangings in soft colors. The display room is finished in ivory and gray and furnished an admirable setting for the annual fall flower show of this concern, which was staged October 10, when the public was welcomed to its new home. Since that time everyone connected with the establishment has been exceedingly busy and several new assistants have been added to the force.

The practical was not lost sight of in the process of converting the quarters of this concern into a model flower shop. Back of the lattice are the offices, a dust-proof basket room, a workroom equipped with work tables, storage for surplus stock, ribbon cases, box racks, and all the paraphernalia that go to make up the florists' equipment.

A GOOD CUSTOMER.

The following is from a newspaper published at Harrisburg, Pa.:

"Florists declare that the $6 a dozen increase in the price of American Beauty roses is due to the fact that Charles M. Schwab purchased 100 dozen of the roses and cornered the market. Harrisburg florists are demanding from $15 to $25 a dozen for American Beauties. Mr. Schwab, they say, bought 1,200 roses and sent them to the families of Bethlehem Steel officials at Bethlehem, Steelton and Sparrows Point, and also to families of officials of the Emergency Fleet Corporation."

Fredonia, Kan.—Loyd C. Bunch says that, in spite of the war, 1918 was his best year so far, but he expects 1919 to be still better.

Fifty blooms, any variety, white.	$8.00	$4.00	$3.00
Fifty blooms, any variety, light pink, as light or lighter than Winsor	8.00	4.00	3.00
Fifty blooms, any variety, dark pink, darker than Winsor	8.00	4.00	3.00
Fifty blooms, any variety, red	8.00	4.00	3.00
Fifty blooms, any other color	8.00	4.00	3.00

Please bear in mind that entries for all classes except the above should be in the hands of the secretary not later than January 19. This date falling on Sunday, all entries in the mail of January 20 will be accepted as having been made within the time limit. After January 20, $2 will be assessed against each class in which entry is made.

Entries are especially desired from growers in the middle west. For several years the growers in this section have failed to hold up their end, leaving the making of the exhibition largely to the growers from the far east. Cleveland is centrally located and easily reached from all directions; therefore there is no reason why we should not have entries from all directions. COME and bring an exhibit with you.

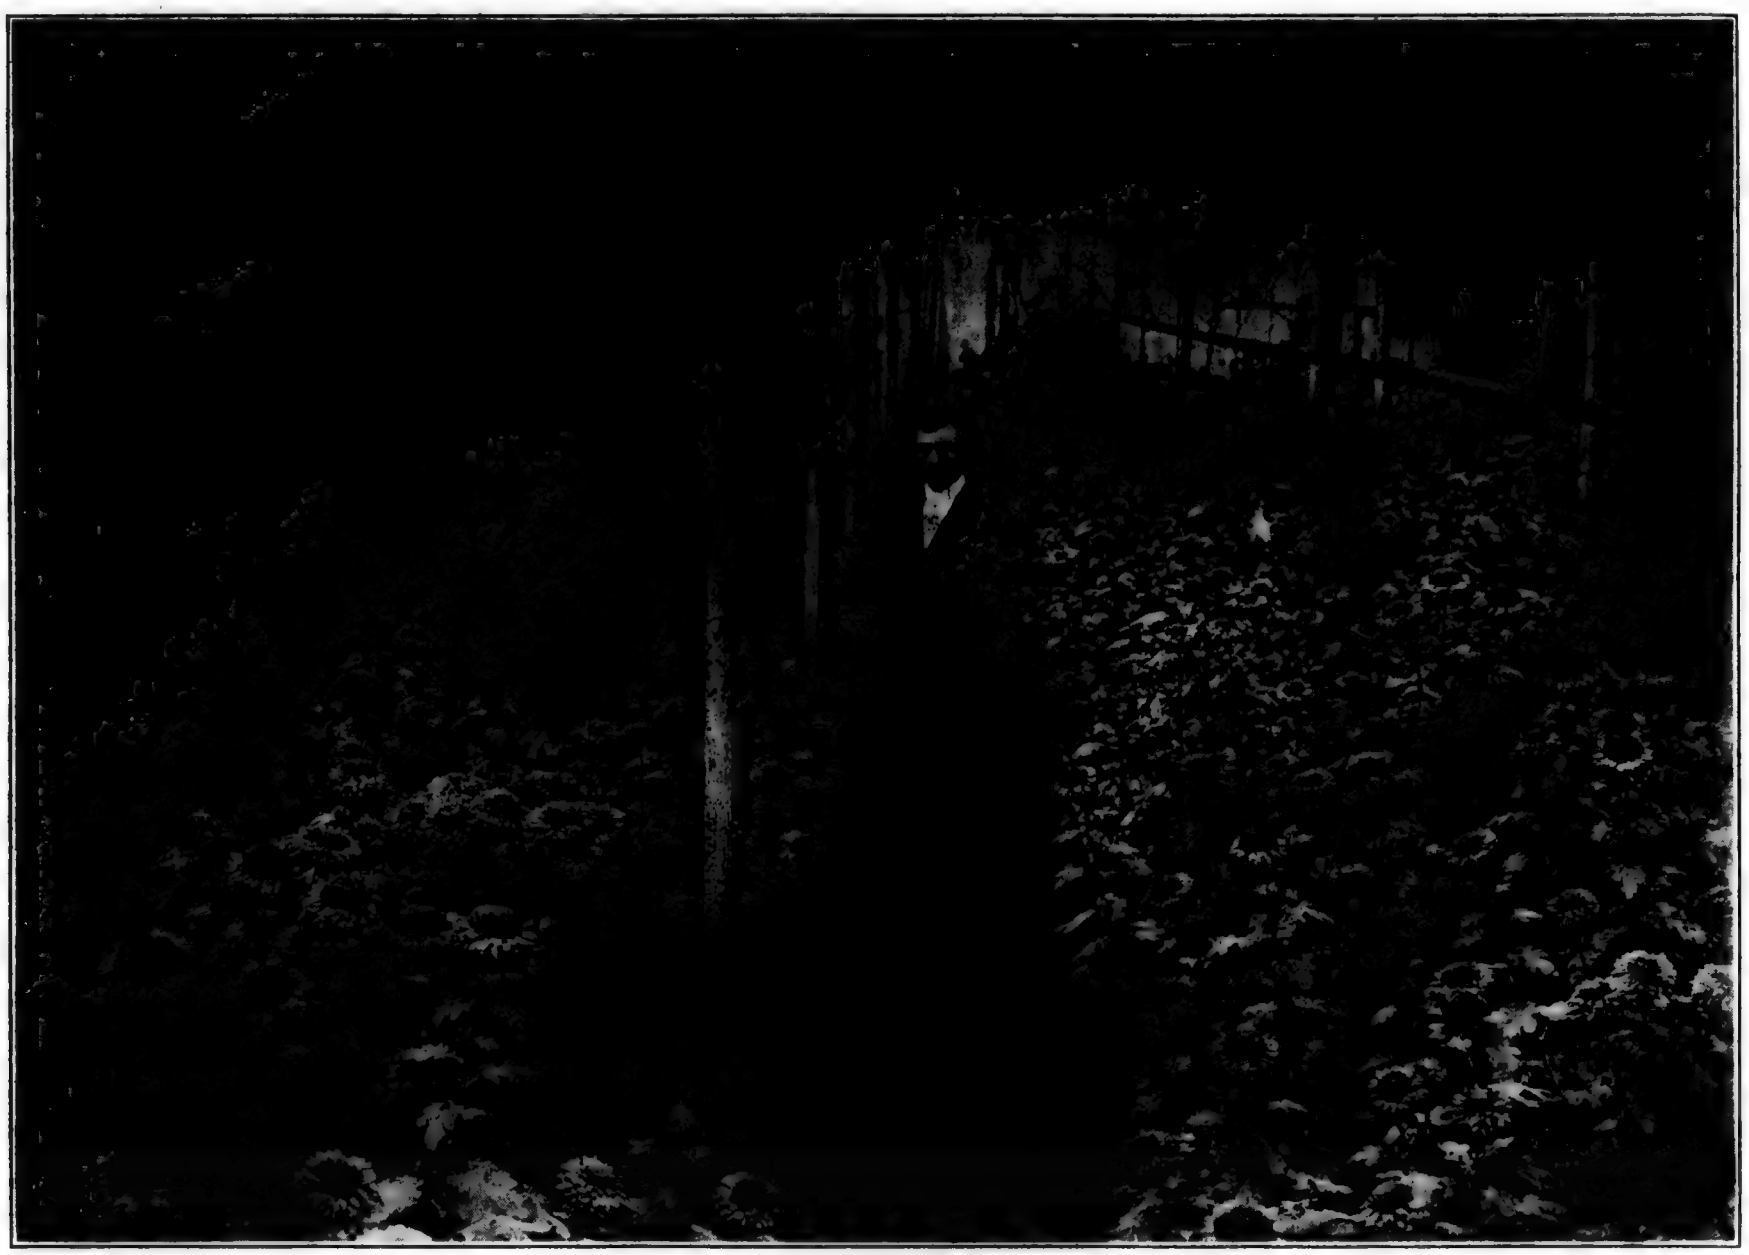
PRACTICAL PATRIOTISM.

Bay trees are not representative American stock. If the plant quarantine continues in effect for five years, bay trees will become a curiosity in the course of time in the United States. Our soldiers fought to establish democracy. Let us have some expression of it in the trade. Let us work up our native plants, or plants that have been naturalized at least, and invent a trade-mark, "Grown in the U. S. A."

We should use our own arbor-vitæ, magnolias or other native trees instead of bay trees, in landscape work and give the preference to the stock that represents our country that our soldiers fought for.



Harry Dubois.

TROUBLES OF TRANSPORTATION.

At Prince Albert, Sask., we had a quiet Christmas on account of scarcity of stock. The demand was as great as usual and we kept our end up with our States brethren as regards prices and I believe we mentioned the exorbitant figures with just as sweet a smile and just as brazenly as we hear they did. But we could not begin to fill the orders offered. We are in the habit of supplementing our Christmas supply of flowers from Chicago, but the express service in the United States is so poor since the government started handling it that it was not safe to place an order.

Our chrysanthemums got caught with a sharp frost June 10 last year and the buds were all killed. Although it may sound improbable, the plants almost all came on again and we had a splendid crop of fine flowers for Christmas. I know this does not seem reasonable, but it is absolutely true. So fine were some of the blooms that they were snapped up at $8 per dozen.

I have two or three grievances, but am too far away from the seat of the trouble to be able to air them properly. For instance, it used to take exactly three days from the time a shipment of flowers or plants left Chicago till we got delivery here. Now the best time your government-run express can make is seven days, making it impossible for us to import perishable goods from Chicago until a change is apparent. We tried a couple of shipments of asparagus in December just to test it out, and both shipments took seven days from Chicago. Now, your big growers are not always going to be running only fifty per cent of their ranges as at present and I have tried to make some of my good friends on Wabash avenue realize that they cannot agitate this matter too soon. But I am afraid from the replies I have received that it is a case of "Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof." As they have no surplus stock to dispose of at present, they are not making much of an effort to have this state of things rectified.

Your freight traffic is just as unsatisfactory as your express service, since your government took over your railroads. I have some cases of Paper Whites and Romans from France that passed New York October 23, and there is still no trace of them, and I do not now expect to receive them. My shipment from France the year previous passed through New York in September, 1917, and the delivering company here had the effrontery to offer me one of the cases in April, 1918.

As far as I can see, there is only one remedy, namely, to insist on imports coming via England and Montreal, the way my Dutch bulbs arrived. Of course, if you people cannot get your express service made as efficient as it used to be under private ownership, we shall have to do the best we can among ourselves in Canada and cut out buying in the United States altogether.

Your telegraph service is just about as bad. Recently we got an F. T. D. order for a funeral offering from Boston, Mass. The telegram was delivered the following day, when the funeral was on its way to the cemetery. And in connection with the F. T. D., I would like to say, our American brother florists seem to like to put it over us once in a while, sending local checks in payment of their bills, on which we have to pay exchange, and deducting the prepaid express charges from the accounts, when we ship flowers to outside points for them. These are only small items of 25 cents or perhaps 35 cents or 40 cents, but it makes a man sore, after he has already deducted twenty per cent of his bill for trade discount.

May I hope you will find some way of placing these matters before the proper authorities so there will be some improvement? I am sure both the sellers in the United States and the buyers in Canada are vitally interested.

E. J. Coster.

SUNSHINE.

Judging from the man's position in the accompanying illustration, it is safe to say that he is perfectly willing to let his deeds speak for him. In other words, he is not ashamed of his crop, and the readers probably will agree that he has no reason to be ashamed of it. The man is J. F. Goetz, who has charge of "the greenhouse end" of the business of J. B. Goetz Sons, Saginaw, Mich. The crop consists of the new yellow, Japanese anemone-flowered chrysanthemum, Sunshine, which originated with J. B. Goetz Sons two or three years ago.

The other member of the company, Henry W. F. Goetz, mentions the fact that "all the plants shown in this view were disbudded to single stems." He adds: "Last season there was an unexpectedly heavy demand for these blooms in Chicago and other leading markets. We also had another house of Sunshine, grown in clusters, but we do not think these were nearly so handsome as the flowers grown by the disbudding process."

In directing attention to the photograph from which the illustration was made, the company says: "Please note the deep layer of ray petals, the large and high anemone center, the stiff stems and small foliage." Other particulars given in the description of the new variety are these: "The flowers are of medium size, about four inches in diameter; the center is a rich golden yellow and the petals are a somewhat lighter yellow. The variety is a seedling of Helen Newberry and has similar keeping qualities. It comes in bloom for Thanksgiving and makes a good pot plant, growing about two feet high."

Meadville, Pa.—George W. Haas & Son have enjoyed a record business for the month of December, cleaning up all stocks procurable.

Niagara Falls, N. Y.—Mrs. J. K. Crosset, who conducts a flower store at 409 Third street, reported to the police December 28 that she had been victimized the day before by accepting a worthless check offered in payment for a floral wreath. The check was for $20.50 and bore the signature "Harry Gilmore." It was the old game: The price of the wreath was $6 and Mrs. Crosset paid the difference in currency. The address given by the purchaser was found to be fictitious.

PETUNIAS.

About the end of the present month is early enough to start petunias from seed. If you want doubles, secure seed which is guaranteed to give a small percentage of this type. The most satisfactory manner, however, to propagate doubles is from cuttings, and if you have carried over some stock plants in a moderately cool house you should be able to get a nice crop of these cuttings now. Petunias are most satisfactory bedders; they also have much value for use in baskets, vases and window boxes. In the case of the singles, such charming pinks as Bar Harbor Beauty and Rosy Morn, the California Ruffled Giant, white and pink, and a good blue are specially fine for bedding.

VARIEGATED VINCAS.

There is always a tremendous call for variegated vincas for vases, baskets and boxes, and country florists never have much of a surplus of them. If you are anxious to increase your stock, you will find a good crop of nice, succulent shoots coming up and these will root readily in a propagating bench. Pieces of the long, well ripened shoots will also root, but take much longer. Another way to increase the stock is division of the roots. Wash away all the soil from the roots before cutting them or pulling them in pieces. After potting them, keep them close and warm until they are established. Later stand them along the sides of a carnation bench and they will make nice stock before spring sales start. I have mentioned only the variegated vinca, but the green form is also valuable and is by some preferred to the variegated. Some cultured people class all variegated plants as pure freaks and refuse to tolerate them. They are certainly less popular than they were twenty-five years ago, but are, I think, entitled to a place in any garden.

FUCHSIAS.

Those charming old-fashioned plants, the fuchsias, have come back into favor a good deal during the last few years. It is true we never see the mammoth standards or pyramidal specimens which I well remember were great features at exhibitions in Great Britain in my boyhood days, but plants of small size, in 4-inch pots and upwards, are in good demand. Fuchsias do well bedded out, if in partial shade, but they are also valuable in baskets, vases and piazza boxes, especially where they are not exposed to strong sunshine and are given an adequate water supply.

In baskets fuchsias are grand. All varieties can be grown in this way. Line the baskets with moss before filling them with compost, which should be tolerably rich. Varieties not of a drooping habit can be tied down to the wires of the baskets for a time and then allowed to grow naturally. The drooping varieties, of which Trailing Queen is the best, need no tying unless it is with the idea of covering any bare portion of the basket. As a companion plant, dot in a few of the Kenilworth ivy, Linaria Cymbalaria. These fuchsia baskets, if filled now, will be in fine condition for selling in May. Some pinching will be necessary, as well as the removal of early flowers. Give them plenty of water and, after they are well established, give them liquid manure. Do not fill level full of loam, but leave a hollowed out space for water. Use three to five plants to a basket, from 3-inch pots, according to size. Fuchsias in baskets will flower the entire summer if properly cared for. Last season some of ours bloomed from June until November. They did not suffer from lack of water, were occasionally fed and were protected from direct sunshine.

FIGHTING FIELD MICE.

Field mice do great damage in some winters, especially when we have a lot of snow. They girdle many trees and shrubs, eat up tulips and other bulbs and also devour the roots of platycodons and other hardy perennials. If the ground would stay hard-frozen below the winter mulch, they would do little damage below ground, but in such a winter as the present, with soft ground when January came in, they are proving troublesome. If you discover their haunts, you can poison them by soaking some strychnine and cracked corn over night in warm water and dropping some of the grain down their runs. Fresh clover leaves, lettuce or cabbage leaves and parsley can be dipped in the strychnine and pushed into the runs. I have also found that if a little coal tar or creosote is poured here and there in the runs, the rodents disappear. Where trees are liable to be girdled, it is a good plan to paint the stems to a height of eighteen inches with creosote. It will not harm the trees.

BUCKEYE BULL'S-EYES

REPAIRING DAMAGES.

Examination of the individual advertisements of our retail florists evinces a singular circumstance. They all feature a decided reduction in price. The inference is that prices have been considerably too high to suit the average purse. This is undoubtedly true and the experience gained in the brief period of exalted values should remain to forever prevent a repetition.

Much has been said, pro and con, upon the subject, but it is undeniable that the sudden elevation of prices materially injured business and served to counteract, at least temporarily, the splendid benefits of the national advertising. Nor can the nefarious effects be remedied immediately; it will take time. The habits of the public have been interfered with and it is realized that specific effort is required to remold them.

The welfare of the trade demands the elimination of great fluctuation in values. There is something radically wrong when an article which sold at $5 in the latter part of December is offered the public at one-fifth of that figure early in January. A comparative steadiness in prices, with extremes carefully avoided, should be productive of greater ultimate good. Of course there are times of shortage and oversupply, but they are invariably brief; and, as the trade is tolerably well organized, many plans are feasible for relieving the pinch of such situations.

The retail trade is well organized, likewise the wholesale section. It would seem that the growers supplying central markets could secure mutual benefits by getting together at regular intervals, with a view to regulating the all-important matter of supply. Without doubt, there is urgent need of concerted effort in this direction and, until it is forthcoming, conditions will remain much as they are. Mac.

THE COSMIC URGE.

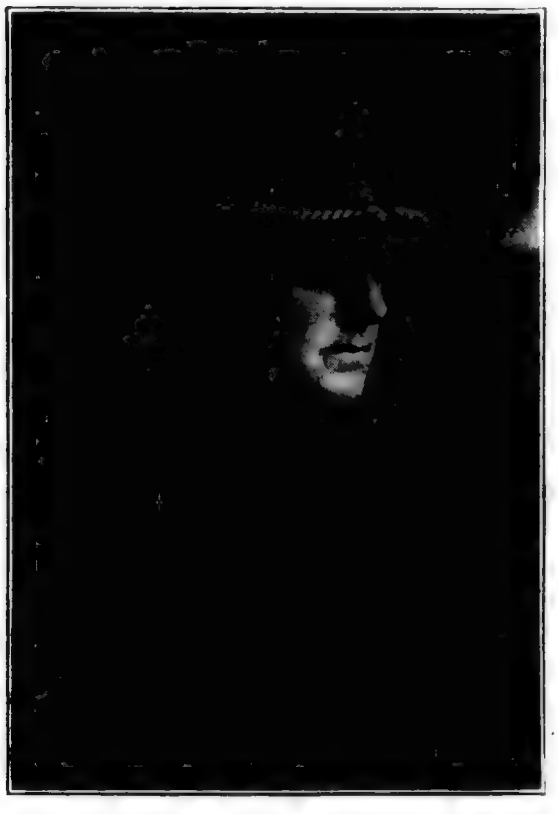
An intimate acquaintance with the personnel of the trade of the Sixth City and its environs discloses the presence within its fold of a few men who dream of the accomplishment of greater things. They are not many; they can be counted upon the fingers of one hand, in fact. A goodly degree of success already has crowned their efforts, but this is not sufficient. There is a keen desire to go farther, to perform feats of hitherto unapproached magnitude, to gain for themselves the plaudits of their confreres. Placed in a circumscribed sphere of action, they chafe at restraints and, with an ambition nurtured by red-blooded young manhood, they aspire to broaden out and do something that will elevate their profession in the business world of the day. They are practical men who think success and are filled to the brim with the wholesome spirit of enterprise.

May their tribe increase and may their salutary influence stimulate the entire local trade to the attainment of better ideals! A new business era is upon us and its full and proper realization requires awakened faculties. Wealth is more generally diffused than ever before, the gospel of flowers is being preached by myriad voices and success and prosperity eagerly beckon the alert florist. The personal equation enters more largely into calculations than at any previous time. Our great profession is yet in its infancy and its future status is solely dependent upon the business caliber of its present members. May they all become inoculated in generous measure with the cosmic desire to succeed. Mac.

IN KHAKI AND BLUE

DOINGS OF OUR BOYS.

On Sea and Land.



Each day brings to the office of The Review news of the return of members of the trade who have been in the fighting forces overseas, of soldiers and sailors from camp and naval station who are hurrying home, having received their discharges from the several branches of the service to which they had been attached. As the processes of demobilization proceed and the men in increasing numbers resume their places in the different departments of the trade, The Review will note their movements, which will be of interest to friends in the trade. News of those who have "gone west" and of those sick in hospitals "over there" or in the United States also will be noted from time to time, as it is received.

H. F. Vlieland Wounded.

H. F. Vlieland had been with the River Falls Floral Co., at River Falls, Wis., for five years when war was declared. He immediately volunteered for overseas service, was accepted and has been in many engagements in France. He was wounded in July, 1918, and is now in the base hospital at Camp Sherman, O. Judging from present conditions, it may be some time before he recovers sufficiently to be able to go to work again, but meantime he retains a keen interest in all that concerns the trade and reads The Review in order that he may be primed for work when the time comes that he may return to his chosen vocation.

Lieutenant John F. Dowd.

John F. Dowd, Clarence street, Roxbury, Mass., has returned from the camp at Jacksonville, Fla., with his commission of first lieutenant. He is the son of Mrs. Andrew Dowd and is 27 years of age. Before enlisting he was connected with the firm of Thomas F. Galvin, Inc., Boston, Mass.

Vern L. Schluraff.

Lieut. Washburn Released.

Lieutenant E. B. Washburn, son of C. L. Washburn, and member of the firm of Bassett & Washburn, Chicago and Pasadena, Cal., was released January 9 from military service and has returned to resume business at Pasadena. Lieutenant Washburn was stationed in the Pacific northwest in the Aviation Construction Department.

The Perry Brothers.

Two sons of Wilford Perry, grower and seed dealer of Provo, Ut., are in the service of Uncle Sam, Milton at the navy yards at Bremerton, Wash., and Darwin with the 69th Balloon Detachment in France. According to letters received by his father, Darwin is expected to arrive home February 4. He left Newport News June 29 in a transport bound for France. In one of many interesting letters to the home folks, written a month before the signing of the armistice, Darwin informed them that the war was over, but the kaiser did not know it. He also stated that he had recorded in his diary at that time a guess at the date of the cessation of hostilities, which he missed by just six days.

Lieutenant Stanley Giles.

Lieutenant Stanley Giles, of the Ordnance Division of the United States Army, stationed in New Jersey, delivered an interesting address before the January meeting of the Florists' Club of Reading, Pa., on the subject of "Life in an Army Camp." Lieutenant Giles was in the trade when he enlisted and was a former president of the club.

Harry Taylor Returns.

Uncle Sam has released Harry E. Taylor, who has returned to his duties in the branch store of J. Breitmeyer's Sons, Detroit. Mr. Taylor is a pigeon fancier and to him fell an unusual assignment in the army: He was placed in the signal corps and his duties were connected with the training and care of carrier pigeons. He was sent to Del Rio, Tex., early in 1918. Before locating with the Breitmeyers, at Detroit, Mr. Taylor was in the trade in Buffalo and Washington. He has been a Review correspondent for a number of years and will resume writing the Detroit news-letter.

Wounded Rhode Islander Gets Job.

Oscar T. Boucher, who was appointed tree warden at Woonsocket, R. I., January 6, is a member of the firm of Boucher Bros., landscape gardeners and foresters. He is at present lying wounded in a base hospital at Gervais, France, from injuries to his right hand, but expects to recover and return to this country in a few weeks. He is a member of Company C, 504th Engineers, and has been in France for several months. Until his return his duties as tree warden will be performed by his brother, Joseph E. Boucher. W. H. M.

Waiting to Reënter Business.

Vern L. Schluraff, whose return from Camp Gordon was noted in The Review for January 2, expects to again enter the florists' business for himself when conditions in the wholesale market become more normal. Mr. Schluraff operated a retail store in Erie, Pa., before the war and now is manager of the West Pullman, Ill., store of J. M. Cochrane. Mr. Schluraff writes that "The Review came regularly to me while I was at Camp Gordon; in fact, I only missed one number."

La Vere Braucht in France.

La Vere Braucht, before the war employed at New Castle, Ind., and Des Moines, Ia., is now in France with Company B of the 313th Field Signal Bureau. December 11, one month after the fighting stopped, he was located "south of St. Mihiel, France." Mr. Braucht writes that since he has been in France he has had no opportunity to visit any of the growers there, but hopes to get a furlough for this purpose before he is sent home. He is anxious to get some pointers, especially on rose growing, from the Europeans and when he returns hopes to be able to take a course in commercial cut flower growing.

Cardwell, Va.—Mrs. Annie Smith is starting in the business, growing outdoor stock only.

Harry E. Taylor.

BUSY TIMES AHEAD

INCREASE YOUR OUTPUT.

You Will Make Money.

Never before in the history of the florists' industry has there been such a demand for practically every line of stock and never has there been such a marked shortage of supply.

The war ended, so to speak, almost as suddenly as it began. At the beginning there were large stocks of everything the trade uses, but these gradually dwindled and, in many instances, were lost entirely. Upon the signing of the armistice, it was impossible, of course, for a florist to turn to raw material, like a manufacturer, and increase or decrease his supply on short notice; so today, with the many restrictions that have hampered our business, the florists find themselves far from meeting the demands of the trade, because there are not enough stocks to work on.

An article in The Review of December 19, by W. W. Hoopes, of Hoopes, Bro. & Thomas Co., nurserymen, of West Chester, Pa., states that the nursery business does not return the profit it should. Personally, I feel it is the same way to a large extent with the florists' business, especially with the grower. No one can deny that our business calls for hard and constant effort. There is considerable waste of product; this cannot always be avoided. For that reason alone, it behooves every florist to educate the flower-buying public to the fact that it will have to pay a fair price for cut flowers, etc.

Effects of War.

An important point for the florist to keep in mind is that during the period of the war, due to many reasons, not a few florists quit the business. Some of these will resume, while others will not. This has created two effects that are now apparent: The first is a shortage of cut flowers, and the second, good prices for what is available.

The war has taught the trade, like many other industries, valuable lessons. It has discouraged waste, it has encouraged a closer application to business and, really, many of us wonder how we went through it and survived.

Rules for Florists.

Every florist should resolve upon certain important things for 1919, remembering that it is our business that keeps us, and that it should command our best attention.

1. Don't grow surplus for speculation. It has a tendency to lower prices.
2. Get fair prices for your products, especially where fine quality and good trade demand it.
3. Avoid waste in any form. It is surprising the way waste pulls down the credit side of the ledger.
4. Try to have what your trade demands. Get back gradually into your regular line of crops, eliminating the things that do not pay and retaining the methods that you found useful during the war.

Hang Your Grapes High.

One might go on indefinitely citing suggestions that would prove valuable, but let me conclude by saying, keep the florists' industry on a high plane. Do not make it a cheap business; make it a paying proposition. Just think how many of you spent years of apprenticeship to learn the business, some serving without pay. Are you not entitled to profit the same as those in any other line?

Certainly you are, and it lies within the province of every florist to make his business profitable. Study market conditions as applied to cut flowers and plants, observe the law of supply and demand, as is done in every industrial business, and then make your price. Because carnations brought a dollar a dozen a year ago, that has no bearing on what you can get today. Grow sufficient stock to meet all normal demands, all that will be taken at a profitable price. Do not grow stock just to fill up benches, unless you are sure you can sell it at a profit. Remember it costs time and money to produce stock.

Try to figure a market before you grow stock, but, after all, do not have empty greenhouses; nothing deteriorates more rapidly. Make your houses work for you.

I did not want to use the words spoken today by a prominent grower in Philadelphia, but it may not be amiss, although I do not believe in too much emphasis. He said that many florists were ill; they needed a tonic that would boost them. Now, it is better to take the medicine yourself than to have it administered. So if we have been sick, let us get well and prepare for a larger spring trade than we have ever before enjoyed. P. R.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

The market continues strong, with a fair supply of stock that may be said to be above the average. Prices, of course, are slightly reduced, but, with limited supplies, still are higher than in previous years, and the outlook is that high prices will continue throughout the season. In fact, everyone is becoming accustomed to high prices and all realize the necessity of the growers charging more for stock that costs them almost double to produce. It requires a higher grade of salesmanship on the part of the retailers, but they are measuring up to this requirement. Many think prices will never again go back to the old level. Many of the florists have been surprised to find how easy it was, with flowers, as with any other commodity, to educate the public to the fact that prices are regulated entirely by supply and demand. The people were quick to realize the scarcity of everything in the florists' trade.

The three staples upon which the market depends are roses, carnations and sweet peas. Miscellaneous stock is not plentiful and bulbous stock is going to be late this year. From present appearances there does not seem to be much danger of the usual glut of bulbous stock at any time this year. If the grower will use discretion and not hold back his stock for Easter prices, he will fare as well and have much more satisfaction in handling his crop. In these days of labor shortage and lack of space, it will be much easier to handle a little at a time than to time the entire crop for one day, and we all know that bulbous stock will get soft in April. Another reason for bringing this stock in as soon as possible is that there is no danger that good prices will not be obtainable for it at any time.

Various Notes.

Carnations are becoming more plentiful and I have never seen the quality better. One of the finest cuts of this useful flower was that of Charles E. Akehurst, White Marsh, Md., who consigned to the S. S. Pennock Co. for Christmas 10,000 fine carnations, all colors, and Mr. Akehurst was back New Year's with 5,000 more. When I think of a visit I made to Mr. Akehurst's range the first of September, 1918, when his carnations were still in the field and all the labor in sight was himself and three boys, I wonder how he ever managed it. But the old saying applies in this case, "The proof of the pudding is in the eating." With the price of carnations at Christmas, we can realize this was some "pudding" for Mr. Akehurst, and we feel sure as he looks back over the strenuous months of unremitting toil it cost him to be on hand this Christmas, he will realize his labor was not in vain. The old proverb, "All things come to him who waits," may apply in a good many instances, but in the florists' business this should be paraphrased to read, "All things come to him who goes after them."

Everyone will be sorry to hear that the son of Hugo Walther, Park Heights avenue, has lost his wife. Young Mr. Walther is not in the florists' business, although his boyhood was spent in his father's greenhouse. He is now a teacher at the Maryland Institute and School of Design, and will be remembered by everyone in the trade, especially that part who disposed of their stock in the Lexington Market twenty-five years ago. Tate.

MEADVILLE, PA.

A happy occasion and one long to be remembered by the participants, all of whom were members of the family or close friends of the principals, was the golden wedding celebrated by Mr. and Mrs. George Haas, of Meadville, Pa., December 29, 1918.

Mr. and Mrs. Haas were married in Mead township, now West Mead township, December 29, 1868, and have lived in the same locality ever since. Soon after coming to Meadville, Mr. Haas started in the florists' business on a small scale. His pathway was not altogether one of roses, for in 1877 his buildings were destroyed by fire and he lost the fruits of years of effort. He started again, however, and took into partnership his son, Roger W. Haas. Their business has grown until they now have one of the largest greenhouse establishments in northwestern Pennsylvania. Of the eight children born to them, six are living. Many letters and telegrams of congratulation were received from friends and relatives far and near and callers came from a distance to pay respects to Mr. and Mrs. Haas.

DOINGS OF THE FLORISTS' CLUBS

INDIANA FLORISTS MEET.

Officers Elected.

At the largest meeting of the Indiana State Florists' Association, held at the Claypool hotel, Indianapolis, January 14, the following officers were elected for 1919:

President—Anders Rasmussen, New Albany.

First vice-president—Herman J. Young, Indianapolis.

Second vice-president—Edwin E. Temperley, Indianapolis.

Secretary—O. E. Steinkamp, Indianapolis.

Treasurer—Charles Pahud, Indianapolis.

A Busy Session.

The meeting was opened by President Bertermann, who extended a welcome to everyone present. J. F. Ammann gave a short talk on business in general, winding up with an appeal for members for the F. T. D. Professor Lummell, of Purdue University, was elected to membership and when called on for a speech extended an invitation to visit his institution at Lafayette. Martin Nelson was proposed for membership.

There was a discussion of affiliation with the S. A. F. E. G. Hill took the matter up where President Ammann left off. A. F. J. Baur told of the percentage of the Carnation Society members belonging to the S. A. F., which was two-thirds of the membership. Mr. Ammann spoke of the St. Louis Florists' Club having 116 members, 100 of whom are members of the S. A. F. He said he can see no good reason why the Indiana State Florists' Association should not be represented on the S. A. F. board when it has a state membership of almost 200. President Bertermann appointed the following committee to stage a campaign in the association for new S. A. F. members: Joseph Hill, Henry Rieman and W. W. Coles.

The treasurer's report was given, secretary's annual paper read and the auditing committee's papers of approval turned in. The state fair committee, consisting of O. E. Steinkamp, J. D. Connor, Charles Pahud and Harry B. White, gave a report. Mr. Steinkamp, being the spokesman of this committee, made an appeal for more entries for the coming year, and explained that the premiums awarded are more generous than those awarded at a great number of flower shows. The Purdue University committee, consisting of John Hartje, F. E. Dorner, A. F. J. Baur, Anders Rasmussen and Joseph Helm, gave its report.

The raising of dues was brought before the house. A heated discussion followed, closed by voting to add $1 for the year of 1919, merely for a trial. The fall jubilee for the homecoming of our boys in service will be a chrysanthemum show, to be held in November, at the Claypool hotel, Indianapolis. Dillon A. Myers was heard from on his patriotic war garden idea that he so successfully carried out last season. It was deemed wise that this garden proposition be carried on again for the coming spring.

The Plant Quarantine.

E. G. Hill was heard from on the new plant quarantine. Mr. Hill stated that there are three classes of florists concerned in this: Those who are bitterly opposed to it, those who greatly favor it and a great majority who seem to be indifferent. He stated that a great deal can be said for the quarantine order, but from a florist's standpoint a great deal more can be said against it. He said many of these things.

State Entomologist Wallace was heard from. He told of the enormity of the damage done by the pests mentioned by Mr. Hill, and also added the cricket mole, which has done untold damage in New Jersey. Mr. Wallace says that the time has passed for the florists to write letters to their senators to get rid of this quarantine, as the evidence warrants it, but letters to the board asking it to lighten the severity of its orders might be justifiable.

William Walker, of Louisville, was called on for a few words. Mr. Long, of Chicago, also spoke.

Then the meeting adjourned to the banquet hall, where a social evening was spent in listening to Mr. Ammann, the silver-tongued orator of the S. A. F., and such men as President-elect Rasmussen, E. G. Hill and A. F. J. Baur.

Judges' Report.

The judges, Joseph Hill, F. L. Morse and Robert Ellis, reported as follows: Hartje & Elder, silver cup trophy on carnations. Baur & Steinkamp, certificate of merit on Carnation Ruth Baur, scoring 88 points. Frank & Sons, silver cup rose trophy. Temperleys' Florists, honorable mention on their new red Chatelaine begonia, Christmas Gift, also on cyclamen and obconica primula. Bertermann Bros. Co., honorable mention on cyclamen and Primula obconica. Roepke Floral Co., honorable mention on Primula malacoides and Chatelaine begonias.

The Joseph H. Hill Co., Richmond, received honorable mention for a vase of Rose Premier and for another of Carnation Laddie.

Those Present.

All members of the association were entertained at the Baur & Steinkamp establishment, where the carnation was viewed in all its glory, Ruth Baur being the queen of varieties. The visitors were entertained at luncheon at the Commercial Club by this firm.

The members present were: H. W. Rieman, William F. Roepke, Walter Lewis, Dillon A. Myers, Len Elder, John Bertermann, John Grandy, R. E. Jones, Maurice Marer, J. A. Grande, A. F. J. Baur, Joseph H. Hill, S. T. Hitz, George Fuller, John Grande, Sr., E. A. Nelson, A. B. Cunningham, George R. Goss, Herman G. Piel, Robert A. Ellis, Charles L. Frank, Lawrence Green, William Lummell, Clarence R. Green, Charles A. Rieman, George Blackman, A. Rasmussen, A. D. Warrum, William G. Miller, L. A. Coles, Emil Carboz, F. S. Morris, John Eitel, W. W. Coles, E. G. Hill, Robert M. Henley, William Kluse, B. F. Hensley, T. D. Hepler, Edwin Morner, Fred H. Keil, Charles S. Barnaby, Lynn Barnaby, Thomas Woodard, M. A. Barrick, Carl Sunenschmidt, Mr. and Mrs. Warren Huckleberry, Paul Janisch, Albert Kempe, Charles Pahud, Herman Young, Irwin Bertermann, E. E. Temperley, O. E. Steinkamp. Guests included William Walker, Edith V. Walker and L. S. Walker, of Louisville; J. F. Ammann, Edwardsville, Ill., and Mr. Long, of Chicago. E. E. T.

VICTORY NIGHT AT CHICAGO.

Florists' Club Celebrates.

An excellent repast was served at the Chicago Florists' Club's Victory dinner January 9, and between the courses there was dancing, with plenty of it after the tables were cleared, to the strains of Herbert Mintz's Jazz band. During the dinner Miss Edna Frauenfelder entertained with a vocal selection.

Jolly Phil Foley acted as toastmaster and called on several for remarks, the first being a visitor, A. F. J. Baur, of Indianapolis, secretary of the American Carnation Society. Mr. Baur spoke on carnations and urged all present to attend the American Carnation Society meeting, to be held at Cleveland January 29. He thanked the club for its invitation, extended to the society earlier in the evening, to hold its meeting in Chicago in 1920. A few remarks were heard from C. C. Pollworth, of Milwaukee, and C. Frauenfelder. Paul Klingsporn spoke on the S. A. F., of which he is vice-president for northern Illinois. William J. Keimel extended a special invitation to Chicagoans to attend the Illinois State Florists' Association meeting in March. George Asmus confined his few remarks to advertising, as did H. A. Woolf, of The Review. Henry M. Robinson spoke in behalf of Boston and New York, in which cities he is a wholesaler. Last, but not least, a few words were heard from T. E. Waters, who had so successfully made the evening a pleasant one.

Officers were installed as follows: President, A. J. Zech; secretary, A. T. Pyfer; treasurer, Otto H. Amling; trustee, Fred Lautenschlager. Pledges were given by all the incoming officers. Otto H. Amling presented the treasurer's annual report.

Visitors seen around the tables, besides those already mentioned, were Fred and Henry Henoch and George Husmann, all of the Ove Gnatt Co., La Porte, Ind.

Want Another Soon.

The next few days a number of those present were asked how they had enjoyed the affair. The answer was unanimous, "The best time we ever had at the club and really the nicest affair we ever had." One leading retailer said that those who did not attend were the losers. In fact, the evening was such a big success that before it was over there was talk as to when another meeting of this kind would be held. T. E. Waters, chairman of the good-of-the-club committee, who handled the affair, said that as far as he was concerned the club could have one every month, but he suggested that another be held right after Easter. The florists' trade in Chicago looks for the biggest Easter on record, and it is evident there will be reason for getting together to celebrate. The affair was given a lot of publicity and there is no doubt that the next one will be in the nature of an allied trade banquet.

The club has decided on a novelty exhibition at the meeting February 6. Judges will be appointed to award certificates to the new things of merit. Exhibits are invited.

NEW YORK CLUB.

Installs New Officers.

The January meeting of the New York Florists' Club, held January 12, was well attended, over 150 members being present, including ten ex-presidents. It was installation night. Consequently the proceedings were of a more than usually fraternal character, and complimentary to the incoming administration.

Charles Schenck, retiring president, read a farewell address in which he recounted the successful work of a busy year and thanked his officers and committees for their devotion to the general interest. Mr. Schenck then called upon A. S. Burns, an ex-president of the 1890 vintage, to escort Philip F. Kessler, the president-elect, to the chair, where he was installed, and presented by Mr. Schenck with a gavel to wield during his term of office. Mr. Kessler graciously acknowledged the gift and made his inaugural address, in which he outlined what he considers the most important work which lies ahead. He named the following standing committees:

Legislative—W. H. Siebrecht, Jr.; P. O'Mara, F. R. Pierson.

Awards—Chas. W. Knight, A. Herrington, Peter Duff, Jos. A. Manda, W. H. Siebrecht, Sr., S. G. Milosy, W. R. Pierson.

Flower Show—C. H. Totty, Chas. Schenck, F. H. Traendly, G. E. M. Stumpp, Wallace R. Pierson, W. H. Duckham, Max Schling, P. W. Popp, A. L. Miller, John Young, P. F. Kessler.

House and Entertainment—Peter Gerlaird, Ayres Booth, Alex. H. Donaldson, Edw. A. Hanft, Henry Huffman.

Exhibition—Roman J. Irwin, L. T. Rodman, Fred'k Cowperthwaite, A. Buchholz.

Essay and Lecture—E. C. Vick, John H. Pepper, A. T. DeLaMare.

Publicity—J. H. Pepper, G. E. M. Stumpp, E. C. Vick.

Collection of Flowers for Soldiers and Sailors in Hospital—Joseph Fenrich, A. Le Moult, Peter Gerlaird, Paul A. Rigo, John R. Kervan, Maurice Glass, Tony Sakelos, A. S. Nash, Philip F. Kessler.

P. W. Popp, reëlected vice-president, was escorted to the platform, where he acknowledged the honor paid him. Secretary John Young made fitting acknowledgment of his twenty-ninth reelection to office and Wm. C. Rickards, Jr., made his customary reëlection address. Percy B. Rigby was the only trustee-elect present and, on being installed, intimated that figures were his specialty, and as one of the custodians of the club's wealth he should consider it his duty to be continually on guard.

Miscellaneous Matters.

The report of the treasurer was presented and showed a balance in hand of $15,556.12.

The following were elected to membership: R. H. C. Bard, Syracuse, N. Y.; F. G. Sealey, 3056 Perry avenue, Bronx, N. Y.; O. J. Van Bourgondien, 147 Magnolia avenue, Arlington, N. J.; Bornatt Klugman, 3917 King's highway, Brooklyn; Simon Schneirow, 3917 King's highway, Brooklyn; Isadore Landsman, Thirty-eighth street and Lenox road, Brooklyn. Of these new members, Messrs. Van Bourgondien, Landsman, Schneirow and Klugman were present and made suitable acknowledgment of their election. Peter Henderson, D. J. Pappas and W. T. Homburg, recently elected members, were recognized as present and were compelled to complete their initiations by the usual platform ceremony.

The following were nominated for election at the next meeting: Hans Schwarz, Riverdale, N. Y.; James Moraio, Rye, N. Y.; Anthony Moraio, Rye, N. Y.; Robert H. Lickman, East Islip, N. Y.; Joseph Lee, Islip, N. Y.; Frank Laban, New York; Matthew Sampson, Jr., New York; Max Lehman, New York; Robert LaBau, New York; Isaac Abrams, Brooklyn, N. Y., and Wm. Doyle, New York.

The secretary read his annual report, which was mainly a review of the year just ended. It showed that the club during 1918 had initiated fifty-eight new members, lost one through resignation and seven through death. The membership was shown to be considerably over 500.

J. H. Pepper presented a resolution of sympathy on the death of Mrs. F. Milliot, of Yonkers, N. Y., which was passed and ordered to be entered on the minutes; and the secretary reported the decease of Geo. Allen, son of J. K. Allen, one of the oldest members of the club, and Mrs. McGovern, mother of two prominent members of the club. The president was directed to appoint committees to prepare resolutions of sympathy in each case.

John Scheepers presented a memorial resolution on the death of Capt. De Lamar, a generous supporter of the club's flower shows.

The question as to whether the club should have its official dinner this year was brought up and, without discussion, answered in the affirmative. President Kessler thereupon appointed as a dinner committee Charles Schenck, Andrew C. Scott, Alfred T. Bunyard, W. H. Siebrecht, Jr., and Emil Schloss.

By resolution it was ordered that a committee on transportation be appointed for the convoy of all wishing to attend the forthcoming convention and exhibition of the American Carnation Society, to be held in Cleveland January 29 and 30.

More About Publicity.

A short discussion of the work incidental to the national publicity campaign ensued. Secretary Young described many humorous incidents of his recent trip across continent in the interests of the campaign. George E. M. Stumpp in a few remarks spoke volumes for the efficacy of the campaign, although he probably would have remained silent had he not been urged into action by Mr. Young, who announced that the opening gun of the 1919 campaign had been fired by Mr. Stumpp, when he came across at the beginning of the year with his annual subscription of $350.

Wallace R. Pierson spoke at some length of the value of the campaign. He quoted a story related by Robert Craig at the publicity rally in Philadelphia January 7. Dugan and Hennessy were discussing topics in general. Says Dugan: "There's a moighty foine medicine they are giving out now; it cures anything." "Cures anything?" said Hennessy. "Sure," says Dugan. "How d'ye know?" says Hennessy. "Know!" says Dugan, "sure, I've seen it painted on a fince!"

Mr. Pierson told of the way in which the Hartford, Conn., florists had been affected by the spirit of the campaign and of his belief that the movement was giving an incentive to side issues all for the good of the trade. The Hartford florists now, prior to holidays or special flower-using occasions, coöperate in the insertion of page advertisements in all the Hartford newspapers. He ventured the question of whether the New York florists were, or could be, of a sufficiently coöperative mind to do the same thing in New York. He believed they could and would if they realized the immense advantage to be obtained.

BUSINESS EMBARRASSMENTS.

San Francisco, Cal.—Armand B. Kreft, referee in bankruptcy for the Pacific Florist Supply Co., G. Madvig, proprietor, cited to appear before the southern division of the United District court for the northern division of California, has sent letters to the creditors of this concern notifying them that A. J. Oliver, trustee, has filed his second and final account, calling a meeting to be held January 16, 1919, at 10 a. m., at his office in the courthouse and post-office building in San Francisco, to examine accounts and declare a dividend.

Chicago, Ill.—Irene Williams, trading as the Atlas Floral Shop, filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy January 9, scheduling the following liabilities:

McCormick Estate	$4,000.00
Batavia Greenhouse Co.	2,000.00
Poehlmann Bros. Co.	360.00
Hilmer V. Swenson Co.	160.00

Marshall Field & Co.	17.00
A. Sorenson	75.00
J. Blattner	68.40
A. L. Randall Co.	139.00
F. Oechslin	50.00
A. A. Arnold Paper Box Co.	60.00
E. F. Winterson Co.	50.00

Geo. Wittbold Co.	6.00
H. L. Kidwell	17.00
S. Buxbaum Co.	70.00
Geller	35.00
Total	$8,282.40

The assets were stated to be $618.

The store, now at 176 North Wabash avenue, is being continued. The largest item of liabilities is for back rent and lease on the store formerly occupied, on the Randolph street side of the Atlas block. Most of the claims are old and several are in judgment.

Greenville, S. C.—Damages estimated at $12,000 resulted from fire at the range of the Greenville Floral Co., January 6. The fire broke out about 3 a. m. in the boiler room, putting the heating system out of commission and wrecking the houses. The most serious loss was in stock, which probably amounts to $10,000. Only $500 insurance was carried on the plants, while the loss to the buildings and heating system is practically covered. Emil Bovey, proprietor, purchased this establishment in 1911 and has enlarged the range and extended the business. He has not decided whether he will rebuild.

George Conklin Saltford.

George Conklin Saltford, vice-president of the Saltford Flower Shop, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., died suddenly at his home on North avenue, that city, January 10. Mr. Saltford was well known to the trade, in which he had high standing. He had many friends in Poughkeepsie, which had been his lifelong home, as well as among the florists. He attended the Riverview Military Academy in youth and later a school in Nova Scotia. He was a member of the Poughkeepsie Yacht Club, of Elks' lodge and of the Dutchess County Horticultural Society. He married Miss Carrie Gregg, of Goshen, N. Y., who survives him, as do his parents and his son George, 11 years old, and his brother. A handsome pall of carnations was conspicuous among the many floral offerings at the funeral services.

William Aherne.

William Aherne, a well-known florist of Columbia, Pa., died of valvular heart disease at the home of Mrs. Sarah E. Mullen, where he had lived for a number of years.

Mr. Aherne was born in Middleton, County Cork, Ireland, August 8, 1848. He came to this country in 1873 and settled in Philadelphia. Five months later he removed to Columbia, where he worked as a gardener, having learned the trade in London, England. In 1890 he went into the florists' business on his own account, in which he continued until his death, at the age of 71 years.

Mr. Aherne enlisted as a private in Company H, 11th Infantry, N. G. P., which later became Company C, 4th Infantry, in 1878. He was commissioned first lieutenant in 1891 and commanded the company at Homestead in 1892. He retired from the guard in 1894.

His wife died a year ago. Eight children survive.

James Horan.

Many friends mourn the death of James Horan, Bridgeport, Conn., which occurred recently as the result of pneumonia. The deceased was the son of James Horan, founder of the firm of James Horan & Son, of Bridgeport, with which he was connected at one time. He had been employed also by George Pflomm, of that city, who pays the young florist a high tribute for his faithfulness and worthiness. He was with Mr. Pflomm for four years, until the exigencies of war made it necessary for the young men to seek essential occupations. He then went to work at the Remington Arms, intending to return to the florists' business as soon as he should be released from the work undertaken as a patriotic duty. He is survived by his wife and two children, as well as by his brother, Stephen Horan.

Mrs. George F. Otto.

Mrs. George F. Otto, wife of George F. Otto, well known florist of San Diego, Cal., died at her home January 3. She had not been well for some time, but her family and friends had hoped for a recovery. Her husband, daughter and son have the sincere sympathy of friends and members of the trade in their bereavement. Mrs. Otto has always been keenly interested in both the store and nursery carried on by her husband and has always taken an active part in the management of the business. The many floral tokens and the large body of friends attending the funeral gave evidence of the great esteem in which she was held. A. D.

Thomas McAllister.

Everyone in the trade at Chicago knew Thomas McAllister, of the A. Lange force, and will regret his death January 11, after an illness of only three days with pneumonia. Mr. McAllister had been with A. Lange off and on for fifteen years or more, being the oldest member of Mr. Lange's present large force. He was about 52 years of age. He came from England many years ago and was for a time employed in the trade in the vicinity of Boston. He was a good florist and a faithful worker. On the night of January 8 he and Mr. Lange's son, Herbert Lange, were the last out of the store. Mr. McAllister made no complaint of feeling unwell, but did not report for duty next day. He had no relatives in Chicago. A sister is Mrs. P. J. McGinn, of Worcester, Mass. Other relatives live in Uniontown, Pa., and word came from there that P. J. Reagan was on the way to Chicago to take charge of the remains.

Interment took place January 15, at Mt. Olivet cemetery, Morgan Park, Ill.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS

"The commission man comes in for a lot of adverse criticism from the small retailers just now," observed George B. Hart, of Rochester, N. Y., "and until the florists can educate their patrons to higher prices, they will feel the effects of existing conditions. For the present there seems no prospect of a change, the supply being unequal to the demand, which condition doubtless will continue through this season. I do not believe there will be a big addition to the glass area, for one good reason, that the growers will be satisfied to continue for a while as they are doing, in view of the extra prices they will get with the restricted output. Again, undoubtedly it will be found unprofitable to repair many houses, on which an extraordinary outlay would be necessary, which few growers will feel like undertaking. Our business, while far from being satisfactory from a general viewpoint, has been larger in volume and prices have been high," concluded Mr. Hart.

* * * *

"I would be pleased to extend personal greetings to our fellow craftsmen," observed Hon. Frank J. Baker, of C. F. Baker & Son, Utica, N. Y., "particularly to those members of the F. T. D. with whom we have had such pleasant and profitable exchanges during the last year, but, as everybody reads The Review, I am glad to extend our good wishes through its columns. May the new year, ushered in so auspiciously prove profitable to all." Commenting on holiday business, which averaged up splendidly, it was noted that cut poinsettias have been superseded by plants grown in pans. The only left-over stock consisted of plants grown for cutting. W. E. Cahill, representing Roman J. Irwin, of New York city, happening in, extended greetings from Boston, his home town, where he found the growing of pansies was not a "heartsease." "Billy" says his firm's business is humming. Enough stock cannot be found to fill orders. He predicts a boom among the growers of carnation cuttings. Blooms are now bringing 8 cents each at wholesale. Dr. W. A. Rowland, of Utica, indorsed this statement, saying his cut was handled by one retailer, who willingly paid the price. To be diplomatic, the doctor tells his dental patrons he makes his profit in growing carnations, and vice versa. Fewer bulbs are being grown, principally for the reason they were not to be had, but P. M. Koster is one of many Holland plant growers who hope to be able to supply a full quota next season. Mr. Koster recently arrived on the Nieuw Amsterdam and will try to get the embargo on the importation of Dutch plants and bulbs modified before it goes into effect next June. He related an interesting incident that happened on the island where the former crown prince lives. The islanders were scandalized at the sound of merrymaking after 8 o'clock at night. They protested and demanded of the burgomaster that the ex-crown prince be reprimanded for such a violation of the laws of the land of tulips. This was done. Mr. Koster hopes to be as successful in his efforts with Uncle Sam regarding the embargo.

* * * *

The Rosendale Flower Shop, of Schenectady, N. Y., enjoyed a fine holiday business, which would have been better had not a strike occurred at the General Electric works just at that time, which undoubtedly hurt trade in general considerably. The ad of this concern in the pink section of The Review brings results.

* * * *

Robert H. C. Bard, of Syracuse, N. Y., sees a great future for the retailer who, as he expressed it, knows from grass to grasshopper, or in other words, is familiar with the business from A to Z. At least such is his expectation, and all who know "Bobby" realize that his middle initials stand for "High-Class." His latest scheme is to create a "wild garden" from which to furnish the store through the summer with cut blooms. The idea is to plant groups of hardy perennials and the like in liberal quantities at his country home at Cross Lake. W. E. Day, of Syracuse, indorses the idea, commenting on the large sales during the holidays of assorted plants in baskets. Anything that fitted in sold, evidence of the varied tastes of the people. Bellamy Bros. and Gustave Bartholme, of Syracuse, had similar experiences. In fact, cut flowers played second in many places, possibly owing to the scarcity of stock and the efforts put forth by the sales clerks. W. M.

THE state flower of Rhode Island is the violet and the Rotary Club of Providence talks of having violets planted on the grave of each Rhodeislander who sleeps in Flanders fields. It is a pretty idea.

NIGHT telegrams have been reduced in cost to the point where florists can use them freely in ordering. If sent to The Review with regard to advertisements, Monday night is the last chance—part of the paper is printed Tuesday night.

FLORISTS who plant soft-wooded stock in the busy spring miss a fine chance if they do not plant hard-wooded stock in the quiet autumn. Take orders all summer and fill them in the fall. Get ready for it now by putting out some sample shrubs on your own place this spring.

THE Editor's Desk has been decorated by a vase of double-flowered Primula malacoides, sent by David Fraser, of Pittsburgh, who says he has been growing it for five years. He writes that it not only comes true from seed, but is just as free in flower as the type and much earlier, seeds sown in July making plants in flower for Christmas. The specimens sent were excellent.

THERE will be small chance to import any quantity of Belgian plants before the complete quarantine goes into effect, June 1. A letter from M. De Smet, who, in addition to being an exporter formerly with many American customers, is secretary of the Chambre Syndicate des Horticulteurs Belge, states that there is extremely little salable stock in the nurseries around Ghent, with a shortage also of stock for growing on.

THE fuel market continues easy in the bituminous zones.

IT will be some time before kentias again become plentiful.

THE man who can be depended on for good stock well packed never lacks for customers who will pay a little extra price on that account.

BELGIAN horticulture will soon be reestablished, but without help from the United States. Our "Cootie" board at Washington is afraid there may be something about the plants they can not see!

ST. VALENTINE'S day for the trade this year will be what the retailers make it. If they advertise it strongly the public will "Say It with Flowers," but if no local advertising is done candy or tissue paper contraptions will be used instead.

TIME TO START BUILDING?

The building trades were practically out of business during the war. The big interests are making an effort to restart them as a means of shifting factory capacity from a war to a peace footing.

Structural steel has been reduced in price.

The price of pipe has been cut.

Large manufacturers have lowered the price of boilers.

Machine-blown glass is cheaper.

The market for lumber is unimportant, as greenhouse material concerns have stocks of cypress bought long ago, while prices were lower than the present reduced prices.

The reductions in the prices of building material are not accompanied by corresponding reductions in the cost of labor, but are for the purpose of encouraging the prompt resumption of construction work and to keep labor employed. If building starts promptly, as is expected, it is conceivable that prices soon will advance again.

"SAY IT WITH FLOWERS."

Instances have been multiplied of late, in the thick of the events of this eventful era, of the utility of flowers as the appropriate and indispensable means of expression of sentiment. The passing of Theodore Roosevelt furnished a notable illustration of the mission of flowers. Notwithstanding the request of Mrs. Roosevelt, carried around the globe by the Associated Press, that flowers be omitted, flowers were showered upon the family home at Sagamore Hill beyond its capacity to contain. At the church where the last rites were held it is stated that "the chancel was covered with floral pieces, including a wreath of pink and white carnations ordered by cable by President Wilson." One of the floral offerings was the gift of the children of the Cove school, which it had been Colonel Roosevelt's habit to visit annually Christmas day, the first school the Roosevelt children attended. The boys and girls of this school contributed their dimes and pennies to pay honor in this manner to the departed hero, who had been their kind friend. They, like the many others represented in the floral pieces assembled on this occasion, found flowers essential to the expression of sentiment. Flowers will continue to be used for that office, because there is no substitute for them, because they so beautifully and fittingly convey the message which can be expressed so well by no other medium.

CAN YOU WRITE?

Each week The Review records events in some thirty to forty trade centers, from Boston to the Pacific coast. With so large a staff of correspondents it is inevitable that there should be changes, vacancies—it is the wish of the editor to have every important center heard from frequently. At present there are, among others, openings for correspondents in:

Washington, D. C.
Albany, N. Y.
Syracuse, N. Y.
St. Paul, Minn.
Minneapolis, Minn.
Omaha, Neb.

If you have the gift that makes writing easy, let The Review hear from you. Correspondents should not be wholesale commission florists nor lady florists.

MORE THAN ENOUGH.

With all the protest against high prices, in spite of the uncertainty incident to the reconstruction period, growers who know how to find a market for their stock are clearing their crops and making ready for the harvest that the Easter trade is sure to bring to those prepared for the spring demand. The Review is the medium chosen by growers of experience, for they have tested it out and found that results brought by its Classified ads are more than sufficient to take care of their output. The Review reaches all the live wires in the trade and keeps stock moving, as these growers know:

Please cancel my ad in the Classified columns, as it has brought results.—Wolfe the Florist, Waco, Tex., January 5, 1919.

The four insertions in The Review's Classified department sold me out many times over.—Carl R. Lloyd, Plaistow, N. H., January 5, 1919.

Please cancel our ads on coleus, salvias, geraniums and heliotrope, as it is impossible to keep up with the business brought by these ads. —Harglerode Bros., Shippensburg, Pa., January 4, 1919.

When you hear a man complain of the cost of advertising you can be pretty sure he spends a good bit of money elsewhere than in The Review.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

Shipping business is keeping up briskly, but city business has fallen off, as is not unusual at this time of the year. Many of the retailers report an unusually heavy demand for funeral work.

There is a good quantity of stock coming into the market. It is of good quality and for this time of the year brings a most satisfactory price. The price of roses continues to hold up, being the same as last week. Although some growers are off crop, on the whole there is enough stock to go around, with the exception of Double White Killarney and Sunburst. The latter is not coming in as plentifully as formerly; White Killarney is in good supply, but there is an extra heavy demand for it, due to a large amount of funeral work. Beauties are scarce, but in little demand.

Carnations are abundant, there being more than the trade can absorb without affecting prices, which range from 2 to 6 cents, the latter price being asked for extra fancy stock which brought 8 cents last week. It is reported that carnations in large quantities, probably including splits, of which there are many, sold at $10 per thousand to department stores. There are plenty of orchids, more than enough to go around, which has caused a drop in price. Valley is about equal to the call. A large supply of violets is arriving, more than enough for immediate needs, and the price of these is lower than last week.

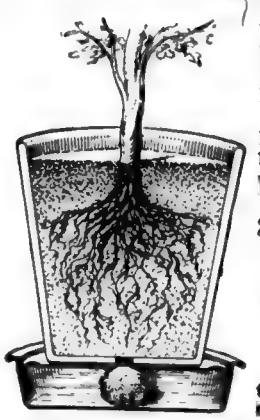
The quantity of Easter lilies coming easily takes care of present orders, while callas continue on the short side. A shortage of calendulas continues. Sweet peas continue on the short side; the supply of long-stemmed Spencers is not enough to take care of the orders. Paper Whites are more plentiful, while yellow narcissi continue on the short side. Tulips have arrived. Stevia is scarce. The supply of all other seasonable cut stock is large enough to take care of all orders.



There is enough of everything in green goods.

The attention of the wholesalers and retailers is directed toward St. Valentine's day, and it is the general opinion that, with so many soldiers back in this country and with many returned to civilian life, we shall experience the biggest St. Valentine's day trade in the history of the business. This statement is backed by many of the large supply houses, which report orders for corsage and basket material for this day coming in rather heavily so far in advance.

Great Oaks from Acorns.

There are hundreds, probably thousands, of florists who have started in the business while still employed at something else, so it is not a matter for remark except that nearly all who start in that manner make a success and soon devote all their energies to the business. There is a prosperous florist in Tennessee who still runs a locomotive, and a Pullman conductor does a flower business at both ends of an overland run, but so far as reported C. L. Fies is the only dining-car chef who also is a florist. He has a run out of Chicago on the New York Central Lines and is doing a nice little florists' business at 8007 Constance avenue, steadily increasing and soon likely to make other employment impossible. One might guess that Mrs. Fies looks after the business during her husband's absence on the road and that both are enthusiastic flower lovers.

Getting Together.

Now that the retailers have an association, the wholesalers having had one for some little time, the plans are to get together for the general well-being of the flower business.

The first step was taken by the retailers, who appointed a committee consisting of President L. R. Bohannon, Secretary William Wienhoeber, George Wienhoeber, A. Lange, Walter Adams and Andrew Chronis. The wholesalers responded by appointing a committee consisting of President A. F. Poehlmann, Secretary A. C. Kohlbrand, C. J. Michelsen, P. C. Schupp and Eric Johnson.

The two committees had a meeting in the balcony room of the E. C. Amling Co., Wednesday, January 15. The discussion covered a wide range of subjects, but it seemed apparent that nearest the hearts of each committee lay the old grievances, that of the retailers being that some wholesalers still sell at retail, while the wholesalers make much of the fact that some of the retailers buy ferns, eastern violets and other stock direct of the producer and not through the dealers in this market.

A much better feeling is sure to come from the exchange of views.

Various Notes.

Fighting a fire January 12, which started in the basement from an overheated furnace pipe, under the flower shop of A. S. Brouton, at 3201 Fullerton avenue, caused the death of one city fireman and injured four others. The flower shop was destroyed, along with other stores in the block, causing a damage of about $15,000.

The first of the season's Iris tingitana was received last week by the Chicago Flower Growers' Association.

After traveling all over the United States and making the acquaintance of all the larger florists, Frank McCabe has been taken off the road by the A. L. Randall Co. His duties in future will be of a special nature, dealing with any situation which calls for the attention of a man well versed in the business.

Mrs. Victor Bergman assumed charge of the Edgewater Beach hotel flower store January 13. Mrs. Bergman, like her husband, is a talented designer, having been brought up in the trade under the tutorage of her father, G. Ludwig, the well known Pittsburgh florist.

F. W. Martin, 609 East Fortieth street, has been in the habit of sending calendars to his customers at the first of the year, but this year he did something out of the ordinary. He used an appropriate picture framed under glass, with fancy background and calendar attached. He figures it will be hung in a prominent place in the household, instead of in the kitchen, where so many of the common calendars are hung. Mr. Martin is a firm believer in good advertising.

Alfred Dietsch, of the A. Dietsch Co., comments on the number of inquiries for quotations and states that in the last month they have received more inquiries than in the preceding six months. In fact, December broke all records and Mr. Dietsch says that from the way the quotations are being accepted he cannot see how they will be able to handle the orders when building time comes.

Sam Pearce sent the E. C. Amling Co. the first of his season's tulips January 11.

Ten houses, constituting one section of the range of Weiland-Risch Co., Evanston, have been in vegetables and have been earning good money, but now are being converted to the florists' business again. As fast as the crops of lettuce come out the space is being used for propagating, or for lilies; there are no Dutch bulbs on the place this year. Propagation will be prosecuted with the idea that there will be a big demand for young stock, capable of consuming any surplus.

Fire caused serious damage in an apartment building at 3021 Southport avenue owned by Frank Grell, who maintains a flower shop on the first floor. Mr. Grell and his family, with tenants, were driven to the street by the flames.

Ernest Rober has been back in town for several days. For some time he has been in the employ of Carl Hagenburger, at Mentor, O., and looks to be enjoying better health than in many years.

Many wholesalers and retailers attended the funeral of Mrs. Emily Prickett, wife of John Prickett, one of the proprietors of the Des Plaines Floral Co., Des Plaines, Ill., January 10. Mrs. Prickett died of heart trouble January 7, after a short illness. She was 42 years old and was born in London, England. Funeral services were held at the family residence and burial was at the Town of Maine cemetery, Park Ridge, Ill. There were many flowers.

A suggestion that a memorial statue of the late Theodore Roosevelt be erected somewhere in the forest preserve district of Cook county met with the enthusiastic approval of Peter Reinberg, president of the county board.

O. J. Friedman has returned from a short business trip to New York.

Mr. and Mrs. M. Weiland, of Evanston, left for Denver, Colo., January 14, where they will visit their son, Henry, who is a grower there. From Denver they will continue west, visiting several California cities.

Visitors.

Rolf Zetlitz, proprietor of greenhouses at Dayton and Lima, O., was in the market last week purchasing rose plants for his Dayton place, which he recently purchased from the Miami Floral Co.

C. C. Pollworth, of Milwaukee, was in the city the latter part of last week, combining business and pleasure. Mrs. Pollworth accompanied him.

J. M. Johnson, of McKeesport, Pa., was a visitor in the local market the early part of the week.

Two Minneapolis growers were here January 13, after a trip to Richmond for another look at Rose Premier, which they are planting soon. They were Ralph A. Latham and O. H. Carlson.

A. F. J. Baur, of Baur & Steinkamp, Indianapolis, Ind., secretary of the American Carnation Society, was in Chicago the latter part of last week and brought with him a number of his new carnation, Ruth Baur, which he exhibited at the Chicago Florists' Club banquet, January 9, where it scored a total of 87 points.

INDIANAPOLIS.

The Market.

January business so far has been better than in other years. It has kept stock cleaned up, in fact. There was, however, an abundance of carnations the early part of the week, varying in quality and ranging in price from $3 to $10. The latter part of the week the market stiffened and carnations cleared freely.

Small flowers are becoming plentiful and, after such a prolonged shortage, are indeed welcome. Orchids are conspicuous in display windows. The bright days brought into bloom some nice sweet peas. Calendulas, violets, marguerites, mignonette, Roman hyacinths, blue

The Market.

The demand picked up considerably last week and now is keeping the market cleaned up from day to day. The supply remains the same as last week. Prices are firm. The demand from out of town is heavy.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The situation is slightly easier. Carnations are more plentiful and their price is lower; lower by comparison, only—from $6 to $10 per hundred this week; $3 to $10 at this time last year. Roses are much less plentiful than carnations. Their prices continue high, especially so on the shorter grades. Beauties are in fair demand at good prices. The crippled flowers that usually appear at this season even among the long-stemmed flowers do not pass muster until four-fifths of their value is sacrificed. There are more sweet peas. Some of them are choice. Double violets have reappeared. Valley is still coming into the market. Cattleya Trianæ is plentiful. There are hardly any other orchids. Gardenias do not cut much of a figure. Paper White narcissus and freesia are both obtainable in fair quantities. There are a few calendulas.

Business is light. Out-of-town orders are the mainstay of the market. The larger buyers show a disposition to take anything good that offers, when the price is not too high. There is no surplus except now and then in orchids and violets.

The Florists' Club.

The publicity meeting of the Florists' Club, held in the Adelphia hotel January 7, was one of the best gatherings ever held under the club's auspices. There were ninety-one present at the dinner on the roof garden, which preceded the meeting, while at the meeting itself there were over 200 assembled, including two ladies, Miss Eva Fletcher and her friend, Mrs. Livezey. The speakers were Major P. F. O'Keefe and Henry Penn, of Boston; William F. Gude, of Washington; Wallace R. Pierson, of Cromwell, Conn.; John Young, of New York, and our own Robert Craig, Charles H. Grakelow and W. F. Therkildson. It was in every way a delightful meeting and one that will go a long way toward putting the club back into its former position of leader among the florists' clubs in the land. Such meetings as this will make the growers feel that it is a privilege to display their novelties before the meetings. The exhibits were: Asplenium Nidus-avis, from the Joseph Heacock Co., Wyncote; Carnation Belle Washburn, from the Beckmore Greenhouses, of Wallingford, and fine roses from the Florex Gardens, of North Wales.

The Men of Today.

It is well known that the chairman of any committee is the man who is responsible for the successful work of the committee. So especial interest attaches to the chairmen of the several committees of the Florists' Club appointed by President E. A. Harvey. They form a group of the most active men in the profession, men who have the reputation of doing their work well. They are: Club room, Hugo Niessen; novelties, Carl A. Corts; essays, J. Otto Thilow; membership, Clarence U. Liggit; games, George Burton.

Theodore Roosevelt.

The death of Theodore Roosevelt has been profoundly felt all over the country. It will recall to a number of Philadelphians a scene in the White House a dozen years ago, where they went as members of the American Rose Society to present the President with a vase of wonderful Richmond roses. It was a happy occasion. Robert Craig made the presentation speech. Mr. Roosevelt responded and then shook hands all around. He said "Dee-lighted" to P. J. Lynch; he said "Dee-lighted" to Robert Pyle; he said "Dee-lighted" to every mother's son of us, whether he came from Philadelphia or from Fishkill-on-the-Hudson.

We shall miss Mr. Roosevelt sadly.

press in the Windy City gave much space to describing a new place that devotes its entire space to growing a single variety of rose, Mrs. Charles Russell. There were 33,000 plants, all told. It was considered a bold venture and it was understood to have been most successful.

What a surprise, then, to find that Victor Groshens has 60,000 Mrs. Charles Russell growing on his place at Glenside! Just think of it, 60,000 plants of this one variety of rose, none too easily propagated. Strangest of all, the three minors had their accredited representatives within a stone's throw of this great sight on their famous peace tour, and they never knew it. Do you wonder that they are still the minor papers?

It so chanced that Mr. Groshens was absent from Glenside on that sunny afternoon. The 60,000 Russells were there, bearing silent but eloquent testimony to Mr. Groshens' work. The houses looked neat and clean, the plants healthy; not a plant of any other variety was in sight.

Mr. Groshens' standard greenhouse is an iron frame of perhaps 29x500 feet. Each house contains three beds, each six feet wide. The beds are solid, with concrete sides. There are six rows of plants in each bed. The rule of the place appeared to be to give every respectable shoot one pinch and to keep ahead of the tying. The result was a large proportion of fine flowers borne on stems of good length and a total absence of crooked stems.

The impression given by Mr. Groshens' place is that when a grower grows a first-class variety really well, he can do better with his whole place in that one variety than he can with a mixture, but he must know a first-class variety and he must grow that variety well.

The street has always said that Victor Groshens made his work tell. Certainly the large place and the excellent order it displayed proved that this reputation was deserved.

The cultural point of especial interest was the comparatively small portion of the plants that have been flowered for Christmas and for midwinter. Not one-half, at a guess. This may have been due to the fifty per cent fuel restriction. It probably was, as several houses appeared to have been cut back and started up into active growth at the end of November or at about the time the embargo was lifted. The appearance of things gave the impression that Mr. Groshens felt absolutely confident in Mrs. Russell's ability to pay her board in the summer or at any other season of the year. This impression was strengthened by a large house not yet cut back, which had evidently been producing freely throughout the summer and fall.

The place is the place of a man who possesses skill, confidence and determination in a marked degree.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

On account of the small supply of flowers, the market continues to be on a strong basis. With the exception of carnations, which, consequent upon a greater supply, have declined materially in price, there is not much change in conditions to be noted. The buying is not heavy; in fact, is far from normal, but with the supply really inadequate and prices abnormally high, transactions are easy of accomplishment and clearances are made early.

Roses are most in demand and much more stock could be moved than is available. The quality is fine and the grades in supply are chiefly No. 1 and longer. Some fine Killarneys are noted and the new rose, Columbia, is in exhibition form.

The late planted carnations are in full cut and the supply is generous, but not enough to pull down prices far from the figures held during the holidays. Choice stock of Mrs. C. W. Ward and Benora bring slightly higher prices than the choicest of other varieties, which must be good to bring $8 per hundred.

There is a good supply of orchids, both of cattleyas and the spray sorts, and the movement is good. In the absence of really good sweet peas and a sufficiency of violets, cattleyas are enjoying an excellent call for corsage bouquet requirements. Good quality sweet peas are bringing $4 per hundred, and the best as much as $5, while violets in the best grades move quickly at $2. With the snappy cold weather now being experienced, the sweet pea supply is expected to increase and at rational prices a greater supply will certainly be welcomed.

Compared with other seasons, the supply of bulbous flowers is short. Even Paper Whites, which should be at flood height, are on the scarce side. What the supply of tulips will be this season is a matter for conjecture, but it is quite evident that plantings were anything but heavy.

Acacia has made its appearance, and brings $5 to $7 per bunch. There also is a small quantity of Buddleia asiatica coming in.

Primula malacoides is in good supply and sells, generally, at three small bunches for $1. Lupines have also put in an appearance and are snapped up at 50 cents per small bunch.

Yellow and white daisies, calendulas, pansies, Spanish iris, bouvardia, lilac and mignonette all move well, owing to the scarcity in other lines. Gardenias are plentiful and move at a variety of prices according to grade, from $9 per dozen down to $3.

Tuesday, January 14, was the Greeks' New Year holiday, but most of the Greek florists did business as usual. It might be said, however, that their buying on this day in this particular year was inordinately generous, and their relations with the wholesalers marked with surprising cordiality.

Everything in Florists' Supplies. Established 22 Years
201 North Seventh Avenue, SCRANTON, PA.

N. J., president of the Paterson Park Commission for the last eleven years, has been chosen to head the commission for another term. His unanimous reelection is a tribute to Mr. Sceery's administration of his office and reflects the confidence reposed in him as the head of an active organization. Mr. Sceery was last year a member of the International Flower Show committee.

In the family arrangements for the funeral of the late Col. Theodore Roosevelt, the request was made that flowers be omitted. There was, however, a plethora of offerings at the church in Oyster Bay, where the funeral services were held, and daily new floral tributes find their way to the grave.

The death is recorded, Tuesday, January 7, of Mrs. Patrick McGovern, widow of the well known Brooklyn florist, at her home, 122 Prospect park west, Brooklyn.

J. A. Peterson, of Cincinnati, was in town January 8, accompanied by Mrs. Peterson. The object of their visit was the introduction of the fine strain of cyclamen seed he has been raising for the trade.

There was a meeting of plantsmen and importers at the office of the Society of American Florists, 1170 Broadway, January 9, at which were present J. D. Eisele, of H. A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia; F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown, N. Y.; C. B. Knickman, of McHutchison & Co., New York; Winfried Rolker, New York, and P. M. Koster, Boskoop, Holland, president of the Holland Growers' Association. the embargo on importations of plants and bulbs to go into effect next summer.

Philip F. Kessler, president-elect of the New York Florists' Club, entertained the surviving ex-presidents of the club, the officers and members of the trade press, at dinner Saturday evening, January 11. Of the ex-presidents only six were absent. The host turned over the informal proceedings to Ex-President Patrick O'Mara, who, as toastmaster, acquitted himself in his usual fine manner. The object of the dinner, as Host Kessler explained in his invitation, was to obtain the views of his predecessors in office on the policies and work of the club in order that he might better appreciate the responsibilities of the office during his administration. There were highly interesting addresses forthcoming from the twenty persons present and the evening was much enjoyed. Mr. Kessler presented each guest with a handsome match case of solid silver as a memento of the occasion.

At the publicity rally of the Florists' Club of Philadelphia January 7, Robert Craig, in speaking of the value of a slogan, recounted that years ago the late Peter Henderson sought the aid of a local druggist for a preparation designed to kill rats and secured an effective one. So good was it that he advised that the druggist put it on the market. Mr. Henderson, on request, supplied the name, or slogan, for it, "Rough on Rats," a slogan which made the druggist more than a millionaire.

James McCollom, for the last sixteen years superintendent of parks at Paterson, N. J., and well known to the trade in this city, died January 2.

Geo. W. O'Berry, who formerly conducted a seed business on Broadway, Brooklyn, died January 4, at his home in Brooklyn.

Recent visitors: Mark Mills and W. K. Harris, Philadelphia; J. D. Eisele and George A. Strohlein, Riverton, N. J.; John N. Champion, New Haven, Conn.

Jasper R. Lewis, of the staff of Ralph M. Ward & Co., has been confined to his home at 736 Riverside drive by an attack of tonsillitis, but was able to get about again at the end of last week.

Manager Koehler, of the New York branch of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., says there is an active demand for metal wreaths.

Arthur T. Boddington notes that the many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Page, of Great Barrington, Mass., will be shocked to learn of the sudden death of Mrs. Page, January 4, 1919, following an operation at the House of Mercy hospital, Pittsfield, Mass. Mrs. Page is survived by her husband and three young children. She was a charming and accomplished Edinburgh woman and will be gratefully remembered for her hospitality and kindness to visiting horticulturists at Brookside. She had been active in Red Cross and other women's war work since 1914.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Market.

Business during the whole of the last week has been quiet. Even the heavy demand for funeral work has been reduced. Cold weather, accompanied by light snow flurries, has prevailed so far this season, little is being done in social affairs and the demand for cut flowers for this purpose is small. The majority of people do not seem to be spending money for cut flowers now, with the exception of funeral work, which has been heavy of late.

The supply of cut flowers at this time is light, but is equal to the demand. Roses are the chief item of stock. They are of fine quality and have excellent foliage. The lighter colors sell in preference to others and include Killarney and White Killarney, Ophelia and September Morn. Shawyer and Prima Donna are of splendid quality, but do not sell so readily. The prices, though

Mr. Florist, we have spent a fortune in perfecting our wax flowers so that they will look like the natural ones. Many successful florists have written us of the great aid these flowers give them in these times when natural flowers are so high in price; and florists all over the country today are combining the natural flowers with our artificial ones. If you have not learned this combination, why don't you just try to work in a few artificial Roses, Carnations, Sweet Peas, Callas, Easter Lilies, etc., along with your natural flowers in your floral pieces? In many cases you are really making a satisfied customer. For your own sake just give us a trial order amounting to $25.00 or less and watch for results.

Then again you should have some of our Wax Designs, Pillows, Crosses, Anchors, Sprays, Magnolia Wreaths, etc., just to make a display in your shop. If you have no display you will have no call for goods. A good display means you are creating a demand for your goods.

We guarantee that our prices are the lowest.

COMPARE OUR PRICES WITH OTHERS AND SEE IF YOU CANNOT SAVE FROM 25 to 30%.

lower than during the holidays, are still high. Violets are of good quality, but the demand is light and prices are lower than at any time during the last month. Those that are sold are chiefly used for funeral work. Good spring flowers are arriving and sell well. Among the arrivals during the last week were good potted hyacinths. Needless to say, these sell well. Daffodils, Paper Whites, freesias and Romans move easily. The supply of carnations is still small, but even the high figures do not prevent their selling. Most of them are retailing at $2.50 per dozen and the smaller grades at $2. There is a fair supply of both calla and Easter lilies on hand. The supply of stevia has slackened up considerably. Sweet peas are scarce. Potted plants include cinerarias, primulas, begonias and cyclamens. Well colored crotons and pandanus sell well. The demand lately for Boston ferns and palms has been excellent. Decorative greens are plentiful.

Various Notes.

R. G. McCarthy, of the M. Rice Co., Philadelphia, Pa., had a good line of baskets and other supplies at the Hotel Seneca January 7. He reported excellent business during his stay in the city.

The decorations at the shoe style show, which was held at the Powers hotel this week, were by George T. Boucher. They consisted of baskets of flowers and blooming plants.

Mrs. J. Schult, of Hilton, N. Y., has a good batch of cinerarias coming into bloom. In the same house she is growing gladioli, which are ten to twelve inches above ground. Her sweet peas are beginning to bloom freely.

The Rochester Florists' Association held its first meeting of the year January 13. As the association during the last two or three years has not been supported by its members as it ought to have been, steps are being taken by various members to boost the organization by procuring speakers who will give good, practical talks during the year that will benefit both the grower and retailer. It is expected that the growers and retailers of Rochester and vicinity will help to place the association on a more progressive basis.

Herman Zahn, of H. E. Wilson, made a flying visit to Elmira, N. Y., January 8.

The monotony of blooming plants has been relieved this week by the arrival of well developed Dutch hyacinths, which, needless to say, sell easily.

H. J. H.

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

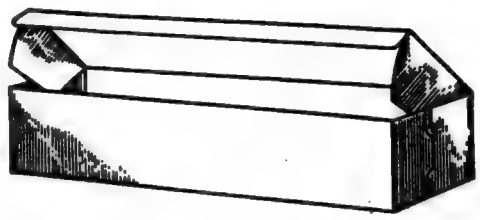
Notwithstanding that there has been only a slight falling off in prices, business continues excellent. The local florists are pushed on funeral work, which shows a tendency to increase because of the larger death rate from influenza and pneumonia. In this connection, however, it should be noted that the number of published death notices accompanied by the request to "omit flowers" is noticeably larger than ever before. Roses are not in heavy supply and command from $6 to $15 per hundred. Carnations are $3 to $8 per hundred. These constitute the bulk of the flowers obtainable.

Various Notes.

Harry Oakley has closed his retail store on Mathewson street.

S. S. Skidelsky, of S. S. Skidelsky & Co., Philadelphia, called upon the local trade last week.

Otto Hassert and wife, Hartford avenue, are recovering from influenza.



Charles Smith, Washington street, is confined to his home on Pawtucket avenue, East Providence, by influenza.

Robert M. Lamont and Courtland C. Earle, of the Quidnick Greenhouses, of Quidnick, were visitors in New York recently.

Joseph Koppelman, of Eddy street, is having trouble with his eyes again and has been confined to his home for several days on this account.

The Market.

Business last week was good. Supplies were more plentiful and it seemed good to be able to meet the requirements of the trade once more. Carnations and narcissi are arriving in quantities and cleaning up well. The cut of roses is far short of the demand. Easter lilies are well taken. Violets and freesias move slowly. Wallflowers, yellow daisies, mignonette and other novelties are picked up readily. Asparagus and adiantum are in good demand.

Various Notes.

A. Barber has returned from a business trip east.

Joseph Squillaciot, formerly with the Friedley Co., has opened a new flower shop on Cedar avenue and will operate under the name of the Cedar Flower Shop.

Fred Steinbrenner has been sick.

A fire which broke out at the store of W. Q. Potter did little damage.

H. H. Cade, of Youngstown, O., was a business visitor in the city last week.

Paul Hahn has been handicapped of late by the illness of his wife and two daughters, who assist him capably in the store.

W. Everett, with the Cleveland Cut Flower Co., has been helping out at the Park Flower Shop. W. F. B.

FREDONIA, N. Y.

The Northern Chautauqua Florists' Club celebrated its first anniversary January 2 at a meeting at which officers were elected as follows: President, Fred Sahle; vice-president, A. M. Jesse; secretary and treasurer, Charles F. Schwan.

Looking over the experience of the last year, we can see how much we lost by not organizing sooner, so that we might be brothers in business and get away from the idea of competition. Our club has brought us together, with better results for all than were dreamed of. Its membership is representative of the entire northern half of Chautauqua county and includes thirty-four stanch supporters, all of whom are readers of The Review. C. F. S.

NASHVILLE, TENN.

The Market.

The last two weeks have been unusually delightful weather. It has frozen every night, but the days have been warm and bright. The soldier boys have been returning home and the increased number of social functions has added to the demand for flowers. There has been a shortage of flowers ever since Christmas, in fact. This does not mean that there were not heavy cuts coming in every day, but that there was not enough stock to meet the large demand.

Rose crops were timed so well for the holidays that roses have been scarce since. There is still little bulbous stock except Paper Whites. A few azaleas are finding their way to the light, showing that there were more carried over and grown here than we supposed. The quality seems to be as good as in former years, though the flowers are not large.

The Tennessee State Florists' Association is to hold its annual meeting in the Hermitage hotel in connection with the meetings of the Tennessee nurserymen, fruit growers and bee keepers, January 28 to 30. It is planned to hold an exhibit at the same time, and everything indicates that this is to be more than ordinarily interesting, as there are to be several exhibits of new things. There are some live wires in different parts of Tennessee who are working overtime to make the state a leader in producing new and better flowers.

Various Notes.

Prof. G. M. Bentley, secretary of the State Florists' Association, writes that indications are that the coming convention will be the most interesting yet held, as the florists are especially interested in considering the changed conditions resulting from the close of the war.

All of the houses that were abandoned on account of the fuel restrictions are rapidly being put into commission, and practically all will be well stocked by spring.

Lee Geny is at home ill with the "flu" at present.

Thomas Joy was in Chattanooga last week looking after interests there. He reports a growing business.

J. F. Corbett has his entire plant in commission again and is using it all in the production of bedding plants for the trade. Mr. Corbett knows how to produce good stock and, as he has cut out the cut flower end, he will have more plants this season than ever before.

Charles Trichler has a splendid lot of young ferns. His bench of Veronas is unusually fine. He also is propagating thujas, biotas and retinisporas heavily.

The Joys are doing a great deal of remodeling at present, putting in new benches, etc. They are making cement supports for all of their new benches.

Leslie Littel closed his greenhouse for the winter and has been out of town of late. He will not open again till fall.

There is undoubtedly the smallest stock of young geraniums in this city that has been known in recent years. This undoubtedly will be a petunia and salvia year here.

McIntyre Bros. have been having a heavy cut of orchids of late. They are dismantling their old place and will sell the land for building lots. F. B.

NATIONAL PUBLICITY CAMPAIGN.

Work Commended.

Our promotion bureau is daily in receipt of letters from subscribers to the campaign fund commending highly the work of the committees.

William L. Rock, of the William L. Rock Flower Co., Kansas City, Mo., a letter from whom was recently published in these notes, writes, enclosing a check for $200 as his subscription for 1919: "I wish to state no bill or obligation has come into our establishment that it has given me more pleasure to meet than this one. I sincerely hope the florists throughout the land will be able to see the benefits that they will derive from this campaign. The awakening will perhaps be slow; the realization will be sure to follow. Your committees are perfectly right in requesting that remittance of subscription be made promptly, so that they themselves can see exactly where they stand."

A. Washburn & Sons, Bloomington, Ill., write: "We enclose check for $25 to cover our pledge for 1919. We are pleased with the way the work is carried on and wish to express our appreciation to the men looking after it. Our sales the last year showed an increase of ten and one-half per cent over those of 1917. Possibly some of it is due to the national campaign."

Contributors to the fund for 1919 should clearly understand that their contributions are to be used toward the publicity planned for this year. The 1918 campaign was conducted and financed wholly through the fund provided last year; consequently there is no deficit to be made up from this year's fund.

Philadelphia Campaign Rally.

There was an enthusiastic rally of the florists of Philadelphia and neighboring cities as part of the program of the Florists' Club of Philadelphia for its meeting January 7. Over 250 members of the trade were in attendance and interest ran high. Among the speakers on "Publicity for Flowers" were Henry Penn, Boston, chairman of the publicity committee; Major P. F. O'Keefe, Boston; Wallace R. Pierson, Cromwell, Conn.; William F. Gude, Washington, D. C.; Secretary John Young, New York; Robert Craig, Philadelphia, and W. F. Therkildson, Philadelphia. Charles H. Grakelow presided at the request of the club's president, E. A. Harvey, and in a most able manner introduced the speakers.

Henry Penn told of the wonderful results obtained from the 1918 campaign. Particularly surprising they were under the distressing business conditions experienced by all trades. With the work kept going, much greater returns now were to be expected. He emphasized the importance of an extended use of the slogan, "Say It with Flowers," and a general linking up with the campaign publicity through the use of the service offered by the promotion bureau. He advocated an extension of interest in the campaign, so that instead of $50,000 the fund annually should reach $150,000, and bring a corresponding increase in benefit. Evidence of wide benefit from the campaign Mr. Penn fully demonstrated.

Major O'Keefe outlined the campaign at considerable length. Some of the points he made were as follows: Advertising interests and brings additional business. The cost of a single page in the Saturday Evening Post, $5,000, looked like a lot of money, but business men who were anything but crazy were keeping on using such space year in and year out. To send a postcard to each person reached by a page in that publication would cost $23,000, and then not tell the story so well. There was spent last year on magazines of nation-wide circulation $35,000 of the florists' publicity fund. It was necessary to interest people in flowers and make them like them. Advertising in the face of the unfavorable conditions of last year was bold, but turned out to be wonderfully successful; even had it kept business only up to normal, it would have been a great achievement. It was advisable each year to keep on building prestige and adding to what had gone before. One cannot force, but may advise a customer. The January and February features of the campaign would be carried in thirty-three magazines, at a cost of one-twentieth of a cent per number of each, the slogan, "Say It with Flowers," predominating in all matter. Philadelphia's share alone of the circulation was estimated to be 350,000, and retailers should make the most of it. There were 3,000 birthdays every week in the population of that city, a florist's opportunity in every one of them.

Wallace R. Pierson's remarks were chiefly directed to growers, whose interest in the campaign should be paramount, as they were the producers of the flowers to be exploited.

William F. Gude declared that the publicity campaign was a great factor in stimulating the florists' business. Everyone was benefited, so everyone should contribute, and not stand aside and "let George do it." All should tie up at once to the campaign and make personal endeavor as well.

Other Points Scored.

Secretary Young spoke at considerable length, dwelling chiefly upon the advantages to be derived from a liberal use made of the various aids provided by the promotion bureau's signs, electrotypes featuring the magazine advertisements, lantern slides, stickers, and so forth, all provided at cost and found to be great business bringers. The live members of the trade throughout the country were actively interested in the campaign, contributing their time and money to make it a success. The results last year were excellent and would be better this year, as the movement was growing rapidly. As showing the interest already in evidence, he mentioned that the first two days' mail after the bills to subscribers had gone out contained $3,000 and there was a pledged fund of $27,000 to start with. Those who contributed and tied up with the work of the campaign received most benefit.

Robert Craig, who was given an ovation, made one of his characteristic addresses. Speaking of flowers, he said that love of beauty existed in every mind; some admired pictures or jewels, others horses or dogs, but everybody loved flowers; therefore, the thought of flowers should be constantly before the public.

W. F. Therkildson, to whom credit was given as the real originator of the campaign, expressed his great belief in slogans, and remarked that he considered the slogan, "Say It with Flowers," really wonderful in conception. The campaign, he said, should have everybody in the trade back of it. A large sum was subscribed at the meeting.

Department of Registration.

Public notice is hereby given that the Conard & Jones Co., West Grove, Pa., submits for registration the new plants mentioned below:

Canna Nokomis—A hybrid of the famous Firebird, without any of the bad habits of the parent plant. Height, five feet. The foliage is a combination of emerald green and bronze, beautifully veined, making a lovely setting for the large, vivid crimson flowers. The flowers are most attractive, having a rich, silky sheen on the petals, and the color is darker than that of any other bronze-foliaged canna with bloom near this size.

Canna The President—Height, four feet. In color it is a rich, glowing scarlet, and the immense, firm, rounded flowers, seven inches across when open, are produced on strong, erect stalks, well above the large, rich green foliage. The President is superior to any other red variety in the quantity and also quality of bloom, and the firm flowers are able to resist drought and heat to a remarkable degree.

Any person objecting to this registration, or to the use of the proposed names, is requested to communicate with the secretary at once. Failing to receive objection to the registration, the same will be made three weeks from this date.

lead. There is a strong demand for short-stemmed stock in other varieties, as the principal activity now is in funeral work, for which the lesser grades are preferred. Carnations have been off crop since the first of the year. There is no oversupply in any variety and prices hold up well, with $5 per hundred for the top price. The growers claim the crop coming on will be large, especially if the warm weather continues. Violets have been in good supply and prices have dropped to $1 per hundred for the best stock. Sweet peas are selling well, but the stock is limited to a few thousands, which clean up daily at good figures.

Bulbous stock is not in as large supply as in former years. Paper Whites are becoming more plentiful, however. Easter lilies and freesias are in great demand, but scarce. Valley also has a large call and fancy stock is not plentiful. Calendulas and mignonette are inclined to be druggy, likewise cattleyas.

Greens have been plentiful and the demand has been good. Galax, smilax

Applications for membership from Julius Schaeffer and Charles Connon were reported favorably and they were elected.

A discussion was conducted by J. F. Ammann, H. C. Irish, F. C. Weber, Jr., and W. E. Ogle on "The Cost of Production," with a view to developing cooperation between the wholesaler and the retailer. The matter was referred to the publicity committee for adjustment.

The matter of advertising during the holidays was also brought up for consideration and copies of Christmas advertisements of firms in other places were shown. It was decided to leave this matter in the hands of the publicity committee for further discussion.

R. J. Mohr, of Chicago, a former resident of St. Louis and member of the club, was present and renewed old acquaintance.

Charles Wors, Jr., who is home on furlough from Camp Kearny, Cal., was present and gave an interesting talk on camp life.

Alex. Lurie, of the Missouri Botanical Garden, entertained the members with comical illustrated lantern slides on what he called "Hearticulture."

Treasurer Smith's report showed the club to be well off financially. Several questions handed the secretary were read and the discussions thereon brought this interesting meeting to a close.

The next meeting, as announced by the trustees, will be held at C. A. Kuehn's wholesale house February 13.

The attendance was larger than usual, as thirty members were present when President Rowe called the meeting to order. There was a discussion of prices of cut stock for the holidays, in which the members participated. It was the consensus that business for the season has been satisfactory.

In order to increase the membership of this association it was decided to hold a get-together meeting in the near future and invite all the growers in the county. President Rowe stated that in view of the great good this association has done for its members, he sees no reason why every grower in the county should not be a member. The next meeting takes place February 5.

Chairman L. Jules Bourdet, of the St. Louis Retail Florists' Association, was present.

Gardeners' Meeting.

The St. Louis Association of Gardeners held its meeting January 8 at the Forest park greenhouses. The following officers were elected to serve during the year: President, L. J. Jensen; vice-president, John Moritz; second vice-president, George Pring; third vice-president, Stephen Beer; fourth vice-president, L. Vanderiem; secretary, Hugo M. Schaff, reëlected; treasurer, Ernest Strehle. Installation of officers will take place at the February meeting, at which the subject of discussion will be "Lawn Making."

Various Notes.

Chairman Bourdet has called a meeting of the publicity committee for January 14. Chairman Hummert has called a meeting of his committee for the same date and both meetings will be held at spective camps. Charles is in the army and Joseph in the navy.

Otto Sander's big job during the last week was a $200 casket cover for a railroad official, which showed excellent workmanship. Mr. Sander says funeral work has been heavy with him since the holidays.

J. F. Ammann, of Edwardsville, Ill., president of the S. A. F., G. Grossart and W. E. Ogle, of Belleville, Ill., George Madsen, of Alton, Ill., and Charles Johann, of Collinsville, were visitors January 9 and attended the Florists' Club meeting in the afternoon.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

SAN DIEGO, CAL.

Business has kept up well since New Year's, but flowers have been scarce. There has not been such a shortage of flowers since 1913, the year of the frost in California.

Roses received from northern markets have been disappointing in respect to both quality and prices. Good roses have been selling at a premium, long-stemmed Columbia having brought as high as $25 per dozen. No roses were sold at less than $5 per dozen.

The local florists would like to have our friends in the east know that while it is true that this is a land of flowers, most of the cut flowers, except violets, are grown indoors, and labor and other expenses are higher here than in the east and flowers as a consequence are not grown in great quantities. We say this because we have received F. T. D. orders from eastern houses for roses for $2 and $3 per dozen, some of them to be delivered to points a good distance out of town. We lost money on these orders, but filled them to encourage the movement.

All the florists here report good business and everything going well.

The death of Mrs. George F. Otto is noted in another column of this issue.

A. D.

LOS ANGELES.

The Market.

The abnormally high prices have acted as a check to business. In the last few days a number of roses have been used in funeral work which a week before could not be obtained for any price. Carnations were reduced in price somewhat, but still remain extremely high and in good demand. Greenhouse carnations are selling at prices hitherto unheard-of in the surrounding towns. The city retailers are still busy with funeral work, of which there seems to be no end. Outside of this there is little doing. Besides the two principal items of stock, there are good small flowers of all kinds, but in limited supply. Freesias are coming in, but they are few in number and high in price. The run on strawflowers and other everlastings continues. Callas are scarce, owing to frost in some of the northern localities. They are in good demand, owing to the shortage of Easter lilies. Greens as a rule are on the short side also.

The nurserymen all report an awakening of interest in their stocks and all are looking forward to a great season's business. Already nursery stock is moving freely and inquiries from other sections show that the demand is good. The fruit tree men are well sold up, although the retail trade has hardly started, and it looks as though it will be hard to obtain the popular varieties in these lines. As the weather becomes warmer there will be a movement of palms to the east, several growers having sold carload lots. The frost reported from some localities does not appear to have harmed lath-house stock, while in the more favored spots Cocos plumosa is green and looks as well as in September. Well developed plants fit for shipping are likely to be in short supply.

Various Notes.

By a recent arrangement, Tony Tassano becomes sole proprietor of the business of Tassano Bros., on Wall street, also of the nursery and growing grounds at Glendale. Angelo, his brother, is taking over the place at Artesia and will grow stock there for the firm. He is considering the erection of a large range of glass there.

W. Armacost & Co. are showing the finest Russell roses ever seen on this market, their grower evidently having hit upon the right treatment for this magnificent rose. The new rose Columbia also is exceptionally fine, not only in the flowers but in the foliage as well, which is of a hard, healthy appearance and free from blemish of any kind. Naturally such stock commands high prices.

F. Sperry, of the L. A. Floral Co., started on a business trip to Bakersfield, January 6.

F. Howard, of Howard & Smith, is in San Diego this week.

J. Austin Shaw, who is visiting in Hollywood, is an occasional caller and reports having experienced much relief from his lameness since coming to California.

A. F. Borden, of the Redondo Floral Co., is quarantined at home on account of Mrs. Borden being ill with influenza. Mr. Borden had a slight attack of the disease a week ago, but recovered quickly.

On account of many of the men prominent in the trade being out of town or ill, the meeting of the Florists' Club called for January 8 was postponed. This was the more unfortunate as the meeting was to have included the election of officers, which now must stand over until a future meeting.

Albert Morris, son of O. M. Morris, of the Morris & Snow Seed Co., Inc., is the latest victim of influenza in the trade. Mr. Morris is one of the biggest hustlers in a hustling firm and everyone connected therewith hopes to see him back shortly in his usual good health. This store has been repainted and put in readiness for what is likely to be a banner season's business.

S. Murata is settling down to work after his trip and is busy meeting old friends and customers, all of whom compliment him on his healthful appearance after his sea voyage.

An immense basket of Columbia roses in F. Lichtenberg's store this week has caused much favorable comment, and it is generally conceded that a finer display was never seen in this city. Among the orchids shown were some superb flowers of Lælia anceps alba, which, with good Phalænopsis amabilis, made a choice showing.

Mrs. Edith Brewer, of Dinuba, Cal., was in the city this week on a business trip.

H. R. Richards.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

This is decidedly a growers' market, all available stock cleaning up at higher prices than were ever known in San Francisco at this time of the year. There have been no recessions since the holidays and the present ratio of supply and demand does not give promise of lower prices in the immediate future. The retailers rebel more or less at paying the ruling prices, on the ground that their customers are educated to getting a big showing for their money, which it is impossible to give them with wholesale quotations so much higher than usual. Funeral work is the principal feature of the demand, and it is particularly hard to obtain cheaper grades of stock for moderate-priced floral pieces. To further complicate matters, galax leaves are hard to obtain. The wholesalers complain that eastern shippers not only do not fill their orders, but a good part of the time do not even answer their letters and telegrams, indicating that they have all the business they can handle nearer home. The florists have resorted to the use of magnolia leaves to a considerable extent and also to the use of artificial wreaths, which is not customary in California, to say the least, and against the principles of the trade. The question now arises whether prices will drop to old-time standards when the supply of flowers increases to normal. The higher cost of production is advanced by the growers as the reason why they should not do so. It is pointed out by one of the large greenhouse operators that fuel oil now costs $1.90 a barrel, in comparison with 80 cents before the war, and that other costs have increased proportionately.

Carnations are getting more plentiful, but the general situation is not relieved noticeably on that account, as the supply of roses is shorter than a week ago, showing the effects of heavy cutting in December. Few roses move for less than $5 a dozen, which is usually a top price here. Sales of American Beauties at $18.50 and $20 a dozen have been recorded in the last week or two. Carnations continue to clean up at from $2 to $2.50 a bunch. A limited amount of bulbous stock is readily absorbed. Freesias are the principal item and they hardly reach the market before they are sold out. A few daffodils made their appearance this week. The time for a generous supply of bulbous stock is anxiously awaited. Violets continue scarce and the foliage shows the effects of frost. Orchids have fallen into line for an increase in price. Cattleyas, formerly sold by the growers at 50 cents and retailed for $1, now net the growers 75 cents and retail at $1.50. Flowering plants left over from Christmas were practically cleaned up at New Year's. Final figures on New Year's business show an increase over previous years.

Various Notes.

Mrs. R. E. Darbee says the high prices and scarcity of stock here have curtailed shipping to a considerable extent, but that store trade holds up remarkably well. She is handicapped in handling the latter on account of four of her employees being down with the influenza.

The E. W. McLellan Co. is bringing in some nice Golden Spur daffodils, greenhouse grown. The bulbs had been outside for three years. Last summer they were dug up and planted inside and they have done nicely.

M. C. Main, manager of the Seabright Bulb Co., Santa Cruz, Cal., has been in San Francisco for several days. He drove up in his auto with his mother and has made the rounds of the local trade thoroughly. He has practically sold out his large production of 1918 gladiolus bulbs.

It was with sincere regret that the local trade learned this week of the death of W. J. Meldrum, one of the leading florists of Sacramento, Cal.

The United Flower & Supply Co. reports plenty of shipping orders but inability to fill many of them on account of the shortage of flowers, violets being particularly hard to get.

The California Floral Co. enjoyed an excellent holiday trade, according to Steve Fazio, and business has held up well since.

Manager Stelling, of the retail store of the MacRorie-McLaren Co., is back on duty after an absence of several days on account of illness. Walter Hoff is back at his desk also after being on the sick list.

F. C. Jaeger, of F. C. Jaeger & Son, reports a rush of funeral work.

Albert O. Stein's force has been busy with funeral work since the holiday rush, and also has had a good many small table decorations. Mr. Stein says there is not a great deal of elaborate entertaining at present, but there are a good many small luncheon parties, calling for more or less expensive centerpieces.

Miss Recardie Lee Murray reports a large amount of funeral work, with a nice hotel decoration thrown in occasionally to relieve the monotony. In the last week she has executed two good-sized luncheon decorations at the Clift hotel, using snapdragons and narcissi principally. Her cousin, who is associated with her in the business, has been off duty for some time on account of illness.

The New Year's eve celebration brought big business to Julius Eppstein, the St. Francis hotel florist. He decorated 200 tables in the hotel alone, for which it took two days to make the centerpieces. Mr. Eppstein says business has held up remarkably well since the holidays, but the high prices prevailing for cut flowers now he fears will curtail the demand, if continued indefinitely.

Charles Stappenbeck, the American Florist, Polk street, says he cannot remember flowers being so scarce and high in price in San Francisco since 1907. While New Year's business was not so good as Christmas, Mr. Stappenbeck says it was better than the previous year. He has a fine cut of roses, which are welcome, with flowers as a whole on the short side of the market.

Enomoto & Co. have a fine cut of roses, and they manage to get enough violets to do some shipping, although not nearly enough to fill orders.

flowers are becoming more plentiful, especially roses and carnations, as the demand since January 1 has dropped off at least sixty per cent, compared with that of the last three months.

Arthur Boehnning has resigned his position with the Eugene Flower Shop and taken the management of Adolph Donart's House of Flowers, succeeding Mr. Sanders, who has resigned to go back into the growing business with Mr. Donart, at Coeur d' Alene, Id. Mr. Boehnning has been prominent in the retail trade of Spokane for several years. He promises Spokane a modern flower shop, as he is remodeling and redecorating the salesroom and installing an up-to-date refrigerator.

SEATTLE, WASH.

The Market.

Stock of all kinds is scarce. There is barely enough to carry on business. Funeral work is the principal feature of the demand and good prices prevail. Never before in the history of the flower trade in the northwest, in fact, have prices been received equal to those in force at present. Carnations bring $2 per dozen. Roses are selling at from $2 per dozen for short-stemmed stock to $7.50 for long-stemmed. Ophelia, Russell, Columbia, Ward, Killarney and White Killarney, Hoosier Beauty and Rose Marie, all of good quality, are the varieties noted. Most of the rose stock is shipped in from California.

Various Notes.

Rosaia Bros. are sending in fine roses and orchids from their range at Thomas, Wash. G. Bjorkman has gone from the store to the range.

Stuber & Richardson are cutting good carnations.

C. E. Sullivan, formerly manager of the Hollywood Gardens, is now with the Woodlawn Flower Shop.

William Hawkins has purchased a range of glass near Sacramento, Cal.

Charles Gilmer, who was rose grower for the Thomas Floral Co. when he entered the service of Uncle Sam, has returned to Camp Lewis, at American Lake, Wash., from Camp Lee, Petersburg, Va., and expects to don overalls and jumper in the near future.

The Market.

The market is settling down to more nearly normal conditions, although funeral work still keeps all hands rushing. However, the last few days have been cold and clear and the influenza will soon be wiped out, it is hoped.

This week has marked an increase in the general flower supply, although some members of the local trade are still having difficulty in obtaining enough blooms to meet their orders for floral designs. The supply of roses is still short and the prices are unreasonably high. Carnations are in much greater supply than last week, and the prices asked for them are more moderate. Callas and cold storage Easter lilies are in good supply and bring good prices. Paper Whites and Soleil d'Or narcissi are becoming more plentiful; sweet peas and violets are in better supply and snapdragon and calendulas are being cut. Pussy willows were noticed in some of the store windows, adding greatly to the attractiveness of the display. Many of the florists report that bulbous stock is coming along well and will be on time for the Easter trade. Now that the coal restrictions are raised, some of the florists who closed their houses on that account probably will stock them for the coming season.

Various Notes.

The Park Garden and Flower Shop report a splendid crop of carnations on hand. The concern is also cutting a good supply of sweet peas and violets and its snapdragons are just commencing to bloom. Funeral work is still in great demand here.

James Horan & Son recently designed several of the largest wreaths made by them in some time for the Bullard funeral. One, a 5-foot wreath, consisted of white camellias, Ophelia roses and maidenhair fern; another immense wreath, a tribute from the employees of the Bullard factory, was made of orchids and white camellias and narcissi and Columbia roses were used in the base. Stephen Horan has the sympathy of the trade in the death of his brother, James H. Horan, which is reported in another column of this issue.

John Reck & Son made a pall of violets last week. An immense spray of orchids and lily of the valley was designed to place on top of it. The general run of business is good, although people are still objecting to the high prices.

Robert H. Hawkins reports that funeral work still keeps up. An attractive window decoration consisting of potted plants was noticed here recently.

Fred C. Kolb expects to cut an immense crop of carnations before spring, although these flowers are off crop at present. The carnations grown here are exceptionally good, especially Laddie, the new pink variety.

James E. Beach reports that the cut of roses is small. Carnations are coming in nicely and bulbous stock is doing well. He is cutting large quantities of calla and Easter lilies, which move rapidly. Some immense pieces were designed recently, in which large numbers of Ophelia and Killarney roses were used. George Summers was a visitor recently at the greenhouses. I. L. B.

NORTHAMPTON, MASS.

The regular meeting of the Holyoke and Northampton Florists' and Gardeners' Club was held January 7 at the greenhouses of Butler & Ullman, Northampton, Mass., with a good attendance. It was decided to offer a prize for the best exhibit at each meeting for the coming year, to stimulate interest in bringing out exhibits.

As it was carnation night, a fine exhibition of these flowers was staged. There were twenty vases from the four growers represented.

Butler & Ullman won the first prize with a vase of Laddie and were awarded also a certificate of merit for the extensive decorations at their greenhouses for the occasion. O. H.

Seed Trade News

President, F. W. Bolgiano, Washington, D. C.; secretary-treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

PEAS and beans cannot be low in price so long as farmers can get present prices for food crops.

THERE were 555 bags of seeds on S. S. Manhattan, from London, which reached New York last week.

W. W. JOHNSON & SONS, Ltd., Boston, England, have placed at the disposal of the Belgian government $5,000 worth of seeds for distribution among the Belgian farmers and gardeners.

WILL someone, preferably a member of the Federal Horticultural Board, please tell us what menace to American agriculture is to be found in the importation of Dutch gladiolus bulbs?

OHIO incorporations listed January 4 include that of the Toledo Bean & Seed Warehouse Co., Toledo, with capital stock scheduled at $25,000 and incorporators named as G. R. Forrester and E. B. Slawson.

THE California seed growers are doing less traveling than usual this year. They might have booked all their 1918 acreage by correspondence and several of them think they can book, without leaving the desk, anything they can grow for 1919.

E. JEKNAVORIAN and J. Tayian, of San Francisco, have leased 120 acres of the old J. T. Sternes place near Nuestro, in Sutter county, Cal., with the intention of starting in the seed growing business in that section. This year they will plant eighty acres of the tract to Telephone peas for seed. The balance will be used for experimental tobacco planting and garden truck.

IT is reported that the office and warehouse of the Chesmore Seed Co., St. Joseph, Mo., have been removed to 210-12 South Third street and the retail store reestablished at 409 Felix street, one door north of the former location of this branch. This concern is starting the new year with improved facilities for handling its increasing volume of business, which warranted expansion.

CANNERS TO VISIT CHICAGO.

The twelfth annual convention of the National Canners' Association and its allied trade organizations—the National Canned Food and Dried Fruit Brokers' Association, the machinery manufacturers and the Kraut and Pickle Packers' Association, together with the several sections of specialized canning—will be held next week at Hotel La Salle, Chicago, with plans indicating an unusually large gathering of the canning fraternity. All the wholesale seed houses catering to the canning trade will have representatives there.

The sessions open on Monday and will continue through Friday. Plenty of sociability has been provided and, as on DIRECT FROM HOLLAND.

It has been practically three years since there has been free and unrestricted shipping from Holland. A little stock has come across all the time, by way of England or on steamers sailing by grace of the kaiser, but the Nieuw Amsterdam, on its arrival January 5, 1919, not only carried the first lot of stock that has come across since the war ended, but the first lot in a long time for which no special dispensations were necessary. The cargo contained the following:

Rynveld, F., & Sons—65 cs flower seeds.
Maltus & Ware—47 cs shrubs and trees.
International Forwarding Co.—1 cs shrubs and trees, 200 cs plants.
Maltus & Ware—52 cs shrubs and trees, 25 cs plants, 157 cs dormant shrubs and trees.
Vandegrift, F. B., & Co.—30 cs plants.
Ouwerkerk, P.—123 cs trees and shrubs, 19 cs plants.
Downing, R. F., & Co.—5 cs herbaceous plants.
McHutchison & Co.—8 cs roses, 111 cs shrubs and trees.
Maltus & Ware—15 cs shrubs, 45 cs bulbs, 100 cs roots, 137 pgs bulbs, 7 pgs flower roots, etc.
Hempstead, O. G., & Sons—25 cs roots.
Hampton, J. W., Jr., Co.—24 cs roots, 67 cs bulbs and roots.
Van Waveren & Sons, Ltd.—597 cs roots, 179 cs bulbs.
Lang, R. F.—131 cs roots, 10 cs bulbs, 35 cs bulb roots.
Bruce, J. A., & Co.—5 cs bulbs, 1 cs roots.
Sheldon, G. W., & Co.—9 cs bulbs, 16 cs roots.

BRITISH BOYCOTT GERMAN SEEDS.

The British seed trade has voted a 5-year boycott on German seeds, regardless of what the peace conference may do.

At the annual meeting of the Agricultural Seed Trade Association of the United Kingdom it was decided not to trade with the Germans for five years and steps were taken to encourage the home production of the grass seeds formerly obtained on the eastern side of the Rhine.

As a further step toward the independence of the British grass seed trade, it was voted to seek the establishment of a National Institute of Agricultural Botany at Cambridge, to the end that Zurich shall no longer be looked upon as the central testing station for practically the whole of Europe. There is reason, the chairman said, why London should become the recognized station for at least the whole of Great Britain. Whatever method of testing was finally decided upon, it should be one that would satisfy not only Great Britain, but also the Continent and America. In the meantime the best way out of the difficulties which had so recently arisen, and which were likely to arise in the future, was for both buyer and seller to have their testings done at the government station. In all serious disputes the government tests were taken as final, he stated, and the authorities there would be prepared to have the same sample or samples tested at the government stations in London, Edinburgh and Dublin, and in the event of these three tests not being exactly uniform, the average of such to be absolutely final.

ADDING TO GLADIOLUS ACREAGE.

It is stated that the Michigan Bulb Farm, which is one of the concerns associated with Westerbeek & Klyn and the General Bulb Co. interests in Holland, has just bought two tracts adjoining its property at Benton Harbor, Mich. One purchase was ten acres, the other fifteen. As the farm previously had seventy-five acres, the purchase brings the total to an even century. Last season sixty acres were planted with gladioli; it will be more in the 1919 season, large quantities of planting stock being brought over from Holland before the quarantine goes into effect June 1.

THE REVISED BURPEE BOOK.

An advance copy of Burpee's Annual for 1919 shows many changes. They have listed all vegetables under four heads, namely: Edible seeds, root crops, greens and salads and vegetable fruits. No effort was made to hold to a strict botanical classification; nor did they attempt to put the vegetables alphabetically under the various heads, but placed them either forward or back under their heads, as their prominence and use would warrant.

Another change is the use of the pink pages, which heretofore were devoted to novelties, as a place for cataloguing

VICTORY SEED FROM A VICTORY GARDEN

Last season we did our bit by increasing the supply of seed of some of the best vegetables that we know. We simply enlarged our home garden from feet to acres, and gave you the benefit of high-grade seed at small cost. From start to finish our personal attention was given to every detail and better seed can not be had. Following is our complete list:

JOHN BAER TOMATO, the finest and earliest tomato on earth. Clean, bright seed from selected fruit, postpaid, ¼ oz., 20c; ½ oz., 30c; oz., 50c; ¼ lb., $1.75; lb., $6.50.

KEENEY'S RUSTLESS WAX, and IMPROVED GOLDEN WAX BEANS, by express, qt., 40c; pk., $3.00.

IMPROVED SOLDIER BEAN, a new old variety, an all-rounder, and the best baking bean in the world. Sturdy, upright bush, very productive, yielding large pods filled with big, white, meaty beans. You will rejoice over a patch of our IMPROVED SOLDIER BEANS. Price, by express, qt., 60c; pk., $4.00.

IMPROVED GIANT GOLDEN BANTAM SWEET CORN, grown and reselected by us for years. Strong grower with heavy yield of big, luscious ears. Price, by express, qt., 40c; pk., $2.50. Large ears, $1.00 doz.

RED COB BANTAM, the sweetest corn known, previously sold only in packets. Price, by express, pint, 60c; qt., $1.00; pk., $6.00. Large ears, $1.50 doz.

Special attention is called to our Soldier Bean and to our two varieties of Sweet Corn. No garden, large or small, should be without these good things. Cash must accompany all orders. When desired will ship by parcel post and C. O. D. the postage.

Every florist should have a vegetable garden. By using good seed success is assured, and by using the varieties here offered you will have the finest there is. Order early and have your supply of seed in hand.

"I am frank to say," remarks Mr. Therkildson, "that when the classification of vegetables was first proposed to me I strongly objected to it, but Mr. Burpee was insistent that we investigate just how this would be received. We sent out letters to the experiment stations all over the country and the reply to these letters evidenced not a doubt that the experiment stations considered it an excellent arrangement. The letters of endorsement and suggestions that we received are largely responsible for this classification. While I am willing to admit that it is a decided change in the catalogue, I feel equally sure that it will produce results."

The number of pages is reduced from 216 to 152. This was done in expectation that the Pulp and Paper Division of the War Industries Board might order a reduction in catalogue sizes. Of course, when they removed the restrictions, the catalogue was too far advanced to return to the old size. However, it reduced the postage 1 cent, making it 3 cents instead of 4 cents postage, as in former years.

CATALOGUES RECEIVED.

Riverview Nursery & Seed Co., McMinnville, Tenn.—"List of Stock for Landscape and Park Planting." These shade trees, shrubs, vines and ferns are intended, says the company, "for immediate planting or sale," and are distinct from the "smaller, lighter-grade or lining-out stock," which also can be supplied.

W. H. Barrett, Adrian, Mich.—"Select Tomato Seeds, 1919 Crop," a handsome, well illustrated booklet, describing a dozen standard varieties of tomatoes.

L. E. Williams, Exeter, N. H.—"List of Collected Native Trees, Shrubs and Plants," a 16-page catalogue, without illustrations. Mr. Williams states that he can supply the seeds as well as any desired sizes of plants, as he "makes a specialty of collecting native tree and plant seeds."

Flora-Croft Gladiolus Gardens, Lansing, Mich.—An artistic little catalogue of gladioli, with suggestions about the culture and harvesting of the crop. A few varieties of perennials also are listed.

O. P. Jackson Seed Co., Inc., Houston, Tex.—Illustrated catalogue of "Quality Brand" seeds and supplies, with "instruction tables" for gardeners and farmers; thirty-two pages and colored cover. "Remember," says the book, "that your garden in Texas works all the year. Every month you can plant some seed."

Livingston Seed Co., Columbus, O.—"Seed Annual for 1919," an illustrated catalogue of vegetable, farm and flower seeds, tools and sundries. Contains ninety-six pages, besides the colored cover, and is so compactly printed as to be almost complete in its line. The prices are quoted according to the cental system. The company announces that the 1918 garden seed crops, with some exceptions, were more satisfactory than for several years.

Elm City Nursery Co., New Haven, Conn.—General nursery stock, hardy roses and perennials; a 36-page book, arranged in this company's customary fashion—condensed, clear and businesslike.

Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia, Pa.—"Dreer's Garden Book, Eighty-first Annual Edition," 224 pages, with numerous illustrations in the text and four full-page colored pictures. True to its name, the book contains lists of nearly everything that is wanted in the garden, in the way of seeds, plants, roots and general equipment, besides catering to the florist and even offering to supply many of the wants of the farmer. And, true also to its past record, the book is compiled and edited in excellent style. The cover bears a new and tasteful design, in light brown, green and gold.

F. J. Grootendorst & Sons, New York, N. Y.—Wholesale list of coniferous and large-leaved evergreens, deciduous trees, shrubs, roses, vines and perennials, from the firm's nurseries at Boskoop, Holland. As agent for L. Renault, of Orleans, France, the firm also offers small evergreens and ornamentals for lining out.

Carnations are scarce. Orchids are fine, and good valley is making its appearance. Extra fine Hoosier Beauties, as well as Killarney roses, are arriving, and Columbia roses still hold their own. Narcissi, mignonette and freesias also are good. Stevia is scarce. Violets are of fine quality. Easter lilies are excellent, as are calla lilies. Ophelia and Sunburst roses are in good condition.

Business seems to have slackened up the last week.

Various Notes.

Louis Kirch, chairman of the sick committee of the Kentucky Society of Florists, reports that Miss Nellie Abell, who has been ill for three or four weeks, is now confined to her home. Miss Emma Baumer is also on the sick list, as well as August Baumer. Mr. Baumer is able to come to the store each day.

The florists throughout the city did a bigger business this year than ever before. While they had hard times in securing flowers, they did not have to disappoint their customers. The stock this Christmas was of better quality than for years. L. K.

New Glasgow, N. S.—William Chisholm has been ill for months and is not yet fully recovered. War conditions have had their effect on the trade here, but an improvement is looked for from now on.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

President, J. R. Mayhew, Waxahachie, Tex.; vice-president, J. Edward Moon, Morrisville, Pa.; secretary, Charles Sizemore, Louisiana, Mo.; counsel, Curtis Nye Smith, 19 Congress St., Boston, Mass.; treasurer, J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Ia.

EASTERN nurserymen report the labor situation as easing rapidly.

A LOT of people will be in position to plant ornamentals in the spring.

THE Clair Manor Nurseries, Inc., Manhattan, N. Y., is the name of a concern chartered December 29 to grow farm products of every description. Capital stock is stated at $90,000 and incorporators are named as follows: G. Nasseuer, A. T. Scharps and H. K. Daly, all of New York city.

E. M. SHERMAN'S VIEWS.

"At the present time the outlook is for a shortage of some things in the fruit line," says E. M. Sherman, president of the Sherman Nursery Co., Charles City, Ia. "I am inclined to think, however, that there will be enough ornamental stock to go around.

"I look for a fair volume of business in the nursery lines next spring. In some sections business is better than a year ago, while in others it seems to have slumped. It is difficult now to tell what the average will be."

WHAT'S THE MATTER?

A great majority of the nurserymen of the country are confident that the prices the trade is asking for both fruit and ornamental stock are not high enough to meet the present cost of producing and marketing the output. This is proven by the observations on the condition of the nursery stock market made by a number of the foremost men in the trade during the last few months and printed in the Nursery section of The Review.

In almost every instance the writers have said that they have raised their prices, but not in proportion to the increased cost of production. Undoubtedly, they would have increased the prices more had it not been for the fact that competitors had not.

It was agreed at the last convention of the American Association of Nurserymen that some means should be devised by which prices of nursery stock can be based on the cost of production, instead of being controlled by what a customer is willing to pay. "Get what you can, but sell the stock," has been a policy that has kept the prices down.

There appears to be a chance for the nursery business to come into its own during the next two or three years. The nurseryman who has stock has something that people want and when they want it they will pay for it. This is especially true of fruit trees. Boost the prices; the buyer will pay them—or go without his trees or shrubs.

HELP THE BIG PROBLEM.

"Business in general has been considerably behind previous years," reports Frank A. Weber, secretary and treasurer of the H. J. Weber & Sons Nursery Co., Nursery, Mo. "The great trouble has been a shortage of help to do the planting, it being, in fact, almost impossible to get help of any kind. We have been working with about one-third of our usual force and if it had not been for the excellent fall weather we had, I don't know how we would have been able to keep up with our deliveries. Indications are that there will be a big demand next spring, by which time we hope matters will have adjusted themselves so that people desiring landscape work done will be able to secure sufficient help. The shortage is mainly in the fruit tree end of the business. The demand is exceedingly good and from present indications there will be a shortage next spring. Up to the present time there is still plenty of ornamental stock on the market and those growing ornamentals are hoping that business will pick up by spring. Owing to war conditions there has been little ornamental planting throughout the country and we predict a big demand as soon as conditions become normal again."

THE FRUIT TREE SHORTAGE.

"For the first time in a number of years the demand has exceeded the supply in nearly all lines of fruit trees and, in our opinion, this is only the beginning of a short supply and high prices," say Irving Rouse & Son, Rochester, N. Y.

"Importation of fruit tree stocks has been greatly cut down during the war, due both to a scarcity in France and to a lack of demand in this country. The trade generally has been growing trees and selling them at less than cost for at least three years. The mounting costs of imported stocks, labor and raw material used by nurserymen, in addition to the impossibility of securing a sufficient amount of labor to properly care for the plantings, has resulted in the greatest shortage in the supply of fruit trees known to the trade within the last forty years. Present conditions in France would indicate that, even next year, it will be impossible to secure a sufficient amount of stocks.''

''DEMAND UNPRECEDENTED.''

''There is unquestionably a great shortage of fruit trees at the present time, and it is going to become much more marked during the next two or three years,'' predicts the W. & T. Smith Co., Geneva, N. Y. ''Nurserymen have not been able to buy the planting stocks in France which their normal needs require. This has been true for the last two years, so that the stocks coming to the market now are much reduced. On account of the severe winter of a year ago, a great deal of nursery stock was destroyed. There were also many fruit orchards destroyed by the winter, and the demand for replacement is extensive.

''Taking it altogether, the demand for nursery stock is unprecedented. Unquestionably this situation is going to continue for a number of years, as the supply of seedlings in France is not over half the usual amount. Also, the supply of apple seedlings in this country is much below the average.

''Few peach seedlings were budded last year, and the supply of peach trees next season will be short.''

BOSTON.

The Market.

Prices have softened during the last few days, but there has been little trouble in cleaning up all cut flowers. Roses are decidedly off crop with practically everyone. They have held up remarkably well, with short-stemmed stock making $10 to $12 and other grades up to $30 and $35. Many more flowers could be disposed of were they available. Carnations have dropped considerably, due in large measure to western shipments to a large wholesale house, but they have not gone below $6, and they sold at $8 January 11 and 13. Violets continue scarce at $3. Sweet peas are coming in more freely, but sell at high prices, the best grades making $6. Marguerites are not abundant at $2 to $5. Calendulas of good quality have sold at $8.

Lilies are easier and callas have taken a slight drop. Stevia is practically over. Usually this lasts until February, but the demands for flowers have been so great that the supply was spent much earlier than usual. Only a small quantity of Paper Whites is coming and a few French trumpet daffodils. Small lots of wallflowers, forget-me-nots, mignonette and other flowers are easily cleared. Cattleyas are in good supply, while oncidiums and other orchids are plentiful. Good flowering plants are scarce.

Horticultural Society.

The annual inaugural meeting of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society January 11 attracted a fair attendance. The incoming president, W. C. Endicott, made an excellent address. He urged a vigorous campaign to increase the membership and favored a much larger fee for membership, with a broader range of work than in the past. He did not think that so much energy need be put into exhibitions. There was some discussion following his address. The treasurer's report showed a balance of $2,100 for the year 1918. Reports of the various committees were read and accepted. On the exhibit table were plants of a fine strain of Primula malacoides and Tillandsia Lindenii, from William Martin, gardener to N. T. Kidder.

The opening lecture of the winter course, by Dr. W. W. Tracy, of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., on ''Varietal Adaptation of Culinary Vegetables to Local Conditions,'' drew a good audience.

Cleveland Carnation Convention.

There will be a good delegation from Boston to the Cleveland convention. Among those who have decided to make the trip are President C. S. Strout and wife, S. J. Goddard, George Arnold, Joseph Margolis, E. A. Peirce, W. R. Nicholson, Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Howard and W. W. Hathaway, of Brockton. There will be several exhibitors from here. The party will leave the South Terminal station January 27 at 4:45 p. m., and are due in Cleveland at 10:45 January 28. Others planning to go should notify C. S. Strout, Biddeford, Me., as soon as possible.

Various Notes.

The Horticultural Club of Boston had an interesting meeting at the Parker House, January 8, and had for its guests Prof. L. H. Bailey, of Cornell, who delivered the chief address of the evening; Prof. J. G. Jack, of the Arnold Arboretum, and J. A. Peterson, of Cincinnati, O.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

The List of Chrysanthemums we are offering for the season of 1919 shows many changes from last season and these are, we believe, a great benefit to us and no injury to our trade. We have discarded many varieties and have kept only such as have shown themselves really needed to maintain a balance of color and season. This selection has eliminated many for which we may have calls during the planting season, but in the BARBARA DAVIS. In color, a rich shade of reddish bronze and entirely distinct from any other variety. It was disseminated by us in 1917 and has proved a decided acquisition either as a cut flower or as a pot plant. In habit of growth it is short-jointed and inclined to be dwarf, but makes good stems from early propagation. The flower is reflexed when fully open and is at its best just before maturing.

DECEMBER QUEEN. Bright yellow in color, shading toward bronze-yellow. Flowers very large and full, appearing the latter part of November or early in December.

HELEN LEE. In color a delicate shade of pink. The form of the flower is excellent; incurved type. Strong, sturdy grower, with stem ample to carry the flower. Midseason variety.

MISS ELIZABETH SMITH. An incurved flower, orange-bronze in color. Good stem and foliage. One of the best of the new varieties.

RICHMOND. The phrase, "An early Bonnaffon," describes this variety. A bright golden yellow that has every promise of making a name for itself. Perfect in form and perfect in color.

WHITTIER. Bright, golden yellow in color, coming into bloom just after Richmond and just before Bonnaffon. It is an incurved flower of the Bonnaffon type. It is a promising variety and worthy of cultivation by those who seek to grow better Chrysanthemums.

YELLOW CHARLES RAGER. A sport which originated with us. Light yellow, but a strong, healthy grower. The flowers are well-formed and, like its parent, it is an easy variety to grow.

William R. Nicholson enthuses greatly over Carnation Belle Washburn. He cut over 2,000 blooms for his Christmas trade and many wholesaled at $20 per hundred. His carnations never looked better than this season. William Nicholson, Sr., feels that this year he will be unable to make the trip to Cleveland, much as he would like to do so.
